Democratic Critics Are Increasing.

New Break in Stocks

A renewal of selling yesterday sent stock prices down sharply on the New York exchange. As a whole the railroad and steel shares were hardest hit. United States Steel sold at a new low price for the recent decline of $52.50, closing $4.25 lower than Friday. Details in the financial section.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—With the country experiencing a business recession—already being dubbed the "Roosevelt depression"—the Roosevelt economics, advertised by their author as a guaranteed formula for the "more abundant life," are under increasing fire, even within the administration itself.

Mounting evidence that business is staggering beneath the burden of Roosevelt taxes, of increased production costs resulting from Roosevelt inflationary and labor policies, and of other effects of the Roosevelt economics, has placed the President on the defensive on the eve of the extraordinary session of congress, called to enact further restrictive and collectivist legislation.

Opposition Growing.

As a result of the spreading doubts of the wisdom of the Roosevelt economic panaceas there is increasing opposition to the new experiments the President intends to recommend to congress when it meets Nov. 15. Both his proposed crop control scheme and the bill to fix minimum wages and maximum hours of labor will be subjected to a merciless fire. The President will need all the political shrewdness and resourcefulness for which he is famed to get these measures enacted in any but a face saving form.

For the first time the President has betrayed some doubts himself of the soundness of his economic policies. Following the stock market panic this week and the frankly uttered opinions of the administration leaders, Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the maritime commission and Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, that the Roosevelt taxes are stifling the profit system, the President said yesterday that the treasury is studying revision of the undistributed profits tax.

Experiments Are Assailed.

According to the orthodox economists the stock market decline of the last six months was from the start a barometric warning of the business recession that has now materialized and the business recession is the tangible effect of the Roosevelt economic experiments. As one of them put it, "the Roosevelt chickens are coming home to roost."

By restriction of production, dollar devaluation, gold and silver purchase, and other inflationary policies the President set out to raise prices back to the 1925-'26 level as a means of checking deflation. He set the ball rolling and now he is having a hard time stopping it. Under the NRA, production costs mounted as the result of wage and hour regulation and prices advanced as the result of higher production costs and monopoly manipulations permitted by suspension of the anti-trust laws.

Price Boosts Follow.

Prices went up generally. The manufacturer was compelled to pay more for his raw materials. Labor demanded higher wages and generally got them under the pressure to which employers were subjected by Mr. Roosevelt. To make a profit the manufacturer then boosted the price of his product. For such high prices the President blames "private monopolies and financial oligarchies." But for the private monopoly that is now raising the price of coal under the Guffey act, passed at the instance of John Lewis to obtain higher wages for miners—for this monopoly Mr. Roosevelt himself is responsible.

The President says the courts have weakened the anti-trust laws to such an extent that it is difficult to extirpate monopolies. But he himself signed the act exempting price maintenance on trademarked articles

COST OF RELIEF IN CINCINNATI AT LOW FIGURE

If One in Family Works—No Dole.

BY WILL O'NEIL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O. Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Reliefers in Chicago are well off when compared with those who are receiving the dole here. This predominantly Germanic community feels that relief is a millstone around its neck rather than a situation calling for sentimentality.

This city hasn't any special funds for relief. Under the best conditions—for the reliefers—it will spend less in a year for the dole than Chicago spends in a month. While the small size of the relief load, as compared with that in Chicago, must be taken into account, the expenditure per person on relief here is lower than the rate in Chicago.

Handles Relief of County.

Chicago has more than 6 per cent of its population on the direct relief rolls. In Hamilton county, where Cincinnati is located, less than 3 per cent of the people are on direct relief. By a rather strange setup all of the relief in Hamilton county is administered by this city and the problem is spoken of as the Cincinnati problem.

One powerful factor in keeping the size of the relief roll at a minimum here is the policy of refusing relief in cases where there is an employable person in the household. Leo Lyons, commissioner of Chicago relief, has said that he believes at least half of the cases, or units receiving relief, in Chicago contain some person capable of doing some kind of work.

When Mr. Jones Walks In.

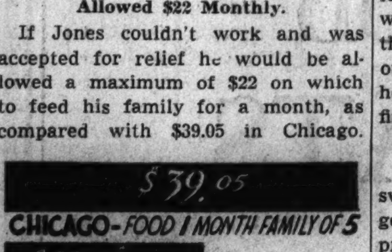
John Jones walks into the relief headquarters here and says that he wants relief for himself, his wife and three children. If Jones is able-bodied his situation has to be pretty desperate before he is considered for even temporary relief. Less than 10 per cent of the 5,000 cases are receiving relief on this basis.

Temporary relief means that Jones would be given a food order for a week's or two weeks' supply of food for his wife and children, but his needs would not be included in the order. When the orders are used up Mr. Jones again has to prove that his need is desperate before he can get any more.

"We don't want relief to become a habit here," said Omar Caswell, the administrator of relief. "We haven't let anybody starve, and we won't, but a man has to do absolutely everything he can for himself before he gets any help."

Allowed $22 Monthly.

If Jones couldn't work and was accepted for relief he would be allowed a maximum of $22 on which to feed his family for a month, as compared with $39.05 in Chicago.



[The Chicago budget is based on the assumption that the children are a son 15 years old, a daughter 12 years old, and a second son, 8 years old. Cincinnati makes no distinction of age or sex in figuring food allowances.]

Cincinnati pays rent for unemployable reliefers when it has to—just in time to keep the reliefer from being evicted. This policy has been carried out in Hamilton county for six months and Caswell does not expect to change it. The maximum amount allowed is $12, but the administration tries to remain $3 below this limit. Rent for unemployables in Chicago was paid until Sept. 15 of this year on a basis of $15 a month for a small family and $25 for a large one.

Points to Small Staf.

At the present time there virtually is no administration of relief in the sense of the large administrative staf in Chicago. Because of his inadequate staf, Caswell admits, there are many receiving relief who shouldn't, and many who need relief who aren't getting it.

Chicago receives $2,000,000 a month from the state for relief purposes. In addition, a special real estate tax of 30 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation gives Chicago nearly $6,000,000 a year more for relief. The

WHY DOESN'T HE ASK MOTHER WHICH SHE CONSIDERS THE MOST GENTLE METHOD?

Nazi Leader Dies in Duel to 'Guard Honor'

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—Capt. Roland Strunk, adventurous world war veteran, Schutz Staffel [Hitler guard] leader, and star war correspondent, was killed in a duel last Monday, it was learned today. He became the first victim of dueling since the Nazis reintroduced it as a means of protecting one's honor.

The name of his opponent was kept secret in the official Nazi report of Strunk's death, but tonight the name of Horst Krutschinna, adjutant of the leader of Germany's National Youth, was mentioned in rumors as that of the man with whom Strunk shot it out "in defense of his family's honor." Authorities refused to confirm the truth of this report.

Strunk Once Sentenced to Die.

Strunk, who was a captain in a swanky Austrian regiment of dragoons in the world war, was taken prisoner by the Russians. He delighted in telling the story of how the Russians sentenced him to death and then changed the sentence into forced labor for life, and how he made three attempts to escape.

After the world war he sought a regular job in the business world, but his love of adventure soon induced him to become a war correspondent in Manchuria, Afghanistan, Morocco, Ethiopia, Spain, and India. He was the star correspondent of the official Nazi news organization, the Eher publishing house.

Strunk's wife was a member of the aristocratic family of Von Dannitz and was considered a woman of striking beauty in the gay Berlin circles to which Strunk belonged. Their marriage was unsuccessful, and recently there was a divorce.

Forced to "Defend Honor."

Friends, therefore, were all the more startled when, in this morning's papers, it was announced:

"Without his fault, Strunk found himself in a position which made it necessary for him, in accordance with his code of honor, to stand up to the insulter of his and his family's honor with weapon in hand. In defense of his and his family's honor Strunk was the victim of a duel which was deemed necessary for him."

The duel was fought in the shooting club in Wannsee. Strunk was wounded fatally when he and his opponent exchanged second pistol shots. Before the news of the duel was published a full report was sent to Reichsfuehrer Hitler. It is understood that the Fuehrer ordered a new study of German dueling laws and of the possibility of protecting the lives of duelists.

Under the rules prevailing in the Nazi organization Strunk had informed the court of honor of the Schutz Staffel of the planned duel. The court makes the final decision on whether members of the Nazi party may engage in a duel to protect their honor.

WOMEN PROTEST USE OF SAFETY LIGHTS AS MARRING TO MAKEUP

Chicopee, Mass., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Chicopee women are protesting against sodium lights installed in residential streets, saying the orange glow annuls all the beauty effects they obtain from rouge and lipstick and the lights leave them looking chalky and deathlike.

However, the accident rate has been lowered materially since the lights were installed and city officials have decided to ignore the protests, taking the view it is better to merely look dead.

Eagle Tries to Carry Off Girl, 13, from Cotton Field

Austin, Tex., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—An eagle of enormous size today attacked a Negro girl, 13 years old, as she was picking cotton in the Jarrett community, 40 miles north of here. The bird fastened its claws in the girl's body and attempted to carry her off. Her screams brought an adult picker to her rescue, but the eagle kept up the fight until a gun was brought and it was killed. The bird had a wing spread of 6 ft. 10 inches.

LIVERPOOL, England, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Horace E. Smith of Haverford, Pa., a retired banker, embarked on the liner Scythia today for his 102d ocean crossing because the only place he can get a good night's sleep is on a ship. Smith, who is 71 years of age, said he could sleep only one or two hours at home, but that he could sleep round the clock at sea.

Mystery Insect Spins Webs All Over Randolph, Utah

Randolph, Utah, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Residents of this village awakened today to find steeples, homes, wires and trees festooned with thousands of silky cobwebs in skeins from 75 to 100 feet. Dan Ingraham, county farm agent, said the webs were spun "by some type of insect."

Italians Meet Greek Envoy in Station Mixup

Chicago was host yesterday to the envoys from Italy and Greece whose arrival was the occasion of a mixup in which the welcoming delegation of Italians met Dr. Demetrios Sicilianos, the Greek minister, instead of Ambassador Fulvio Suvich of Italy.

Dr. Sicilianos arrived at the Grand Central station, instead of the Union station where, by some misunderstanding, a committee was awaiting him. And Ambassador Suvich, expected at the Grand Central, came in at the Union station. But the committees, changing stations hastily, were able to carry out the respective welcomes about as they had been planned.

Hours in City Crowded.

Signor Suvich, with his wife, Donna Mathilde di Suvich, will remain here through tomorrow, filling a complete schedule aimed to acquaint him with the Italian-American colony and also the civic and social life of Chicago. After his arrival yesterday the envoy laid one wreath on the Golden Book, a roster of the Cook county dead in the world war, at the Chicago Historical society, and another at the statue of Abraham Lincoln across the driveway in Lincoln park. Then he attended a tea at the Blackstone hotel.

Last night he and Donna Matilde were guests of Ira Nelson Morris at a dinner at the Lake Shore Drive hotel and later attended a ball at the Casino club, given by the Italy America society. In the receiving line were Robert H. McCormick, president of the society; Mr. and Mrs. Orville J. Taylor, Dr. Franco Fontana, Italian consul general; Mr. and Mrs. John F. Cuneo, Mr. Morris, and Dr. Carl Davis.

Addresses Convention Tonight.

This afternoon the envoy will attend a reception at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium, where Paul V. Colianni, trustee of the sanitary district, will be chairman, and tonight he will address the national convention of the Order of Sons of Italy at the Medinah club. The ambassador and his wife will leave for St. Louis after a dinner in the Palmer house tomorrow night.

Interviewed at the Drake hotel, where he is staying, Ambassador Suvich declared that Chicago seems to him to be the characteristic American city. Without intending his remarks about other cities to be critical, he said, he found New York

Torture Rapist Gets Sentence of 199 Years

After deliberating less than half an hour a jury in the Criminal court of Chief Justice Cornelius J. Harrington yesterday found Robert Conroy, an ex-convict, guilty of rape and fixed his punishment at 199 years in prison. This penalty is the severest permitted by the Illinois law.

Robert Conroy.

Testimony at the trial showed that Conroy climbed into the room of Miss Anna Brasy, 38 year old choir singer, at 4752 Lincoln avenue and not only raped her, but tortured her with a knife, a pair of shears, and the sharp hook of a clothes hanger after robbing her of $55.

Imposes Sentence Speedily.

Judge Harrington immediately overruled a plea for a new trial and pronounced sentence on the criminal.

"In all my life," said the judge, "I have never heard of a case so atrocious. It surpasses in viciousness and brutality anything ever heard before in this court. In my judgment this defendant has had a fair trial. It is fortunate for him that the Illinois law does not permit the infliction of the death penalty for rape."

The jurors seemed to be of the same mind. Their first ballot found them agreed as to Conroy's guilt and their discussion of the punishment took only a few minutes.

Rapist Near Collapse.

Conroy, who is 24 years old, short of stature, thin and pimply of face, was near a collapse as sentence was pronounced. Asked by the judge if he desired to say anything he mumbled that he wished a new trial so he could produce additional witnesses.

"My brother and his wife are the cause of all this," he added. "They hate me."

This reference was, apparently, to the circumstances of his arrest. His brother, James, and James' wife, Frances, have been at odds with Conroy since all three went to prison several years ago for forgery. The rapist has maintained that they put the police on his trail.

Leaves Knife Behind.

The rape took place the night of Nov. 21, 1936. At that time Conroy was working in a vegetable market, and one of the principal exhibits in the evidence was the knife which he left behind after he had tortured Miss Brasy with it.

The victim's mother, in September, received a telephone call in which she was informed that the attacker could be found at a certain address. Police watched the house, but failed to make an arrest. In a later call the informant said that the rapist could be seized at the Milwaukee avenue car line terminus.

He was arrested there five weeks ago. At the detective bureau he read

BOTH TO BUILD 'EMPIRES'; DEFY POWERS TO ACT

Nazis Win 'Right' to Southeast Europe.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Premier Mussolini of Italy went home with something to show for his recent five day visit to Nazi Germany, even though he did not induce Reichsfuehrer Hitler to dispatch more troops and war material to Spain. Furthermore, Hitler, the host, gained something for his hospitality.

This information has leaked through to Paris as the tale of what went on in the historic meeting of the dictators oozes out from high Nazi circles.

Mussolini gained the right to order from the famous Krupp arms works at Essen some new long range guns said to be capable of firing from Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, to Gibraltar, it was reported. Il Duce also was allowed to order armor plate for a new warship, despite the fact that the Germans admitted Mussolini could not pay in cash.

[Dispatches from London last August revealed that Great Britain had installed new artillery at Gibraltar of "exceptionally superior caliber and range." The British also have installed anti-aircraft guns and airplane detectors, and admirals in London were quoted as saying Gibraltar was capable of withstanding any aerial or gun siege, or both.]

Hitler Wins "Free Hand."

Hitler's acquisition in the exchange was Mussolini's promise to give Germany a free hand in southeastern Europe to secure what foodstuffs and trade it needs from there.

Two facts which emerged from the conversations are that Mussolini is determined to create his empire in the Mediterranean and that Hitler intends to control southeastern Europe—Germany's "hinterland." The dictators are said to have agreed that, working together, they can bluff other nations into letting them get what they want.

Months ago Italy conceded, in theory, Germany's "sphere of influence" in southeastern Europe. German delegations, however, seemed always to find that the Italians had got into the nations of this area first. During his Berlin visit Mussolini, it is understood, promised that the Italians will be told the Germans are to be allowed to get what they want in southeastern Europe.

Hitler Expects Raw Material.

The Nazis feel that, with the aid of propaganda, a political understanding between Germany and the nations of this section can be made once the trade there is controled.

Mussolini is expected, furthermore, to aid Germany in securing needed raw materials from Spain. Hitler dodged the issue, it was reported, when Mussolini pressed for more German men and materials for the war in Spain. The reason was that the German army disapproved and Hitler did not choose to cross his fighting forces.

Of course, if Italy should allow the new long range guns or armor plate to get into Spanish rebel hands, that would be none of Germany's affair. Mussolini emphasized his desire for quick delivery of the guns, it was learned, and they are expected to be ready in about three months.

Believe War Can Be Avoided.

After being admitted to parts of the huge Krupp plant, where secret work was in progress, and after seeing German troops in maneuvers, the Italian premier is said to be convinced that Germany's armament is directed against England. He was represented as believing also that Krupp can produce the arms which Italy would need should there be a war with England.

Both Hitler and Mussolini are said to believe that war is avoidable. The "sputtering noodle" states—as they dubbed the United States, England, and France—lack backbone and will let the authoritarian régimes have what they want, the dictators are said to believe.

The next three months, or until the new guns and other equipment can be delivered, promise to be relatively quiet, Hitler and Mussolini agreed. It was said that there should be no "undue excitement of any kind." There is no need for drastic action since time, they feel, is working for them.

Hitler considers his soundest policy is to sit tight. His aids, he believes, will develop a plan for feeding the German nation until the next harvest, with pork, lard, and grain coming from southeastern Europe if the Italians stay out of that market, as promised.

At the present time, moreover, there is in Germany an acute lack of iron and steel. Garage men in Germany answer despairingly when asked for a simple steel bolt. Spare parts for a car can be had only after weeks of rummaging around.

This again indicates how time is needed, for to run a motorized army under such conditions would present no end of grief. Hitler hopes that this winter acceptable iron and steel will be developed from Germany's low grade ore.

Two Dangerous Possibilities.

Two potentially dangerous conditions could arise in Europe, however. One would be that the famine in eastern Poland should grow worse. The other, that France should open its Pyrenees border with Spain. Under one or both circumstances Nazi Germany might elect to take "action."

Certain aristocrats in Poland are said to favor coöperation with the Nazis to the extent of allowing them to seize the Polish corridor. In return, under this reported idea, Germany would aid them in establishing their own brand of Fascism in Poland and help them to bite off a piece of Lithuania, including a good outlet to the Baltic.

Should France open its frontier to aid the Spanish loyalists against the rebels, Hitler might feel called upon to take steps in view of his statement at the Nuremberg Nazi congress that he will not tolerate a "communist" Spain. Opening of the French frontier might mean a victory for the Valencia government.

May Permit "Neutral" Régime.

Latest reports from authoritative sources in Berlin, however, indicate that Hitler would not even then make war on France. Instead he would bend his efforts toward the establishment of a "neutral" government in Spain. Such a régime is said to have been discussed with the highest Nazis by British representatives.

Since the lack of food in Germany will not be acute until January, the immediate future promises to require in Germany just enough "fireworks" to keep the German people stirred up, but not overly agitated, it is asserted.

Pacifist Beats Churchill in Glasgow U. Election

GLASGOW, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Canon Hugh Richard Sheppard tonight was elected lord rector of Glasgow university, defeating three other candidates, including Winston Churchill. Election of Canon Sheppard, a prominent pacifist, who has criticized other churchmen's views on armaments and war, was interpreted as a condemnation of the government's defense policy. Sheppard polled 538 votes and the conservative Churchill got 281.

BRITISH FIGHT TO BALK CRACKUP OF 'ARLEY ON SPAIN

Delay Committee Meeting to Gain Time.

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.—In an effort to save the policy of nonintervention at least one more day, the British tonight postponed from Monday to Tuesday the next meeting of the nine power subcommittee of the international committee for nonintervention in the Spanish civil war.

This was the immediate reaction to Premier Mussolini's warning from Rome today that Italy will make no further concession in negotiations for getting foreign volunteers out of Spain. The warning from Rome was in the form of an official news agency statement that "to believe Italy can make further concessions is absurd."

[An official communique in Rome said Italian ambassadors to Paris and London had been ordered to tell France and Britain that Italy has only 40,000 volunteers in Spain. Any reports to the contrary are "lies," the statement added.]

The reason given for the postponement of the subcommittee meeting was that it will allow the governments one more day to consider the situation—meaning to dicker behind the scenes in an effort to save the committee from dissolution.

Eden Changes His Mind.

Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, changed his mind and will preside again Tuesday, it was said, in hopes that his personal influence may save the day. It had been announced that he had turned over the chair again to the earl of Plymouth, official chairman.

Whatever is done, little is expected to be gained by the postponement since Italy and Russia both appear adamant.

Two major points still remain for the subcommittee to face Tuesday:

FIRST—Russia has warned it will not agree to discuss belligerent rights for Gen. Francisco Franco, Spanish rebel chief, until all foreign volunteers are out of Spain.

SECOND—Italy, after agreeing to take part in sending committees to Spain to report on the number of foreign troops fighting there, threw a wrench in the works yesterday when she announced she would not promise to accept the report of the committees. Italy also demanded discussion of belligerent rights after the "token" withdrawal of a small number of troops from each side in Spain.

Forced to Face Issue.

Though it merely backed up the general understanding here that Italy is stalling for time and does not intend to allow Gen. Franco to lose, whatever happens, this announcement forced the nonintervention committee to face the situation.

The British government's main concern is to keep the negotiations going whether they accomplish anything or not. That, they believe, will at least prevent a general war. The Italians, however, are believed ready to go to any length—possibly even war, though that extreme is not expected to be reached—to keep the committee from accomplishing its task.

Fear France Will Act.

The British still are afraid the French may lose patience and open their frontier to loyalist Spain, which probably would mean the end of all possibility of striking a bargain with Mussolini.

A victory for Gen. Franco in Spain would not displease the British. Whatever the consequences were in the end, it would solve the present crisis. Every day that passes without a general war means just that much more strength for the British, they believe. They are confident they are slowly overhauling the dictator powers in the arms race.

Joseph Dallet Jr.

New York, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Joseph Dallett Jr., 30 years old, of Youngstown, O., was reported "killed in action in Spain" in a cablegram received today by the friends of the Abraham Lincoln brigade headquarters.

The message did not specify when or exactly where Dallet met death.

Dallet's parents live in Woodmere, Long Island, N. Y. He once was a candidate for mayor of Youngstown on the communist ticket and was his party's unsuccessful nominee for congress in the 1936 election.

DISCUSS U. S. POLICY

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 23.—William C. Bullitt, United States ambassador to France, and Yvon Delbos, French foreign minister, today discussed the possibilities and limitations of American coöperation with European democracies to avert war.

It was the first visit Bullitt had paid to the Quai d'Orsay since his return last week, and political quarters attached great importance to this conversation, as Bullitt was able to communicate President Roosevelt's latest views.

The coördination of the French and American policy at the pending Brussels, Belgium, conference of signatories of the nine power treaty occupied a good deal of this conversation, but the Mediterranean crisis was not neglected. It is believed safe to say that Delbos stressed France's determination to take adequate steps to protect her colonial communications, especially in the Mediterranean, before it is too late. There now is a powerful majority in the cabinet in favor of a show of force.

3 HURT IN CRASH.

Bucyrus, O., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Samuel Green, his sister-in-law, Mrs. Rose Kalonik, both of Chicago, and her brother, Aaron I. Helman of Detroit, Mich., were injured today. Their automobile struck a pole in West Bucyrus.

SPANISH MEN WHO FLED TO FRANCE ARE ORDERED TO GET OUT

BIARRITZ, France, Oct. 23.—(AP)—French authorities tonight notified Spanish men between the ages of 18 and 48 who have resided in France since the start of the civil war that they must leave the country.

The action, ordered by the ministry of interior, expanded a previous decision that all without resources must leave.

[The French government on Sept. 30 decided to repatriate nearly 100,000 Spaniards who had fled to France since the outbreak of the Spanish civil conflict.]

Women and children were exempted in the new ruling but the men were ordered to leave regardless of whether they are able to support themselves. They will be permitted to choose between insurgent and government Spain. Observers said they expected many, however, would go to Belgium.

IDENTIFIED CRASH VICTIMS.

Lincoln, Ill., Oct. 23.—(AP)—A St. Louis man and a one year old child, killed in an automobile collision near here, were identified by Coroner E. C. Hoff today as Frank Benfoniti, 45, and Thomas Bartoletta.

FRANCO STARTS ARMY EAST FOR 'DECISIVE' DRIVE

Fighting Quickens Along Many Fronts.

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco today swung his strengthened army east to the Aragon front, next major theater of Spain's civil war, for what his aids said would be "the decisive offensive of the war."

Behind him Franco left a strong force of Navarrese troops to police newly conquered areas of the northwest.

Tens of thousands of war-weary Asturians surrendered arms to the insurgents following the fall of Gijon Thursday, military dispatches said, but the interest of Franco's followers already had shifted to the Aragon front.

Government dispatches announced the Madrid-Valencia loyalist régime was prepared to block the insurgents on all sectors of the 300 mile line from the French frontier south to Teruel, east of Madrid.

Heavy Losses Admitted.

Veteran Moorish rebel troops began operations yesterday southeast of Jaca, near the frontier. Insurgent dispatches from Saragossa said that in a single day-long battle the insurgents regained almost all the territory won by the government in recent weeks. They reported finding 861 government dead at the end of the battle and admitted their own losses were heavy.

Dispatches from Salamanca, seat of Franco's régime, said opinion was divided as to whether the new offensive would center in the Teruel sector where the insurgents might try to strike toward Valencia, or Saragossa, from which a drive would start against Catalonia.

Government forces appeared to be basing their defense plans on a highly mobile army behind the Aragon lines capable of reënforcing any front and incorporating itself with defense troops in whatever sector Franco chooses.

Loyalists Claim Key Points.

The government claimed to hold the best defense positions at key points, particularly Saragossa, Belchite, and Teruel, where they were said to be still entrenched.

Renewed pressure was felt on numerous fronts after the fall of Gijon, last loyalist stronghold in the northwest, government reports indicated. Fighting was particularly severe in the Casa de Campo sector, west of Madrid, where machine guns and bombs kept up a twenty-four hour din.

The loyalists tonight announced the capture of 100 houses in the bitterly fought Usera section of Madrid's southern outskirts.

The escape of about 12,000 Asturian troops from the northern sector was reported in a government communique.

marked with evidences of European culture and San Francisco with touches of oriental culture, whereas Chicago is typically American.

Launching into a defense of Italian Fascism, the ambassador said that his duty in America was to promote a better understanding between the American and Italian peoples.

"Some persons have the wrong impressions," he continued. "Perhaps a dictatorship such as we have in Italy would not be fit for America, but if you think that the administration is not popular you are wrong. In no other country on earth is the attachment of the people for their government so strong; the régime is beloved."

Eyes on Mediterranean.

Asked concerning the Italian intervention in the Spanish civil war, the ambassador declared that Italy's only interest in Spain was "not to see another bolshevist government in the Mediterranean."

Dr. Sicilianos will be the principal speaker tonight at a meeting of citizens of Greek descent in the Medinah temple. The Most Rev. Archbishop Athenagoras of the Greek Orthodox church, who also arrived from New York yesterday, officiated at services last night in Holy Trinity church, 1101 South Peoria street, and will also attend the meeting at the Medinah temple tonight.

100,000 FASCISTS READY TO STAGE 'MARCH ON ROME'

ROME, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Nearly 100,000 Fascist leaders and minor chieftains will begin to "march" on Rome Monday night for a celebration Thursday of the 15th anniversary of the rise to power of Benito Mussolini.

Their "march"—by truck and train—will commemorate the Fascist march on Rome Oct. 28, 1922, which brought Il Duce to the premiership.

Three of the four who led the march fifteen years ago will be present Thursday. They are Marshal Italo Malbo, governor of Libya; Marshal Emilio de Bono, conqueror of Adua, and Count de Vecchi di Val Cismon, governor of the Dodecanese Islands. The fourth, Michele Bianchi, is dead. Mussolini did not lead the march. He came to Rome—and power—on Oct. 29 by train at the summons of King Victor Emmanuel, to halt the threat of civil war.

WOMAN'S PLEA HALTS UNSEXING OF GIRL INMATES

Curb Sterilization in Kansas Reformatory.

Topeka, Kas., Oct. 23.—[U. P.]—The state board of administration, after an investigation of sterilization of many young girls at the State Industrial school at Beloit, today announced there would be no more group operations at the institution except under the most extraordinary emergency.

Mrs. Kathryn McCarthy.

Dr. Leo V. Turgeon, a member of the board of administration, said that sterilizations, except under unusual circumstances, also would be barred at the boys' industrial school at Topeka and the reformatory at Hutchinson.

This policy was determined after Mrs. Kathryn O'Laughlin McCarthy, a former congresswoman from Hays, charged in a speech before the Democratic club women at Wichita that wholesale sterilization operations had been performed at the girls' school at Beloit.

62 Already Sterilized.

She said records at the institution showed that 62 of the 148 inmates had been sterilized and 22 more were scheduled for the same treatment when Gov. Walter A. Huxman's administration took office.

The state board of administration announced today that at the Beloit institution twenty sterilization operations were ordered on Aug. 12, 1935, twenty-three on Dec. 9, 1935, and thirty-six on March 7, 1936. The records showed that of this number, objections from individuals or relatives were entered in but ten cases.

Board's Policy Stands.

Turgeon said the basic policy of the board in regard to sterilization would not be changed. A legislative act in 1917 authorized sterilization of inmates in cases recommended by physicians and not opposed by relatives of the patients. Prior to that, sterilization operations had been performed in Kansas correctional institutions on recommendation of physicians in cases of certain types of insane patients.

FRANCE RUSHES TROOPS TO HALT MOROCCAN RIOT

Punishes Leaders of Knife and Gun Attack.

CASALANCA, French Morocco, Oct. 23.—(AP)—The French colonial forces were reinforced hurriedly tonight to guard against native agitation after troops put down a riot of Moroccan nationalists in the strategic northern town of Khemisset.

Military suppression of rioters and prison sentences for the leaders stirred Moslem unrest along the vital line from Rabat and Meknes to Fez, beneath the towering middle Atlas mountains.

Resident General Aguste Nogues, veteran of Abd-El Krim's 1925 Riff rebellion, rushed to Khemisset where planes and troops maintained patrol, while other reinforcements were sent to neighboring villages.

Arabs Attack Barricades.

Khemisset, where fighting broke out last nigh: following fiery speeches by nationalist orators, has long been known as a center of nationalism, with Arab shepherds greatly outnumbering the European and Jewish population.

Fighting reached a peak when more than 1,000 Arabs, armed with knives and guns, attacked barricades erected around government buildings. Troops were rushed from Rabat, and until they arrived ten planes flew low over the city as a warning to the rioters.

Leaders were swiftly sentenced to from 10 days to a year in prison and rushed to Rabat.

Trouble in Morocco

Arrow points to Khemisset, French Morocco, scene of Arab disorders which resulted in hurried reinforcement of colonial troops. Soldiers were dispatched to other trouble spots also.

FRANCE FEARS JAP GRAB

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 23.—THE TRIBUNE learned today from a source close to the cabinet that the government is so concerned over Japanese aggression and so afraid that Indo-China ultimately will suffer the same fate as China that Colonial Minister Marius Moutet has asked a huge fund for dispatching troops to the colony. It was impossible to get official confirmation of the report immediately.

It was said Moutet suggested that $10,000,000 be appropriated. Furthermore, France was reported considering closing the frontier of Indo-China bordering China.

These proposals were said to be among those discussed at a highly important four hour meeting of certain cabinet members last night which was called to discuss the defense of the French colonies and frontiers in view of the threat to them from aggressor nations.

Inspection Trip Planned.

Edouard Daladier, minister of national defense, declared he was planning an inspection trip to Tunisia and Algeria, where steps were reported to have been taken for reenforcing defenses.

Further evidence of France's grave preoccupation with the threats to her colonies was found in plans just made public for large scale air maneuvers in Africa and Indo-China. The maneuvers, which were described as "not a promenade but a military exercise of great importance," will consist of cruises of three air detachments totaling more than 100 planes to Indo China, Madagascar, and French East Africa.

Planes to Hop Wednesday.

Five Farman quadrimotors will hop off next Wednesday from the Istres air field for Tunis, Tunisia, and Bengazi, Cirenaica, both in North Africa; Cairo, Egypt; Damascus, Syria, and Indo-China. The same five Amiot bimotored planes will hop off for the island of Madagascar, a French colony in the Indian ocean east of Africa. This group will separate from the Indo-China group at Tunis.

Two groups of bimotored bombers will leave Istres Nov. 9. There will be thirty in each group, of Bloch and Amiot makes. They will take separate routes to East Africa, where they will combine with land forces in important maneuvers. The same date, forty-five Potez and Bloch bimotored bombers will leave Istres for Tunis, where they will combine with the local air forces and then maneuver all over North Africa.

Sleeping Man Burns to Death in Kensington Home

Patrick Mahin, 26 years old, 208 East 136th place, Kensington, was fatally burned last night by fire which swept his bedroom while he was sleeping. His wife and two small children were away at the time. Firemen found Mahin in his room, and hurried him to the Roseland Community hospital, but he was already dead. The fire is believed to have started from a stove. Mahin was a welder.

CHINESE LINES AT SHANGHAI BREAK, JAPANESE CLAIM

Nipponese Report Advance Along Entire Front.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 24 [Sunday].—A Japanese statement today announced that Chinese forces were retreating along the entire Shanghai front.

The announcement said the Japanese were advancing toward Soochow creek, which flows along the northwestern boundary of the international settlement, separates that area from Chapei, the Chinese area, and cuts through the settlement's north central part to empty into the Whangpoo river.

The statement was issued by the Japanese third fleet on the fourth day of the great battle north of Shanghai.

The Japanese report drew a crisp comment of "nonsense" from a Chinese spokesman, who said the Chinese were holding their own and advancing. British and American troops in the international settlement reported they saw no signs of the Chinese withdrawing from Chapei.

Fight on 25 Mile Front.

Earlier, through a maze of creeks and canals, Chinese and Japanese armies fought desperately, the Japanese seeking to smash the twenty-five mile front northwest of this city, the Chinese striving to hold the lines by which they maintain contact with Shanghai.

The Chinese hold appeared to be unshaken at least in Chapei, where fighting has continued unceasingly since Thursday.

Twelve miles to the northwest the battle surged about Tazang, the key-point in the Chinese defenses, with the roar clearly audible in Shanghai.

In North China Chinese dispatches reported the departure of several trainloads of Japanese troops from Tientsin, headed eastward toward the coast, ostensibly "going home after the victory." Chinese said these forces, withdrawn from Hopei province fronts, actually would be sent to Tsingtao, chief port of Shantung province.

One Japanese column already has invaded Shantung, advancing from the north along the Tientsin-Pukow railway to a point 30 miles north of Tsinan, the provincial capital.

A Japanese army spokesman in Peiping said Japanese forces in Shansi province, southwest of Peiping, "very soon" would begin a major drive to capture Taiyuanfu, provincial capital.

On the front north of Shanghai the battle lines swayed back and forth through clusters of thatched farm villages—specks on a military map—from which the terror stricken natives had fled, driving their oxen and pigs before them.

Details of the fighting did not matter, a Japanese spokesman said, because the Japanese army was slowly but surely pushing the Chinese back and achieving their general objectives. Heavy losses were admitted by both sides.

In mid-afternoon yesterday, in the 70th hour of the furious battle, a Chinese spokesman said the threat to Tazang, which is the back door to the Chinese positions in Chapei, had been checked and the Japanese forces halted a mile and a quarter east of the town.

Chinese Confident of Victory.

The center of the fighting abruptly shifted northwest toward Kwangfu, where heavy Japanese forces apparently were attempting to smash the Chinese lines and capture Nanziang, China's powerful "winter line."

Japanese troops were reported to have smashed their way to within four miles of this objective. Barbed wire entaglements along the creeks and irrigation ditches were so strong, however, that military observers considered Nanziang in no danger.

A Chinese spokesman asserted "the worst is now over and we are confident of holding out indefintly in Chapei."

Fight Hand to Hand.

While Japanese planes dropped bombs on the stubborn defenders in Chapei, the opposed armies battled hand-to-hand through the native city's narrow, winding streets, and crooked alleys. Spirited engagements were fought at Eight Character bridge and Rokusan gardens, once a favorite meeting place for foreigners.

Chinese authorities placed Japanese casualties on the Shanghai front at 65,000, of which 24,200 were killed.

A Japanese naval spokesman announced that the Nanking airdrome had been bombed and one Chinese plane destroyed. He also asserted the strategic railway points of Hangchow, Soochow, and Wushih had been bombed and considerable damage caused.

JEAN BATTEN.

NAPLES, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Jean Batten, New Zealand woman flyer attempting to better the solo record from Australia to London, arrived here today and decided to remain for "a good sleep." She landed with plenty of time to spend the night and still better the present mark of six days ten hours and fifty-five minutes. She said she would make the final 1,000 miles to London tomorrow in a single hop.

PREMIER LYONS BEATS LABOR IN AUSTRALIAN VOTE

Retains Big Majority in Lower House.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 24.—[Sunday.]—(AP)—Prime Minister Joseph A. Lyons' coalition government retained its majority in the house of representatives today on the basis of the first day's tabulation of Australia's election for the federal parliament.

The combined United Australian and United Country parties, which support the present government, took 44 seats. The Labor opposition gained only two for a total of 30.

It was believed that the government's top-heavy majority in the upper house, or senate, also was safe. Half the senate's 36 seats were contested. Labor held only three seats in the old senate.

Both Sides Urge Armaments.

Prime Minister Lyons campaigned with a "tune in with England" slogan, urging close coöperation with Great Britain and a bigger navy for Australia. He attacked Labor's "isolationist" defense policy. The government pledged that if it were upheld it would initiate immediately a comprehensive scheme for immigration to fill some of Australia's open spaces.

Labor candidates demanded a bigger air force and accused the government of making secret conscription commitments to Great Britain, a charge vigorously denied by the government.

Prime Minister Hard Pressed.

Lyons declared that if the "false issue" of conscription had not been raised, the government's position would have been even stronger. The prime minister himself was hard pressed in his constituency and his defense minister, Sir Archdale Parkhill, was running slightly behind an independent opponent.

James Scullin, former Labor prime minister, asserted he still was hopeful for a Labor victory, claiming the aggregate vote figures showed a definite swing toward Labor.

CHINESE UNIVERSITY IS MOVED BECAUSE OF JAP AIR BOMBINGS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Oct. 23.—Dr. W. B. Nance of the Southern Methodist mission of Nashville, Tenn., today announced the removal of Soochow university from Soochow to the inland town of Huchow. The action was taken because of continuous Japanese air bombing. Dr. Nance is the American president of Soochow university. Dr. Y. C. Yang, the Chinese president of the university, will assume charge at Huchow.

Dr. Nance and his son, Dana W. Nance, who is a graduate of Vanderbilt university, returned from Soochow today. They said the Japanese bombed Soochow thirteen times yesterday and that six heavy bombs fell alongside the wall surrounding the university campus. No one was injured.

Dr. Nance said nine hospitals in Soochow are treating more than 4,000 wounded Chinese soldiers daily. A Chinese-American committee which is receiving United States Red Cross funds is caring for between 100,000 and 250,000 Chinese refugees who pass through the city daily from Shanghai and other war zones.

FATHER'S WAGON KILLS SON.

Waukesha, Wis., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—His skull crushed by the wheels of a wagon driven by his father, Thomas Meisner, 3 years old, of rural route 1, Pewaukee, died at the Municipal hospital here today.

Youth Surrenders After Fracturing Father's Skull

George Deyo, 25 years old, brought his mother, Mrs. Mabel Deyo, to the North Damen avenue police station last night and told Desk Sergeant Robert Blum he believed he had just killed his father. "He was mistreating my mother," Deyo said. "Then he attacked me with a chair and I hit him with a hammer." Police went to the home and found George Deyo, 62 years old, unconscious from a skull fracture.

Brazil Closes All Secret Lodges; Tightens Rule

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 23.—(AP)—All secret societies, including Masonic lodges, were ordered closed provisionally tonight as a further step in the enforcement of Brazil's state of war.

[President Getulio Vargas on Oct. 2 declared Brazil in a state of war for ninety days to combat the spread of communism.]

HOTEL EXECUTIVE KILLS SELF; LOVE DISCORD BLAMED

Boyd Aszling, 30 years old, assistant manager of the Hotel La Salle, shot and killed himself in a room on the ninth floor of the hotel last night, apparently because of domestic troubles. A pistol was found beside his body.

Nearby was a telegram, dated yesterday and signed "Louise," which said: "Darling Boyd, I don't see how I can get along without you." Underneath the message Aszling had written: "Louise, I love you."

Willard Curtis, another assistant manager of the hotel, said Aszling told him that his wife, Clara, and an attorney called at the hotel yesterday to confer on a divorce. They formerly lived at 2322 Commonwealth avenue. Aszling had been employed at the La Salle for a month. For five years he worked at the Hotel Sherman as office manager.

CINCINNATI HAS RELIEF RATE LESS THAN CHICAGO'S

Writer Finds Sentiment Doesn't Enter Problem.

state of Ohio hasn't given any community in the state a nickel for relief purposes for the last six months and Cincinnati has no special relief taxes of its own.

Until the fifteenth of this month, Hamilton county relief was administered by the county. When Cincinnati took over the administration last week, the city council dug into the city's general pocketbook for $55,000 with which to run relief for the rest of the month.

Voters to Decide Nov. 2.

The voters of Hamilton county are being asked to approve a special relief levy of 10 cents a hundred [as compared with the 30 cent tax on real estate in Chicago] at the Nov. 2 election. This tax, if passed, would provide an estimated $800,000 for relief in 1938 and the city officials hope that the state legislature will be called into session after the election to match this amount.

Col. O. O. Sherrill, the city manager under Cincinnati's charter form of government, is confident that the levy will be passed and that the state will contribute a like amount. In downtown offices, however, the opinion was heard that the fight will be a close one "because the property owners are tired of this relief business."

"We'll have to find money somewhere to run things for the rest of this year," Col. Sherrill said. "We can't borrow for the purpose and we can't levy any tax without permission from the people. If the levy passes we may be able to borrow against that for the last six weeks of the year."

Chest Handles Finances.

All of the finances for the private social agencies in the city are administered through the Community Chest, which is headed by C. M. Bookman.

"The system in use here of cutting all of the employables off the rolls is a vicious way to do things, but it seems to have worked," Bookman said. "What will happen this winter nobody knows."

Bookman said that case workers drawn from the private agencies soon will check the rolls of the public relief administration to clean out the deadwood and open up places for those in need.

Because they are not receiving money from the state and cannot levy special taxes of their own, most of the other communities in the state also are hard pressed for a solution to the relief problem. Cleveland and Akron recently voted down levies of the type which is being requested here.

Cincinnati does have a plan which leaders in the community hope may, in the distant future, help to solve the problem of what to do with employable persons seeking relief. The details of this plan wil be discussed in a later article.

WARNS OF FAKE SOLICITORS FOR MAYOR'S FUND

A warning against swindlers representing themselves as solicitors for Chicago's Own Christmas Benefit, which is sponsored by Mayor Kelly, was issued yesterday by Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes. The drive for funds for the benefit is under way and $125,000 already has been donated.

"Chiselers have promised to fix taxes, have business men taken off jury lists, and to have favors granted by the sherif's office," said Mr. Hodes. "In other instances grocers have been induced to give canned goods and other foodstuffs to the fake solicitors.

"Of course, no promises have been made by the authorized solicitors, who carry proper credentials and show them without being asked. The benefit fund does not accept gifts of food. We should like to recommend that donations be sent in checks made out to Col. A. A. Sprague, treasurer."

COMMUNITY FUND PLEDGES EXCEED MILLION DOLLARS

Record for Two Weeks Tops 1936 Figure.

After two weeks of solicitation the community fund pledges totaled $1,051,411, approximately 30 per cent of the $3,550,000 objective of the campaign.

"The first million has been raised in a shorter time this year than last," said Gen. Robert E. Wood, campaign chairman yesterday. "At the corresponding date in 1936 the total was slightly over $900,000.

"In another respect, too, we are considerably further in advance of last year. That is the presentation of the apppeal to employé groups. To date there have been more than 600,000 employés reached with full information regarding the purposes of the campaign. A most vital part of our campaign is to convey to the entire population a clear conception of what the fund really does for the community."

The money raised will be distributed among 177 major organized social and welfare agencies of all denominations, as well as those of non-sectarian character. It will be used in fields of charity and philanthropy not reached by public funds raised by taxation for relief. These include betterment of youth and rehabilitation of families.

TUBERCULOSIS TOLL INCREASES IN 1936 BY 1,500 OVER 1935

New York, Oct. 23.—(AP)—The white plague is spreading again in the United States.

After being beaten steadily back for ten years, the germs of tuberculosis increased their toll in 1936, killing almost 1,500 persons more than in 1935. The 1936 toll was 70,907; 1935's, 69,741.

The resurgence of the disease was disclosed today in the annual report of the National Tuberculosis association, which explained it as "probably due" to the "cumulative effects" of the depression.

CAPTURE ROBBER AFTER 3 BLOCK REVOLVER FIGHT

A robber was captured yesterday afternoon following a three block chase in which he exchanged shots with his victim and a policeman off duty.

The man entered the Hi-Ho tavern, 3010 Broadway, and after getting $88 from the cash register locked Raymond Ek, bartender, and Harold Heath, a patron, in a refrigerator. Using an inside release Ek opened the ice box, seized a revolver, ran into the street, caught sight of the fugitive and opened fire. The gunman fired back and Policeman John Newell, who was passing, joined in the battle. The robber ran into a closed areaway at 716 Wellington avenue, where he dropped his gun and put up his hands. At the Sheffield avenue station he identified himself as John Lonsdorf and said he came here recently from New York with his gun in the hope of finding some easy pickings.

FIRE ROUTS 14; HURTS ONE.

Michael Delich, 55 years old, was severely burned and fourteen other residents were driven out early yesterday by a fire in the stairway of a two story brick building at 9100 Green Bay avenue. Chief Matthew Sweeney of the 14th battalion estimated the damage to the building at $800.

WANTED—CO-ORDINATORS

By CALEB

REDUCING the clash of interests is the need of the day. The largest problems like the smallest are rooted in antagonistic claims or rights. As invention and science advance, simple sets of opposed rights are replaced by complex sets. Thus, our problems as a people continue to tax our capacity to solve them.

Once, a stranger falling into the hands of a clan or tribe was put to death. That was a simple solution for a simple set of circumstances. Within tribes, problems were equally simple because relationships were primary. All the factors for the solution of practical problems were tangible and at hand.

Today society is so fabulous a fabric of tangled interests that the cheerful proposers of palliatives cannot see on what spools even the nearest-at-hand threads have their origin. Most of the economic reforms suggested for our national ills are like perpetual motion. They are beautiful in theory but impossible in practice. If some magnificent proposal can be set in motion, it cannot be kept going. If another is such it could run when once started, there is no possibility of starting it.

Most proposals for remedying national ills fail to consider all the interests of all the parties affected. Follow any economic problem of importance all the way through, and you are likely to be involved in production capacity, work hours per week, competition, import tariffs, trade unionism, corporate capital structures, taxation, government regulation, the sanctity of contracts, interstate commerce, and a host of other things.

That is why evolution, the slow test and trial method, finally levels all before it, including the block-temples of our ultra-conservative reactionaries, and the air-castles of ultra-progressive radicals.

The gap between the world's problems solved and unsolved varies from time to time. Sometimes the gap widens, sometimes it narrows. When it becomes wide, the need for men who are great social co-ordinators is filled, or there come social explosions.

The more consistently co-ordinators are on the job, the less evolution has to grind up in the way of blown-up blockhouses and shattered air-castles. Most of the important problems mankind faces now—today—are problems of co-ordination.

HIT ECONOMICS OF ROOSEVELT AS TRADE DROPS

Critics in His Own Party Are on Increase.

from prosecution under the federal anti-trust laws, incidentally withdrawing his previously expressed opposition to a bill for which his son, James, had become a lobbyist.

Fails to Name Committee.

The President said a strengthening of the anti-trust laws is being studied, but by whom is an administration secret, for Mr. Roosevelt never appointed the committee proposed for this purpose by Atty. Gen. Cummings several months ago.

What has been happening to business generally under the Roosevelt administration is illustrated by the experience of the railroads. Railroad operating costs have increased 110 million dollars a year as a result of the unemployment compensation, retirement tax, and similar laws; 275 millions from increased cost of coal, oil, steel, and other materials; 175 millions from restoration of the 10 per cent wage reduction, and 140 millions from the wage awards of the national mediation board, an aggregate of about 700 millions.

Building Slows Down.

The increased cost of materials has slowed down the construction industry, the state of which is reflected in the decreasing operations of the steel mills and the decline in car loadings in the last few weeks for the first time since recovery set in. Wages have risen, but the rise in the cost of living has wiped out a large proportion of the increase in pay.

Not the least important of the causes of the business recession, according to the orthodox economists, is the cessation of pump priming expenditures by the federal government. While billions were being poured out in the PWA and other recovery agencies and being distributed in bonus payments to the veterans business boomed. Now that this flood of federal money has become little more than a trickle, business activity is slowing down.

In addition, there are the uncertainties of the future and the lack of confidence in the Roosevelt administration that are disturbing business men, big and little, and investors generally.

STEIWER WILL NOT RUN FOR SENATE AGAIN

Portland, Ore., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon, keynoter of the 1936 Republican national convention, will not seek reelection to the United States senate in next year's elections. He announced that tonight.

The state's junior senator said that, after twenty years of public service, he had decided to return to the practice of law. He did not disclose a connection, but it was rumored he would go with a firm representing the Union Pacific railroad.

Senator Steiwer expressed his hope that the people of Oregon "will understand that I have reached this decision only after most careful consideration."

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—With only members of their immediate families present, Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, former wife of Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, and Curtin Winsor of Ardmore, Pa., were married at noon today in the Second Presbyterian church by the Rev. Alex MacColl, the pastor.

Given in marriage by her father, William H. Donner, the bride was unattended. James D. Winsor served his brother as best man. Following a wedding trip the Winsors will live at Rosemont, Pa.

Curtin Winsor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Winsor Jr. He has degrees from Princeton and Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Winsor and Elliot Roosevelt were divorced in July, 1933.

ROOSEVELT ASKS SUITABLE FETES ARMISTICE DAY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt, proclaiming the usual celebration of Armistice day as the anniversary of the ending of the "most destructive, sanguiary and far reaching war in human annals," today denounced again the "lawlessness and strife in many parts of the world" which, he said, threaten international security and even civilization itself.

The proclamation, calling upon the citizenry to observe Nov. 11 appropriately by display of the flag and by other means in schools and elsewhere, came just before Secretary of State Cordell Hull emerged from the Oval room of the White House to observe that his visit to Canada had demonstrated to him the "fine spirit" of two peoples living side by side in peace.

The secretary of state said his reception "could not have been better." He said he wished the White House correspondents had been present to report the "evidence everywhere of the fine spirit of the people of Canada and their devotion "to the cause of peace and good will."

MARYLAND FLOOD HITS FIVE TOWNS; MOVE 100 FAMILIES

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Flood waters in nearby Prince Georges county, Maryland, where the Anacostia river overflowed its banks inundating five towns and marooning more than 100 families, began to recede late today with clearing and colder weather.

Fire department rescue squads were busy during the day removing the marooned families from their homes in Bladensburg, Riverdale, Edmonston, Brentwood and East Hyattsville.

The flood there was the worst since 1933. Women and children stood on the porches of their homes, with the flood waters lapping at their feet, while waiting for the rescue boats.

CHAMBER CITES HEAVY TAXATION AS BUSINESS FOE

Excessive Federal Rule Is Blamed for Slump.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The United States Chamber of Commerce, in its weekly Washington review, today attributed the current business recession, reflected in the recent stock market crash, to excessive government regulations, repressive taxation, confusion, uncertaintay, and lack of confidence engendered by the administration's policies.

Reporting the results of a business survey, the chamber cited a series of concrete examples showing how the administration's drastic graduated tax on undistributed corporation profits works out in actual practice. The difficulty most frequently reported by business men is that the tax seriously hampers expansion and growth and in time of recession results in much quicker curtailment of operations.

Hit Repressive Levies.

"There is an increasingly large body of opinion which holds that excessive federal regulation, repressive taxation, and government intrusion into labor relations have contributed measurably to the present uneasiness in business," said the camber's weekly review.

"Meanwhile, business derived some comfort during the week from strong hints that the administration favored changes in the undistributed profits tax. The current state of business has served to focus the spotlight of public attention on the harmful effects of this tax.

"It is now widely recognized that the profits tax in actual operation is one of the most depressing factors in the present situation. Recent events have demonstrated that this tax halts expansion when business volume is increasing and accentuates the decline when the business curve turns downward.

"Moreover the revised government income estimates for the current year show that this levy is not the revenue producer its sponsors predicted."

Tax Changes Urged.

The chamber reported that changes in the profits tax now most frequently being urged include:

Relief for corporations with impaired capital.

Relief for debt burdened corporations.

A "breathing spell" for corporations emerging from bankruptcy or financial reorganization.

Allowances for earnings reinvested in the business.

Exemption from surtax of a specified amount of earnings.

Two typical coses iluustrating the effect of the profits tax, as reported by the chamber of commerce follow:

"Steel corporation, Northwest—this company, one of the well established independent producers with about 2,800 employés, had earnings in 1936 of approximately $2,626,000. Because of the surtax it paid larger dividends than it considered prudent, but retained $690,000 to meet certain obligations and to provide additional working capital made necessary by an increase in business. A surtax of about $85,000 had to be paid.

High Financing Cost.

"This is equivalent to 12¼ per cent of the amount retained, and is a high financing cost. The tax was characterized by the company as being in effect 'a penalty on conservative management and sound financing of the business which must be done to protect the investment of the shareholders.'

"Brewing company, Southwest—This company began operations about three and one-half years ago and has been using the bulk of its earnings for expansion of the business. It is a closed corporation, and therefore cannot obtain additional capital through public sale of its stock. Temporary loans for purposes are not of much help. The result is that if the company is to continue to grow it must pay a penalty tax for the privilege of using its earnings for expansion.

JOHN ROOSEVELT, ANNE LINDSAY CLARK WILL WED IN JUNE

Boston, Mass., Oct. 23.—[U.P.]—John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, and Anne Lindsay Clark will be married at Nahant church in the north shore town of Nahant next June. Her mother so announced. The church is undenominational, but the Episcopal ceremony will be used, Mrs. Frances Haven Clark said. The wedding date will be shortly after Roosevelt is graduated from Harvard. The couple will live in an apartment, possibly in Brookline, and will have at their disposal a penthouse atop the Clarks' new summer home under construction at Nahant.

44 Years a Burglar, He Still Gets Caught at It!

Frank Price, 62 years old, whose police record dates back to 1893, was held by Cragin police yesterday, charged with looting the home of Martin Groark, 1722 North Oak Park avenue on Friday. Records show that Price was sentenced to Pontiac reformatory for burglary in 1893, and convicted of various petty offenses in following years until 1927, when he was sent to Joliet penitentiary for burglary. "I've been in and out of jails for 44 years, and I don't want to go back," Price pleaded last night.

PRESIDENT MAPS FARM PROGRAM; WARNS OF COST

Tells Legislators Plan Must Carry Itself.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—After warning in Washington today that congress must keep new farm legislation within budgetary limits or be prepared to enact new taxes, President Roosevelt arrived at his home here tonight.

His mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, met him at the door. On the trip the President got his first ride behind Diesel engines. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad unhitched one of its new 3,600 horse power streamlined locomotives from the Capitol Limited, run to Chicago, and put it onto the presidential special, which was in charge of General Passenger Agent Daniel Moorman. Two veterans of the railroad, J. F. Donnelly and H. D. Clark, were at the controls.

Studies Various Problems.

In addition to farm legislation, the other special session problems which will occupy his attention are wage and hour legislation, government reorganization and regional planning for development and preservation of natural resources.

Mr. Roosevelt issued his warning to congress in duplicate letters to Chairman Ellison D. Smith [D., S. C.] of the senate agriculture committee and Chairman Marvin Jones [D., Tex.] of the house agriculture committee. In duplicate letters he sought their coöperation in speeding a farm program which he stated should be designed to stabilize prices and maintain an ever normal granary so that both farmers and consumers could be protected against what he termed the dangers of price fluctuations.

Urging sound fiscal relations, Mr. Roosevelt said that it is important not to interfere with the expected balancing of the budget in the fiscal year 1938-'39. Similar budget balancing promises in the past have been broken through violation of a dictum continued in the duplicate letters that "no additional expenditures from the general fund of the treasury should be made over and above existing planned expenditures."

The charge to congress to keep the farm program cost within the budget came after Mr. Roosevelt himself had ordered a study by Daniel Bell, acting budget director; Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

He followed his warning with his statement that any new taxes which might result from the farm program, for the enactment of which he summoned congress, must fall on the head of congress.

Insists on Balanced Action.

"The only exception to this would be the incurring of additional obligations on the part of the treasury backed 100 per cent by additional receipts from new taxes," he said.

In the letters the President recalled that the government has been spending around 500 million dollars annually under the soil conservation program and suggested its inclusion in the new plan.

"The new national farm act should safeguard farmers' income as well as their soil fertility," the President wrote. "It should provide for storage of reserve food supplies in an ever normal granary, so that if severe and widespread drouth recurs consumers will be assured of more adequate supplies with less drastic increases in price than otherwise would be the case.

"It should provide for control of surpluses when and if necessary, but at the same time it should preserve the export markets that still are open to our farmers.

Administration Up to Farmers.

"It should protect both farmers and consumers against extreme ups and downs in prices of farm products. It should be financed by sound fiscal methods. Local administration should be kept in the farmers' hands.

"I wish to emphasize especially that any price stabilizing features through loans or other devices should be reinforced by effective provisions against the piling up of unmanagable supplies.

"We must never again invite the collapse of farm prices, the stoppage of farm buying, and the demoralization of business that followed the federal farm board's attempts to maintain farm prices without control of farm surpluses."

CAPITAL EXPECTS ANOTHER EFFORT TO UNSEAT BLACK

Motion May Be Made Tomorrow.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Lawyers in a case involving the wholesale seizure of private telegrams, which the Supreme court has refused to review, today were reported planning a new constitutional attack on the right of Justice Hugo L. Black to serve as an associate justice. The first oral motion in the new fight to dislodge Justice Black may be made before the court on Monday, according to reports.

Attorney William C. Pierce of Tampa, Fla., counsel for a group of oil royalty security dealers in a suit against the Securities and Exchange commission, already has announced that he would demand a rehearing of the case "in the absence of Justice Black."

Retirement Act Issue.

Pierce merely said he reserved the right to challenge Black's general eligibility, but now he is understood to be planning such an attack. It would be based on the proposition that Black's appointment and confirmation were unconstitutional because the voluntary retirement act for Supreme court justices, passed during his term in the senate, increased the emoluments of the office.

The Supreme court dismissed a similar attack made by Attorney Albert Levitt, former federal judge in the Virgin Islands, but did so solely on the ground that the petitioner lacked sufficient interest.

Contend Dealers Injured.

The contention of counsel in the telegram seizure case is that the Florida oil security dealers were injured when the court refused to consider their suit for an injunction to restrain the SEC from making wholesale seizures of their telegrams by means of dragnet subpenas. Furthermore, the lawyers contend, Justice Black had no right to participate in the consideration of the case because his senate committee seized telegrams last year.

Justice Black, who has confessed joining the bigoted Ku Klux Klan, participated today in a secret conference when the court considered a petition for review of one of the Scottsboro cases. Heywood Patterson, one of the nine Alabama Negroes accused of raping two white girls, is appealing his conviction and 75 year sentence.

To Address Dinner

Henry C. Lytton, 91 years old, founder and president of the Hub, arrived in Chicago yesterday with Mrs. Lytton from their summer home on Long Island. They were met at the La Salle street station by a horse-drawn station wagon reminiscent of the days fifty years ago when Mr. Lytton established his store. He is the last living representative of the fourteen pioneers who founded mercantile houses on State street prior to 1896.

Mr. Lytton will address the Association of State Street Seniors at its fifth annual dinner meeting on Nov. 1 in the Palmer house. The twenty-seven railroads entering Chicago are coöperating with the State street council in arranging the event and more than 500 railway executives are expected to attend. Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, will be the principal speaker.

ICKES PRAISES MR. LA GUARDIA AT DEDICATION

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior and public works administrator, joined with Mayor F. H. La Guardia and other city officials in dedicating the $25,000,000 Welfare Island sewage disposal plant on that island today.

Mr. Ickes praised the mayor, adding, "I may say that I have always found it difficult to say 'No' to your eloquent and persuasive mayor."

Political supporters of the mayor were overjoyed at Mr. Ickes' presence on the same platform, only three days before Postmaster General James A. Farley is scheduled to make campaign speeches for Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Democratic candidate for mayor. They saw in Mr. Ickes' warm tributes and friendly remarks a strong factor to offset the Farley speeches for Mahoney.

COUPLE KILLED AS CAR DIVES 30 FEET INTO RIVER

Chicagoans' Auto Skids Near Lorain, O.

Alfred W. Foley, assistant classified manager of THE TRIBUNE, and his wife, Frances, were killed yesterday when the car in which they were returning from a vacation crashed through the guard rail on the approach of a river bridge at Wellington in Lorain county, Ohio, and plunged down a thirty foot bank.

Deputy Sherif John Judge of Lorain said Foley apparently applied his brakes as his car neared the bridge at the bottom of a steep hill. The car skidded on the wet road and rolled end over end down the slope.

Mr. Foley was killed outright. Mrs. Foley, the former Frances Schock, died while being taken to a hospital. The Foleys lived at 2337 Commonwelath avenue. They were married Feb. 16, 1935. Mrs. Foley was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Schock, 4528 Washington boulevard. Mr. Foley, who was 41 years old, came to THE TRIBUNE January, 1920, and was made assistant classified manager in February, 1927.

The couple had no children. Mrs. Foley, who was 32 years old, is survived by her parents and a brother, Robert. Mr. Foley is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Foley of 4822 West End avenue.

James Bodenechak, 19 years old, 4943 South Rockwell street, was killed, and James Billy, 18 years old, 2542 50th street, and Harry Sapuha, 20 years old, 2424 47th place, were injured in a head-on collision between two automobiles at 43d street and Western avenue last night. Sapuha, alone in his car, police said, made a left turn in front of Bodenechak. Both cars were badly wrecked.

Injured Friday when the car in which she was riding with her husband collided with one driven by Dr. Paul Attig, a professor at Naperville college, Mrs. Albert Baldwin, 55 years old, of Mishawaka, died yesterday at South Bend. Dr. Attig was going to Jackson, Mich., to make a speech.

Two men were killed Friday night on route 20, two miles east of Michigan City, when the car in which they were riding crashed into a parked truck. They were Tony Sanfranski and his brother, Ben, both of Calumet City. The car was driven by William Scherer, 903 Logan avenue, Hammond.

Near New Buffalo, Mich., Floyd V. Kenworthy, 3178 Pine Grove avenue, was killed Friday night when his automobile skidded from the road into a ditch and overturned.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 867 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 656 were killed in Chicago, where 18,581 were injured in the same period.

UNITE TO FIGHT SOCIAL DISEASES IN TWO 'U' CITIES

Champaign - Urbana Health Units Merged.

[BY A STAF CORRESPONDENT.]

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 23.—[Special.] —A major experiment in public health organization, encompassing the first anti-venerial disease campaign in Illinois outside of Chicago, now is underway in Champiagn and Urbana, the twin cities which share the University of Illinois campus.

The prostitution charged by the crusading student newspaper, the Daily Illini, is an important phase in the health problems of the two cities. But the sensational elements of the declarations of Mike Connolly, Illini city editor, that he personally has discovered fourteen houses of ill repute in Champaign since school opened a month ago are regarded by health authorities as a prefatory incident to the campaign.

Health Districts to Be Merged.

On Nov. 1 the townships of Champaign and Cunningham [Urbana is in the latter] will dissolve their local and township public health units and combine in one health district.

The voters of the two cities voted for this unification under the long unused Coleman act of 1917, a state law providing for the consolidation of duplicating public health agencies.

The Urbana-Champaign health district will be headed by a director, who will be appointed by J. Karl Jones, county supervisor; George Perry, Champaign township supervisor, and Jacob White, Cunningham township supervisor.

Plan War on Venereal Diseases.

With the advent of the health district the Champaign County Medical society, headed by Dr. John Gernon, will launch a venereal disease program.

Private physicians will be its administrators. Contagious diseases are handled in a similar way only in Massachusetts.

Details of this system have not been disclosed. Dr. T. G. Knappenberger, who two days ago was appointed chairman of the control committee by the medical society, said today that his committee had not begun to function.

Dr. David C. Elliott, Illinois adviser of the United States public health service, said that the federal government had appropriated $13,000 for the entire program, which is being matched by $13,000 from the state and county.

Dr. Elliott has spent the last month in Champaign and Urbana supervising the organization. He also made a survey of possible sources of contagion. He declined to comment on what he learned before approval of his report by Dr. Thomas Parran Jr., surgeon general in Washington, D. C.

Deny Vice Charges.

That Urbana and Champaign have a higher than normal rate of syphilis and gonorrhea, as indicated in state reports, was stoutly denied today by officials of both cities.

Mayor John Gray of Urbana expressed a typical viewpoint in asserting that 1935 statistics showing the two cities leading a list of 27 smaller Illinois communities in gonorrhea and near the top in syphilis cases reflected a more conscientious effort of health officers and physicians in reporting cases.

Mayor James F. Flynn of Champaign shared this viewpoint. He also expressed resentment that his city should be singled out in the Daily Illini's drive to close all houses of prostitution and gambling.

"Personally I know of only one disorderly house in Champaign," said Mayor Flynn, "but on general information I would say five is a more likely number than fourteen."

Mayor Flynn said he planned no special action as the result of Friday's conference with Dr. A. C. Willard, president of the university. Dr. Willard then warned that all students caught in disorderly houses would be expelled.

Promise to Coöperate.

The mayors and police chiefs of both cities assured him they would coöperate in keeping all such houses closed.

Mayor Flynn insisted that his police would do the utmost in enforcing laws against prostitution and gambling.

Other authorities in Champaign explained, however, that the main concern about prostitution is keeping the women free of disease.

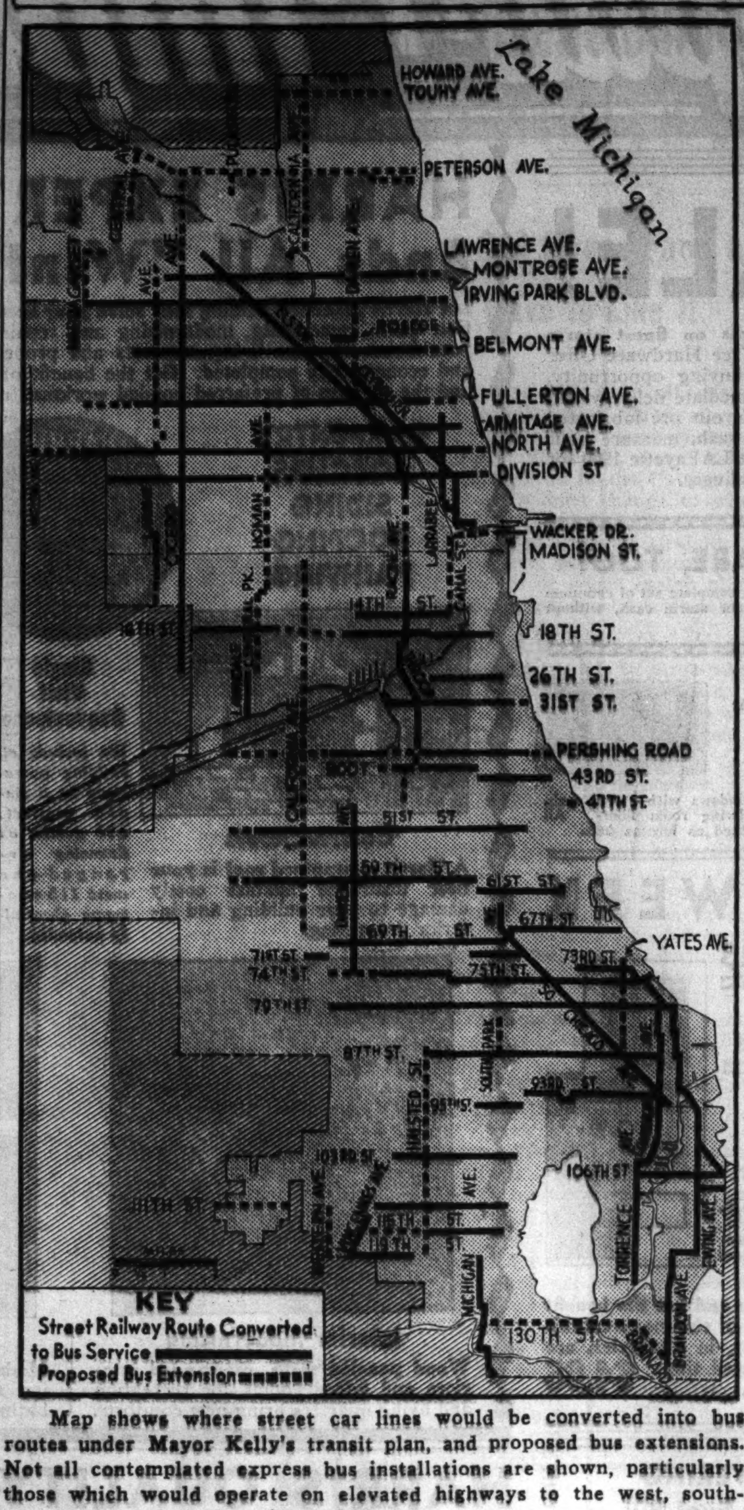
BUS SUBSTITUTIONS IN MAYOR'S PLAN



Map shows where street car lines would be converted into bus routes under Mayor Kelly's transit plan, and proposed bus extensions. Not all contemplated express bus installations are shown, particularly those which would operate on elevated highways to the west, southwest, and northwest sections of the city.

Many Changes Sought

Many of the least heavily patronized car lines of the city would be converted into bus routes under Mayor Kelly's plan for transit rehabilitation. This is shown by a study of the plan, announced last week, which provides for modernization of all surface facilities and the construction of subways and elevated highways. Express buses would be operated over the elevated highways.

Approximately one-third of the present street railway system would be converted to bus liness, though several of the heavily traveled lines would be continued as they are. Practically all extensions of existing lines would be through bus operations. Both trolley coaches and gasoline vehicles would be used on the bus lines.

$988 AWARD IN AUTO CRASH.

CITY WILL SPEED NEW INCINERATOR JOB AT STICKNEY

Ross A. Woodhull, president of the Chicago sanitary district, announced yesterday that work will start soon on the superstructure of the $4,000,000 incineration plant now being built adjacent to the district's southwest side sewage treatment works at Stickney.

The incineration plant, which will dry and burn the sludge that remains after sewage has been partially dried, will be the largest in the world, Woodhull said, and will be completed in the fall of 1938.

The building will be 320 feet long, 202 feet wide, and approximately nine floors high. It will cost approximately $1,200,000 and the remainder will be spent for drying equipment and furnaces, Woodhull said.

Girl Admits Telling Tale of Assault to Vex Suitor

Miss Esther Frieboth, 21 years old, 4809 Strong street, who reported to the police that she had been bound and gagged and left in a prairie near Milwaukee avenue and Ainslie street Friday evening, confessed yesterday that the story was a hoax. She told Sergt. Ignatius Brandt of the Irving Park station that she fabricated the story to embarrass a suitor who, she learned recently, is married.

NAZI MOBS LOOT SHOPS IN DRIVE ON DANZIG JEWS

Owners Flee Into Hiding in Terrorist Outbreak.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, Oct. 23.—Anti-Jewish riots took place today throughout Danzig. Nazi crows looted and wrecked Jewish shops. The Jewish owners fled into hiding. Police asserted that no Jews were injured. Late tonight police were patroling the streets to prevent a new outbreak.

The riots followed closely the proclamation of complete Nazi rule in Danzig and abolition of the last vestiges of the old parliamentary parties. The last opponents of the Nazis were made to promise they would not appeal to the league of nations to protect their rights.

Catholic Party Dissolved.

[On Thursday the Nazi police chief of Danzig ordered dissolution of the Catholic Centrist party. The Nazi party thus became the only one in the free city, which was formed by the treaty of Versailles out of former German territory. The league of nations appoints a high commissioner as its agent in the Danzig government.]

Albert Forster, Nazi district leader for Danzig, announced a few days ago: "Danzig will take measures of self-defense." The population took this to mean that measures would be taken against Jews, since the Nazis constantly have branded the Jews as "forces attacking Germany." All shops owned by gentiles sported Nazi swastikas today, which made it easy for the rioters to pick Jewish shops.

Next week the Danzig Nazis plan to enforce the anti-Jewish legislation which forbids all Jews except world war veterans to work as doctors, lawyers, teachers, or drug store owners on to have Aryan servants under the age of 45.

POLISH WARFARE GROWS

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Oct. 23.—The open warfare between Jewish and Catholic students in Polish universities has spread to grammar schools throughout the country. These schools also are introducing what the Polish press terms ghetto benches for Jews on the left sides of classrooms.

Because the censor recently confiscated many editions of newspapers for publishing news concerning anti-Semitic excesses in Poland's educational institutions, a delegation of protesting editors visited Premier General Felicjan Slawoj-Skladkowski.

The editors demanded that the government at least unify the censor's actions so that newspapers in one section of the country will not be able to publish what is forbidden in other centers.

Premier Asks Voluntary Gag.

After promising that hereafter repressions against the press would be enforced in like manner throughout the country, the premier asked the editors why they could not avoid trouble with the censor by not publishing news which the government found objectionable.

Fourteen Jewish student organizations appealed today to student organizations abroad for moral support.

The introduction of Germany's "pure race doctrin" into Poland has resulted in many family tragedies. Tens of thousands of Poles are intermarried with Jews and many students of mixed ancestry, even though professing the Catholic faith, have been compelled to sit on the ghetto benches.

Son of Vice Premier a Victim.

Among the latter are the son of E. Kwiatkowski, former premier and now vice premier, and the daughter of the late M. Holuvko, former secretary in the foreign office who was killed by Ukrainian terrorists.

President Ignacy Moscicki is reported to have conferred with Cardinal August Hlond, Roman Catholic primate of Poland, and other church dignitaries in an effort to find a solution of the problem.

Besides attacking Jews, student groups at Lvov university have begun to terrorize Ukrainian students. The Lvov students are smashing windows in stores owned by Jewish and Ukrainian merchants.

6,000 Boy Scouts Honor Late Theodore Roosevelt

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Six thousand Boy Scouts made their annual pilgrimage today to the grave of Theodore Roosevelt, laying a wreath in memory of the only man to be honored with the title of "Chief Scout Citizen." The late President was the first honorary vice president of the Boy Scouts of America upon its founding on Feb. 8, 1910.

KATHERINE FISKE.

Watertown, Mass., Oct. 23.—(AP)—A pretty 18 years old Radcliffe sophomore today asserted, after a night of semi-consciousness, that a gunman beat her senseless last night after forcing her to give him a ride because "the police are chasing me."

The girl, Miss Katherine Fiske, daughter of Prof. Syrus Hartwell Fiske of Harvard university, recovering full consciousness at Peter Bent Brigham hospital, said the stranger leaped to the running board of her car as it slowed at an intersection, poked a gun at her and said: "Drive on. The police are chasing me."

"I remember driving for about 100 yards," she was quoted by her father as saying, "and then something struck me. That's all I remember."

Order Limit Penalty in Brutal Crime.

ily made a confession. At the trial this confession was repudiated, Conroy claiming that it had been obtained only because the police beat him and hung him to a door frame by his hands.

Policemen Deny Charges.

Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan, Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley, and twenty-two policemen took the stand to dispute this. They averred his admissions were made voluntarily and that no promises were made him in return.

Miss Brasy, who was in the courtroom, said she was satisfied with the verdict.

"This may be a warning to other men who are tempted to commit such brutal crimes," she asserted.

Assistant State's Attorneys Frank Donoghue and John S. Boyle, who prosecuted, said that they also were pleased with the jury's decision.

Climbs Porch to Room.

In the repudiated confession Conroy told the police that he was intoxicated and had been smoking marijuana cigarets just before he committed the rape and torture. At the time he willingly told how he had climbed a rear porch to get into Miss Brasy's room, where he remained more than an hour. Her injuries were so serious that she was forced to remain in a hospital for weeks.

G. O. P. OFFICE FLOODED WITH NUTS AND BOLTS

Akron, O., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Buried under a deluge of nuts and bolts, hot dogs, cut flowers and doughnuts, workers at Republican campaign headquarters finally lost their patience today.

Indignantly, E. C. Brown, campaign manager, announced that he and his associates have ordered no hardware, no haberdashery, no pastry, and that merchants should cease filling telephoned orders for delivery of such merchandise to the campaign office.

Brown blamed pranksters for the phone calls.

ILLINOIS INSANE DOUBLED DURING LAST 25 YEARS

Twice as Many in State Hospitals Now.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—There are nearly twice as many insane persons in state institutions in Illinois today as in 1912 and the total of commitments has increased by 16⅔ per cent during the last five years, according to a report released today by the state department of public welfare.

At the same time the number of epileptics and feeble-minded persons cared for by the state has increased nearly five times over a 25-year period and commitments to penal institutions are 11,578 for 1937, as of Oct. 1, as compared with 3,276 in the full year in 1912.

Big Gain from 1927-'37.

The alarming increase of such wards of the state, which compares with similar increases reported over the country, has continued steadily through the years, but jumped most heavily during the ten year period between 1927 and Oct. 1, 1937, according to the report.

In 1927 there were 20,540 insane persons committed to institutions in Illinois and Oct. 1 this year the total stood at 28,715, an increase of almost 70 per cent. In 1912 the number of insane in state institutions was 14,426.

The increase among feeble-minded and epileptic cases is almost equally startling. In 1912 there were 1,479 persons of this class cared for by the state. In 1927 this total had increased to 4,562, and in 1937 it had reached a total of 6,995. Delinquents committed by the state show a smaller increase, however, over the 25-year period. In 1912 there were 956 delinquents cared for, in 1927 there were 1,217, and this year the number had decreased from the 1927 figure to 1,004.

Prison Inmates Tripled.

The prison population in Illinois on June 30, 1912 was 3,276, according to the report, and on Oct. 1, 1937, the population had grown to 11,578, an increase of 4,528 over the 1927 figure of 7,050.

The various charitable institutions operated by the state showed a decrease for 1937 as compared with 1932, and the present totals are not much larger than in 1912. This year there are 2,983 patients and inmates in such institutions as the school for the deaf, the school for the blind, the state eye and ear infirmary, and the soldiers' and sailors' home. In 1927 the total was 2,262 and in 1912, 2,624. The peak in this division was reached in 1932, when 3,060 were cared for.

All together the state department of public welfare is caring for 51,275 persons in 1937, as of Oct. 1, more than double the 25,385 figure in 1912, and an increase of 15,644 over 1927.

Welfare Problem

The charts below show how the numbers of the insane, epileptics and feeble minded persons in state institutions, and the Illinois prison population have increased in the last 25 years.

INDIANA PASTORS BAR PATRONS OF MARRIAGE MILLS

Methodist ministers of Lake county, Ind., joined yesterday in the campaign against marriage mills with the announcement that they would not marry nonresident couples in their churches. The Rev. Schuyler Rogers of Gary said that couples who go to Crown Point to evade the Illinois hygienic marriage law are failing to guard themselves against becoming parents of diseased children.

On Friday, Circuit Judge Joseph T. Sullivan at Crown Point took under advisement a petition for an injunction which would close the marriage mill. He announced he would rule Nov. 6. The injunction would restrain Dr. George W. Sweigart, Lake county clerk, from issuing licenses to nonresidents.

SEIZE 14 AFTER 3 STRIKES, 1 SLAIN, ON SHIP'S VOYAGE

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Fourteen seamen were held tonight under $1,000 bail each charged with conspiring to deprive their captain of authority in a foreign port. They are members of the crew of the freighter Algic, beset with labor difficulties, deaths, and desertions on a round trip voyage to Buenos Aires. All were seized at the docks.

The charges were based on contentions by Capt. Joseph Gainard that the men refused to obey orders in Montevideo, Uruguay. Gainard said the men struck there in sympathy with a strike of stevedores on the Montevideo docks. Warrants were issued by the United States district attorney after study of the log of the strife ridden vessel's voyage.

Gainard told a federal inspection board of three sit-down strikes, one slaying, a drowning, and desertions on the southern cruise.

Losses Found Motive for Merchant's Suicide

William J. Pike Jr., 49 years old, 2217 Noyes avenue, Evanston, who was found dead of gas fumes in his office at 1113 North Franklin street Friday, committed suicide while despondent over financial losses, a coroner's jury found yesterday. He was a partner in Pike-Hansen, Inc., a mail order clothing concern.

BROOKFIELD ZOO DENIZENS CHANGE TO WINTER OIL

Get Cod Liver Brand and Have to Like It.

These are cod liver oil days at the Brookfield zoo. From now on, Director Edward H. Bean announced yesterday, virtually every animal, bird and reptile in the Chicago Zoölogical park must change to winter diet. And those that object to taking their cod liver oil straight, Mr. Bean decreed, will get chocolate covered wafers or sugar coated pills.

The bears get special treatment. As winter comes on, their daily food rations will be tapered from twelve and fourteen pounds to three pounds and less because, though they do not go into complete hibernation as in the wild state, they lead a sluggish life in the winter.

Stock Up on Groceries.

For the other animals special winter stores are being laid in. Ten carloads of hay are now on hand, and many tons of barley, wheat, corn, potatoes, sugar beets, and carrots.

Heated homes have been provided for the tropical animals. A new glass inclosed house for the gorillas will be finished by Nov. 1, Director Bean said.

All the animals will be on view to visitors during the winter. The hours will be from 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. daily and 10 to 5:30 p. m. on Sundays and holidays after Nov. 1.

Keep Nursery Busy.

Director Bean announced that since Jan. 1 twenty-three mammals, seven snakes, and seventeen waterfowl have been born at the zoo. Most notable, perhaps, were Eve, the chimpanzee, whose mother, Meshie, died; the baby hippopotamus, and the white bearded gnu. There also are eight monkeys, six gazelles, two black bears, two zebras, one antelope and one ocelot.

The zoo population also has been increased during the year by the purchase of 100 mammals, 211 birds, and 329 reptiles, many being new species.

The most notable purchase was that of Su-Lin, the baby giant panda from western China. Then there were two camels from Siberia, a giraffe from Abyssinia, the male gorilla from Spanish Guinea, two walruses from Greenland, seven kinds of monkeys, and antelopes which came from Wyoming by airplane.

Antelopes on Their Way.

Due to arrive this week are five antelopes of three different varieties which have been on the way since April 5 from equatorial Sudan in Africa.

Visitors to the zoo so far this year have exceeded the total for 1936, when 1,509,159 registered. This year's atendance, as of last Wednesday, was 1,653,593.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

An item last Friday gave the address of George Miller, 23 years old, as 5310 Warner avenue. Mrs. Ida Becker, who lived at that address 17 years, said Miller is unknown there.

SEIZE STATE HOSPITAL FUGITIVE.

Fred Magnus, 27 years old, who escaped from the Elgin state hospital Friday, was picked up suffering from exposure yesterday at Belvidere.

DR. JIRKA QUITS; DR. BAXTER NEW CHIEF OF HEALTH

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 23.—[U. P.]—Acceptance of the resignation of Dr. Frank J. Jirka, state health department director, was announced today by Gov. Henry Horner.

The governor appointed Dr. A. C. Baxter, assistant director since Feb. 1, 1930, as acting director.

Dr. Jirka will resume his private practice in Chicago and will be medical assistant of the state health department in charge of venereal disease control.

The retiring director told his desire to retire several months ago, but remained because of the infantile paralysis epidemic.

In accepting the resignation Horner wrote to Dr. Jirka:

"Despite the depression, unemployment, the Ohio river flood, and like difficulties occurring during your service the records show substantial improvement in health conditions during the last four and a half years.

"Illinois has enjoyed better health during the period than ever before."

ECUADOR RULED BY ARMY AFTER BLOODLESS COUP

President Quits and Will Leave Country.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Provisional President Federico Paez suddenly resigned today and was succeeded by his minister of war with a cabinet composed largely of army officers.

Quito, capital of Ecuador, indicated by arrow.

The newspaper El Telegrafo reported from Quito, the capital, that the war minister, Gen. Alberto Enriquez, issued a decree assuming power immediately after Paez, who became provisional president following the 1935 revolution, presented his resignation to the national assembly.

Reports that the capital accepted the change quietly were brought to Guayaquil by Col. Ricardo Villacreces, inspector general of aviation, who arrived to confer with local garrison chiefs.

Paez to Leave Country.

It was reported that Enriquez had guaranteed the retiring president's safety and that Paez had announced he would leave the country within a week.

The new cabinet included Commandant Jorge Quintana as government minister; Commandant Virgilio Guerrero, minister of social works; Commandant Guillermo Freire, minister of national defense; Carlos Manuel Larrea, minister of foreign relations, and Commandant Eleodoro Saenz, interior.

RECALL COUP OF 1935.

A series of army uprisings in 1934-'35 that caused the resignations of two presidents brought Paez to power in 1935. The constitution was suspended by the army, and a national assembly was named to sit until the election of a constituent assembly.

Last summer Paez resigned, but the same day was again elected provisional president. A few days later he was given extraordinary executive powers to deal with a reported plot against the presidency and the assembly.

SAILOR LEADER OF G. A. R. IN CITY TO MAP REUNION

James W. Willett, 91 years old, the only sailor ever elected commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, conferred here yesterday with other members of the G. A. R. on plans for the encampment with Confederate army veterans next year at Gettysburg. The G. A. R., at its national encampment in Madison last month, approved the joint encampment, but it has not yet agreed to allow the Stars and Bars, the Confederate flag, to be flown with the Union flag.

Despite his years, Mr. Willett still practices law in Tama, Ia., with his son and grandson. He was national commander of the G. A. R. in 1922 and 1923 and now is judge advocate general. In his room at the Hotel Sherman, he reminisced on his civil war experiences yesterday.

Born in Keithsburg, Ill., in 1846, Mr. Willett was unable to enlist in the union army because of his youth and because he was below the minimum height requirement, so he joined the navy and served on river war craft.

U. S. TRADE ENVOY LOSES $400 GEMS IN FLAT ROBBERY

OTTAWA, Oct. 23.—(AP)—A daylight robbery several days ago in the apartment of Henry M. Bankhead, commercial attaché of the United States legation, was disclosed today by police. Authorities said three robbers escaped with jewelry valued at $400 after threatening Mrs. Bankhead with a pistol.

Bankhead is a brother of United States Senator John H. Bankhead and Speaker William B. Bankhead of the United States house of representatives and an uncle of Tallulah Bankhead, the actress.

Police said Bankhead and his wife returned to their apartment from a luncheon and found the door locked. Bankhead went downstairs for a key and in his absence a man emerged from the apartment and covered Mrs. Bankhead with a pistol until two confederates followed. All three ran down the stairs and escaped.

40 FOOT WAVES HURL BOATS INTO STREETS DURING BRITISH GALE

LONDON, Oct. 23.—(AP)—A roaring gale swept a wide area of Great Britain today, lashing forty foot waves over some sections of the southern coast and forcing shipping to scurry to refuge.

The Channel Islands were cut off from the mainland when the submarine cable snapped, shutting off all telephone and telegraph communication. At Portsmouth boats were washed to the center of the city.

The famous Cowes seafront parade was flooded. A section of the balloon barrage which is intended to protect London from air raids broke loose at Carington, in Bedfordshire. The loose balloon and 1,000 feet of swinging cable endangered commercial aviation.

GAS OVERCOMES JANITOR.

Herbert Justice, a janitor at 4055 Ellis avenue, was found unconscious from gas in the basement there by his wife early yesterday. He was revived by a rescue squad.

EGYPTIAN TROOPS BATTLE STUDENT RIOTERS; 60 HURT

Police Beaten; Guns Blaze in Political Disorder.

CAIRO, Egypt, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Troops were called out tonight to quell serious anti-government rioting in which 60 persons were wounded as a special parliament session gave Premier Mustapha Nahas Pasha's government a vote of confidence.

Police fired into the 1,000 rioters, mostly students, who beat several policemen and burned a blue shirt [pro-government Wafdist Youth organization] camp before two battalions of troops arrived and assisted the police.

Blue shirt supporters retaliated tonight in a second outburst of violence by wrecking the automobile of Opposition Leader Mohammed Mahmoud Pasha outside the parliament building.

Arrow points to Cairo, scene of student riot.

They then stormed downtown, stoning windows of opposition newsaper plants.

In the first outbreak several policemen were dragged into Giza university and manhandled as they fought to halt the demonstration planned to coincide with the opening of the parliament session. The Giza students also attacked a group of the Blue Shirts, but were dispersed.

The rioting followed weeks of political agitation highlighted by a clash between the premier and popular young King Farouk.

The king was understood to have taken a strong dislike to the Blue Shirts whom Nahas insists are "soldiers of the Wafd."

The premier was said to consider his authority flouted by Farouk's appointment of the allegedly anti-Wafdist, Ali Maher Pasha, as his political adviser.

In a 30 minute session parliament gave the premier a 172 majority on a vote of confidence.

A cabinet split in which Premier Nahas ousted several ministers troubled the government.

Kills Himself with Rifle in Hotel Room in Rogers Park

Harry Stevenson, 38 years old, former clerk with the National Screw and Manufacturing company, 111 West Washington street, ended his life yesterday in his room at the Hertha apartment hotel, 1705 Jonquil terrace, by shooting himself in the head with a small rifle. A suicide note to his wife, a school teacher in Council Bluffs, Ia., was found in the room.

BELGIAN PREMIER MAY QUIT OVER BANK BONUS ROW

BRUSSELS, Oct. 23.—(AP)—The Belgian press today predicted the early resignation of Premier Paul Van Zeeland to facilitate investigation of charges that he accepted unwaranted payments from the National bank.

The predictions were published after a six hour session of the cabinet, which considered the results of a judicial investigation of the bank's administration while the Princeton educated Van Zeeland was vice governor. The premier's political enemies have charged that since he resigned the vice governorship of the bank—a $25,000 a year post—he has received bonuses from the bank contrary to law. The premiership pays $5,000.

The newspapers said Van Zeeland told the cabinet he intended to return shortly from a vacation to tender his resignation. Decision as to whether the full cabinet should resign was postponed until the premier's return. Foreign Minister Paul Spaak was considered the leading candidate to succeed Van Zeeland.

COSTLY 'HOODOO' WARSHIP BREAKS DOWN 3D TIME

Rebuilt British Vessel Now Has Leaky Hull.

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.—For the third time in three months Great Britain's $24,000,000 rebuilt battleship Warspite has broken down on trials, it was revealed today. The warship sprang serious leaks and had to limp back to the Portsmouth navy yard drydock.

Bearing out the opinion of some naval men that rebuilding is more costly than constructing new ships, the Warspite has been a hoodoo since its complete modernization was ended last July. It was scheduled to rejoin the fleet fifteen months ago.

Ship Gets Gasproof Bridges.

Built originally in 1913 at a cost of $12,500,000, the Warspite during the last three years was given a rebuilding so thorough that little was left of the original warship except the keel. The cost was more than $11,250,000.

It was the first and perhaps only warship in the world to be made completely gasproof. All the bridges and control points are arranged so that gas can be shut out and safe ventilation provided in action. On the first trials after the rebuilding the main engines broke down. Repairs required two more months.

Hull Now Is Affected.

Last month it was taken out for more trials. Again engine room troubles developed and the repairs took nearly a month. The third breakdown is believed to be most serious, since it involves the hull structure itself. The hull was entirely rebuilt above the armored deck and radically altered below.

In an effort to get a speed of twenty-four knots $2,600,000 was put into more powerful engines. It is believed now they may be too powerful, since the vibration has affected the seams. The experience with the Warspite may affect similar rebuilding now being undertaken on the battleships Queen Elizabeth and Valiant.

JOHNSON TELLS VALUE OF PUPIL GUIDANCE PLAN

Only 5 per cent of the pupils attending Chicago public high schools intend to go to college, Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, told Chicago school principals yesterday at a meeting at Fullerton hall at the Art institute. He said that the system of personal guidance and adjustment to be developed in the schools this year is planned specifically to aid the 95 per cent who will not attend college.

The estimate of college attendance was obtained last June, when every high school graduate was asked to tell whether he or she was going to college. The 5 per cent result is in contrast with the usual estimate of 10 per cent.

Dr. Johnson said that as a part of the program a committee of principals will be named this week to survey methods of teaching mathematics. "Arithmetic should be taught from the sociological standpoint as well as on a numerical basis," the superintendent said. "The pupil should know that honesty has a relationship to the correct addition of figures."

Vandals Upset Desks and Disfigure School Walls

More than $1,500 damage was done at the Kohn elementary school, 10414 South State street, Friday night by vandals. The walls were spattered with ink, desks were overturned, and a small sum of money was stolen from the office of Miss Alice Baer, principal. Michael Raymer, 7306 Union avenue, school engineer, reported the vandalism to Kensington police.

Margaret Drennan, the "girl in red" freed of slaying charge in New Brunswick, N. J., with Thomas McGovern. She denied yesterday she is to marry him.

Iselin, N. J., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Neighbors today crowded into the one story Drennan cottage or loitered outside to get a glimpse of Margaret Drennan, 20 years old, "the girl in red," who returned to her parents' home for a rest after a jury had acquitted her of murder in connection with the killing of Paul Reeves, father of her unborn child.

She was called upon to deny a published report that she and a railroad brakeman named Thomas McGovern were to be married on Tuesday. "That's silly," she exclaimed when told of the report.

"Nothing like that is going to happen," she declared. "It wouldn't be logical for me to get married now."

A Dog Fancier's Customer Takes Her Fur Coat Instead

DOUBT DR. GARR WILL BE TRIED AS DENHARDT KILLER

Shelbyville, Ky., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—With Roy Garr acquitted by a jury and Jack Garr freed by direction of the court, doubt was expressed here today that Dr. E. S. Garr ever will be brought to trial for the slaying of Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, for which the three brothers were indicted. All were to have been tried at the same time, but Dr. Garr won a delay until February because of his physical and mental condition.

Twelve farmers found Roy Garr not guilty of murder, although they heard state's testimony that Denhardt was unarmed and shot in the back. The jurors also heard defense testimony that Denhardt had threatened the Garr brothers and that he reached for his hip pocket a moment before Roy and Dr. Garr shot him.

Jack Garr was acquitted by direction of the court when it was established that he was not armed at the time of the killing. The state had made no case against him, Judge Charles C. Marshall told the jury.

TRAIN KILLS TWO IN AUTO.

Adrian, Mich., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—George B. Paine, 75 years old, a Sand Creek farmer, and Mrs. Edith Ostrander, 65 years old of Ypsilanti, his cousin and housekeeper, were killed today when Paine's car was hit by a west bound New Y[ork] Central passenger train on M-52 in Adrian.

All were to have been tried at the same time, but Dr. Garr won a delay until February because of his physical and mental condition.

Twelve farmers found Roy Garr not guilty of murder, although they heard state's testimony that Denhardt was unarmed and shot in the back. The jurors also heard defense testimony that Denhardt had threatened the Garr brothers and that he reached for his hip pocket a moment before Roy and Dr. Garr shot him.

Jack Garr was acquitted by direction of the court when it was established that he was not armed at the time of the killing. The state had made no case against him, Judge Charles C. Marshall told the jury.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S NEW ERA.

Mr. Roosevelt has had almost complete charge of this country for more than four years and in many respects things have gone from bad to worse. In 1933 he was the man who with a new vigor was going to bring the country out of its troubles at a quick step and for three or four months he had the coöperation of nearly everybody. People believed that their emergency problem needed the confident acts he undertook, intended to ease off their burdens, restore their confidence in themselves, and revive their belief in their ability to work their way out of hard times again as they had done in the past.

Possibly, as Mr. Landon said in his broadcast of Tuesday night, Mr. Roosevelt is a changed man. He may or he may not be. The only outstanding visible change in his ideas is that once he said that he would be the first to recognize the error of what he was doing, and now he is the last to do so. Apparently he thinks he has yet to make a mistake.

Mr. Roosevelt has been very little checked in anything he undertook to do. He has had more authority over congress than any President at any other time, although no other President ever asked the national legislature to do so many strange things. He didn't have his way with the Supreme court and a wornout congress in late summer deferred two or three "must" bills for which the congressmen must return to Washington next month.

The Supreme court put the national recovery act out of business before that law gave Mr. Roosevelt real cause for regret. If he isn't glad that creature of the New Deal was laid on the shelf he is ungrateful. He may say he was prevented from doing great good because his agricultural adjustment act was found outside the power of congress to legislate, but again he was more helped than injured, and the errors of agricultural administration have been proceeding in spite of judicial findings.

Who is responsible for the present condition of the nation? The answer must be Mr. Roosevelt. Recently he was obliged to tell the country that the burden of caring for the people now found to be incapable of caring for themselves in the fifth year of his promotion of national recovery would have to be shouldered by private citizens in spite of all the expenditure of government money, which has increased the national debt to 37 billions or more. The present day inherits the same liability it had when he took office, and the federal ability to handle the problem has been about exhausted.

The liability remains and Mr. Roosevelt's administration advises the nation that it is about to retire from this relief activity. That, in the beginning of these distressed times, was the principal objective. There is no relief and the situation appears the more hopeless, not only because public funds are being exhausted and private fortunes greatly depleted, but because the indigent people themselves are now despaired of as self-supporting elements.

This is the fifth year in which the White House has assumed that it had all the answers. It is time for the country to ask what they have been. The indigent are still here in undiminished numbers. They have not been helped. There has been a distribution of sectional advantages which have benefited some people by discriminating against others. The great dams, for instance, built in the Columbia, the Platte, the Loup, and the rivers of Tennessee have provided contracts and pay rolls and have used materials. Therein was a temporary local benefit, but the sum total was a capital waste relied upon as a fulcrum to raise national levels which remained untouched.

Mr. Roosevelt has converted national economy into a gigantic toy shop in which Rexford Tugwell could play with petit Trianons, Mr. Ickes with the bric-a-brac of slum clearance, and the TVA with the rivers and valleys of three or four states. For subsidies, loans, gifts, and construction without production money has been made available without stint, and the answer remains that none of it has worked to the confidently predicted result.

There has been plenty of time for the tryout. In 1933 Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers asked for only two years. Failure has increased the determination not to remove the cause but to increase it. In spite of everything that has been done to retard private enterprise nothing but private enterprise has done anything to help the country and that enterprise is almost worn out by its persecution by the government. The source of its working capital has been drained to meet governmental expenditures. Taxes prevent the use of savings for production.

Enterprisers find that their earnings are taken from them to be put in unproductive monuments. They know that if they venture and suffer loss, the loss will be theirs. If they succeed their profits will be apportioned out for governmental fallacies. To what they already have encountered they must expect more destructive additional penalties.

The United States is in the fifth year of this. It is destroying the morale, the confidence and hope upon which the recovery of the nation and the welfare of all its people completely depend. Its consequences have already brought us to the brink of a public disaster. We can be saved from it only by a return to the principles under which the American people have prospered and progressed since the founding of the republic.

ALCEO DOSSENA.

The recent death in Rome of Alceo Dossena ends one of the most remarkable careers in the history of the fine arts. For Dossena was a man of genius who devoted his gifts to making counterfeits of other men's work. His counterfeits deceived art experts throughout the world and placed in famous collections, both private and public, pieces ascribed to famous artists of the past which were in fact from the hand of Dossena. Among his victims were three of our leading galleries, the Metropolitan of New York, the Boston museum, and the Cleveland museum.

Of course, this was an achievement of criminal enterprise with the great profits going to the organizers. Dossena worked for years at moderate pay and necessarily in secrecy, and some of his admirers in Italy contend that he was innocent of criminal intent. It does not seem plausible.

In any case his fate was tragic. He was cheated of the fame his genius might have earned him during his lifetime, though it must be admitted that the highest gifts often fail of recognition and reward until the artist has died of malnutrition or old age and the high prices eventually paid for his works go to others. Why did Dossena sacrifice the gratification which the artist feels in having his gifts recognized and applauded, at least by a few enthusiasts? He must have been a strange being if he did not suffer in seeing the works of his own hand and mind, beautiful in their own right, put before the world, presumably for all time, as the work of others. Was he so modest that he found pleasure in the thought that his work was taken for the work of famous men, immortals? If it was as good as that why did he not aspire to be known himself as of their company?

His choice suggests an ironic contempt of fame. Or perhaps he was one of those natures that take delight in deception. They would rather reach an end by a crooked path than a straight one. To defeat by trickery may give a sense of superiority when the moral sense is weak. Indeed it is said there are certain races for which deceit is normal and habitual, an accepted and preferred practice in all dealings.

It may also be suggested that in the counterfeit enterprise Dossena had a reasonably quick and certain, if moderate, cash return, whereas as we have said he might have starved for years waiting for recognition. Thus we are punished for lack of hospitality to the obscure or for want of appreciation of beauty wherever it appears without acclaim.

And this tragedy may have an epilogue, composed by the ironic spirit. Now that Dossena is gone his work may be cherished for its own qualities and, despite the scandal of its history, place its creator in the aristocracy of acknowledged genius. It may be returned to museums as authentic Dossena, and be counterfeited in its turn.

BUS FIRES.

Two double deck buses of the newest type in service in Chicago have been swept by fire. None of the passengers was burned a few mornings ago in Lincoln park, although the flames spread with great rapidity and in a few minutes reduced the bus to wreckage. The quick thinking of the driver and the fact that the buses are designed to permit hasty exit saved many lives.

No doubt the coach company has taken warning and is making serious efforts to minimize the fire hazard on its buses. The matter should not be permitted to rest there, however. The city, the park board, and the Illinois commerce commission all are concerned in the matter and will be held to account if a fatal bus fire should occur. The time to prevent such a catastrophe is now and the way to prevent it is to appoint a small board of highly competent automotive engineers to investigate the accidents which have occurred, to find out what the company has done to prevent future fires, and to recommend further measures if any are required.

SLACK RESTRAINT AND ITS CAUSES.

Eight escapes within three days from the State Hospital for the Feeble Minded at Dixon is the latest reminder of the slack administration of restraints upon abnormals and criminals in this state. Another reminder in the news of the day comes with the conviction for burglary of the paroled convict, Edward Koncil, whose three escapes from the jail at Berwyn caused a momentary scandal and some mild measures of discipline in the police of that community.

Illinois will not have efficient protection from individuals who must be segregated for the protection of society until our whole machinery of restraint is taken out of politics. So long as officials and employés of our state institutions for criminals and diseased personalities are largely appointees through political influence there will be a low level of competence and responsibility throughout the protective system. All places in this service should be taken off the spoils counter. The service should be as free from political interest as the army or navy. Until this is accomplished the alliance of crime and corrupt politics will continue to evade and defeat the purposes for which our people are taxed to maintain costly institutions and an elaborate procedure.

A CENTURY OF PROGRESS.
[Detroit News.]

Oberlin college during the last week has celebrated the 100th anniversary of co-education. The fact calls to mind that women's climb to equality with men in privileges and duties has been long and slow and difficult.

It seems incredible now that there was a time when it was considered unnecessary, if not unladylike, for women to seek advanced education. The culture afforded them at the so-called "finishing" schools was carefully planned that it might not inspire ambitions to invade the fields reserved for the activities of men.

Women's clothing, women's games and recreations, women's reading, and women's employments were strictly standardized and regulated with a view to conserving the qualities thought admirable in femininity.

Less than a century ago it was considered unladylike for girls to play tennis. When first some of the bolder spirits tried the game their skill was displayed more in avoiding being entangled in their long skirts than in returning the ball. When later a few women rebelled against dragging long skirts over dirty downtown streets some dared to appear in the so-called "rainy day" skirts and were promptly dubbed "rainy daisies."

Then came the long struggle to establish woman suffrage. Great leaders of this movement, such as Lucretia Mott, Susan B. Anthony, Carrie Chapman Catt, and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, met many trials and difficulties, and men who approved their cause were subjected to ridicule and sometimes to insult. Suffrage workers were classified as "long haired men and short haired women." In those days brave indeed were the women who had their hair shortened.

But this year 139 women are members of state legislatures, seven women are members of congress, and women are serving in many other places of trust in state and national government.

How to Keep Well

"MY DOCTOR ADVISES AN OPERATION."

A FEW generations ago a surgical operation was the talk of the town. It was carried out only as a last resort—a desperate expedient to save life. The decision to "go ahead" was made only after grave deliberation and much discussion, and the surgeon was chosen with the greatest care. Infections were frequent, skill rare, and hazard was far greater than today. There is no doubt that in many cases procedures were delayed until all possibility of relief had passed. Every one dreaded a visit to a hospital because all too often it meant good-by to everything.

Has the pendulum swung too far in the opposite direction? In expert hands most surgical measures are relatively safe, and, because of this, are we engaging in too many operations, some of which may be necessary and others not?

The fundamental question to be decided is, "Is there a disease process within the body which is doing harm, undermining health, and can it be removed with reasonable security?" The word "reasonable" is used advisedly because no type of surgery is 100 per cent safe. The decision calls not only for knowledge but wisdom and honesty. Unfortunately there are some few physicians who may jeopardize lives entrusted to them without weighing all the factors involved, particularly if a substantial fee is in prospect.

The public is better informed on medical matters today than ever before, but there is one serious difficulty: there is not enough information available as to the training and integrity of physicians. The one who serves his people conscientiously, faithfully, and successfully builds that intangible thing called a reputation. We come to rely upon him because cases entrusted to him have been well managed. But we need more sources of specific enlightenment to which the average citizen can appeal when in need of medical aid.

There is no necromancy about a diagnosis. It requires hard work, much thought, and the gathering of reliable evidence. Obviously nothing should be done until a correct conclusion is reached. This presupposes a thorough examination that may require hours or even days, laboratory data, X-rays—all balanced and weighed through the use of sound judgment. There are, of course, emergencies that will not brook delay, but these constitute only a fraction of all of the operations conducted in our hospitals each day. Society has no place for the surgeon who says, "Well, it is probably some abdominal trouble. We will open and see."

Then, too, in many instances patients and members of the family are not informed as to the risk. With a nervous, apprehensive individual it may not be advisable to explain every detail, but to the intelligent, thinking person a careful description of what the disease is, where it lies, and what can be done to help usually is wise. Sometimes the one who is ill is not in possession of all his faculties, and in such a case the physician must be willing to assume more than his share of the responsibility—at least to the relatives.

But how can any one make sure that he is in the hands of the right physician or surgeon? There are several things that can be investigated. Does the physician or surgeon bear a good reputation? Has he the respect of his colleagues? Is he connected with a reputable hospital? Is he of the studious, analytical group and, therefore, one who contributes something to his art through his writings? On the other hand, is he one who trades on his personality or does he rely on his merit?

The standards of a first class hospital are a far better guide as a rule than the opinions of devoted patients. There are physicians who are loyal to their calling and who are possessed of a high sense of honor. Others, perhaps, may be mercenary. After all, the answer is found in the word "character." Uncalled for operations are performed—mayhap a goodly number—but not by trustworthy surgeons.

WATER IN MORNING.

E. T. C. writes: You suggest the use of a cup of hot water first thing in the morning, to which a teaspoonful of cream and a bit of sugar have been added. Is this to make it more palatable? Would a slice of lemon or very weak tea do as well?

REPLY.

It is the hot water that is important, not the decorations. Take it plain if you wish or add lemon. Weak tea is equally effective.

TOO MUCH HAIR.

Mrs. R. K. writes: My 2 year old girl has a fine growth of hair on her forehead and the sides of her nose and cheeks. Even her feet are affected. What can I do about this?

REPLY.

The cause of abnormal hair growth is unknown, but undoubtedly lies in some disturbance of the endocrine glands. Since the growth in this case appears in such unusual places it may be well to take the child to a specialist.

AFTERNOON TEMPERATURE.

M. E. M. writes: Does a temperature of 97.6 in the morning, which rises to 99.6 by the middle of the afternoon, indicate anything?

REPLY.

Healthy persons usually show a subnormal temperature in the morning and, in many individuals, the normal afternoon temperature is 99 or slightly higher. A temperature of 99.5 or over, however, demands investigation.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence, follow up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problem a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

BANK CHECK CHARGE.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A client of mine issued his check for $26 upon a local state bank—check was returned not sufficient funds with bill for the following protest charges: Noting for protest, 25c; protest, 75c; noting for protest, 25c; notices [25c each], $1.50; seal and certificate, 25c; postage, 15c, or a total of $3.15. On such previous occasions the bank clerk called my client and informed him that insufficient funds were on hand to clear his check. On this occasion the shortage was about $1, for which he is called upon to pay a penalty of $3.15. Assuming that all clerical work for protesting being done in the bank by bank employés seems to indicate an easy avenue to increase net earnings, not to say a legal racket at the expense of its customers upon which its existence depends.
L. J. D.

It will be legitimate for you to ask why there should be apparent duplicating items in the list. The way for the clients to protect themselves against the legitimate charges is to avoid overdrawing accounts. There is no obligation on the bank to call up the depositor before proceeding with protest. We refer you to the negotiable instruments laws.

PROBATE FOR SALABLE TITLE.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My mother owns a small tract of land consisting of about four city lots located in Illinois. She died a few years ago.
1. How can we sell this property?
2. Does it have to go through court or can we just have each of her children [four] sign it over to the buyer?
L. M.

1 Probate proceedings will be necessary in order to produce a readily salable title, but you might find a purchaser who would waive the point.
2. See 1.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ORAL AGREEMENTS.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. How binding is a verbal agreement before the law?

2 About a year ago I sold to my son and his wife a piece of property in Wisconsin. Being in a state of physical disability and weakness, I sold for less than one-half of its value with the verbal agreement that I was to have the use of the north room on the ground floor for the remainder of my life. But now they are about to install plumbing and make use of this room.
3. How can I defend myself?
4. Can I recover the property?
5. Is it advisable to have a Wisconsin lawyer or [6] one from Chicago?
M. M.

1. In general, oral agreements are binding except as to specific subject matters listed in what is called the statute of frauds.
2. Contracts relating to real estate are among those so listed.
3. Your chances of establishing an exception in your favor seem good enough to warant going over your facts in a personal interview with an attorney.
4. Probably not.
5. Yes, if you know one.
6. If you do not know a Wisconsin lawyer we would suggest that you first have an interview with a lawyer here.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—American authorities' troubles with the in-again-out-again parolee convict are among the things about the United States it is impossible for Englishmen to understand.

There is no parole in the British penal system, despite efforts by reformers to have it introduced. The British boast that it is impossible for any prisoner to bring pressure, political or otherwise, to bear to shorten his imprisonment or lighten his punishment.

One thing British criminals know—it does not pay to trifle with the courts. For the police they may have a certain amount of mockery. But once they are caught, they know better than to take any liberties with the judges. For no power can get them out of serving any sentence properly imposed by "his majesty's courts."

British judges are appointed for life. No politician can intimidate them, and they are proud of their independence. The same feeling extends through the prison administration.

Probation does exist here, and it is liberally used. Probation is dependent on the judge's discretion. He may put an old offender on probation if convinced that he will not backslide. It is done usually only if there has been a long period of good behavior since the last conviction and evidence shows that force of circumstances helped to throw the prisoner back into crime.

Probation officers must report to the prison board at least once a month on each probationer. The man on probation must report to the probation officer as often as that officer sees fit to require it. The rules are strictly enforced.

The nearest thing to parole known here is the penal servitude license, better known as the ticket of leave. It is soon to be done away with, say those in touch with prison work.

But that cannot shorten a man's sentence. It is a form of probation imposed after his normal release from prison and in force until the time knocked off his sentence for good behavior has expired.

Normally, a well behaved prisoner serves only three-fourths of a penitentiary term. If, for example, he has served three years and gets a year off, he must report to the police at intervals during that year, and must keep his address registered with the police.

The "Borstal institutions" also have something roughly approximating parole. But they are reform schools rather than prisons. Intended originally for juvenile offenders, the age limit has been raised to permit them to take prisoners up to 25 years of age if the judge thinks they will benefit by milder punishment than a regular prison term.

Borstal institutions are in many cases like prison farms. The boys are treated much as trusties on an American prison farm and are not guarded. If any of them escape, the others turn out to hunt for them.

One criticism has been that many of the inmates like the institutions so much by comparison with the grim struggle against poverty they have known outside that they escape just for the purpose of getting their sentences extended.

A Borstal boy usually is given an indeterminate sentence. He may be released whenever the authorities think he is reformed and ready to be released. Once released, he is more or less on probation, but is not under as strict regulation as the probationer.

AMERICAN WEAKNESS IN THE AIR.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—War talk, war scareheads, war fear and hysteria are sweeping the country again as in 1916 and 1917. Do you realize our air force strength in ships and pilots is so pitifully small that we are a tenth rate air power?

The secretary of war a month or so ago announced in a radio talk that we have 927 serviceable ships of which 397 are obsolete. Our army, navy, and marine defense strength is a puny 530 airplanes. There are fewer than 800 pilots—not enough to put two men in each ship. What business have we to say to any nation, "Thou shalt not do this or that"? We are inviting trouble and our bluff may be called by Russia with 5,000 ships, France with 4,300, Italy with 3,200, England with 4,000, Japan with 3,600 [approximately], and pilots to man every ship with man power to spare. A few well planned air raids by any of these countries could destroy 70% of our air strength overnight. What do we have for defense?

At least $25,000 and 16 months' time are required to train a pilot if ships were available. Long before he is trained, New York, Chicago, Denver, San Francisco, and New Orleans could be reduced to debris because the navy cannot chase airplanes across the arctic circle nor can battleships "take off" from the water.

Thank God for the 55,000 private flyers who are training themselves at their own expense, and can with but slight additional training man the airplanes of defense. The United States can depend upon these private flyers to give their lives in defending the country from invasion, but don't dare ask him to fly or fight on foreign soil, for foreign causes, for the protection of American investments or concessions in foreign countries. He and she are willing to defend but not to offend. Private flyers constitute the only air threat this country possesses. Don't try to use this force as a big stick to bluff any one not invading this country, because we declare again "We will defend but not offend." The Bureau of Air Commerce is the controling body for civilian flying. The fanatical concern for air line interest has led this bureau to formulate and issue regulations to take effect on Nov. 1, 1937, that will legislate and regulate private flyers right out of the air. These new regulations are premature and unnecessary and in the opinion of thoughtful and sincere pilots will strangle private aviation.
H. A. McGRATH,
President, National Air Pilots' association.

CROSSWORDS.

Huntington, Ind., Oct. 18.—I can't say much for THE TRIBUNE Sunday crosswords other than my good natured comment that they are rotten and smell to high heaven. O, yes, the tiny diagram is a stoic contempt for the eyesight of your readers.

Your daily crossword is ideal because its fabricator avoids the loathsome habit of introducing grotesque words that can't be found in any American dictionary extant, contenting himself with introducing difficulty by the use of unrevealing definitions. He is a gentleman whom I would freely introduce to my family and my club.

For expert crossword lunatics like me, to whom this fascinating game of solitaire has become too easy I recommend my invariable practice of discarding the printed diagram and making my own. I don't even look at the printed plat, but reproduce it from the definitions only. It is a rare game. I can reproduce exactly from the definitions any diagram, however eccentric, if only English words in good standing are used. No insane, hideous, unmitigated, asinine, unconstitutional economic royalist, reactionary, Liberty league words, if you please.
RENFRO ADAMS.

SCHOOLS FOR THE CRIPPLED.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—My plea is for the crippled children living on Chicago's north side. For eighteen years we have been fighting for a school. The only makeshift one we have now is going to be taken away and the children will have to be transported ten miles farther to school.

At the present time some of these children ride 30 miles to school and the same distance home, which means 60 miles a day for children who become ill on buses which ride worse than a truck.

There are over 300 children in the Jahn school to be transferred to the Spaulding school.

The south side has three modern schools for handicapped children. Why are we slighted? Don't the north side people of Chicago pay their taxes?
MRS. W. F. GREEK.

INCIDENT IN NORTHBROOK.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—I drove out to Northbrook, Ill., to have dinner and parked my car in front of a restaurant.

Upon returning to my car I found a tow truck in front of it. The driver said he had orders to remove my car. About that time a police officer came over and said I either had to give the driver $3 or else go to jail. I paid the tow truck driver the money and he then went across the street and talked it over with the police officer.

This must be a new way of paying your fines by giving it to a tow truck driver.
FRED SANDS.

ARE THEY BETTER TEACHERS?

Chicago, Oct. 14.—Recently a married teacher in the Chicago schools purchased a lovely home in Oak Park. Her husband has a nice position; there are no children. Husband and wife each own a car. Yet dozens of Chicago girls whose parents are paying taxes [the source from which teachers are paid] are still unassigned. Surely there is something wrong with a system which tolerates a situation of this kind.
A TAXPAYER.

EAGLE IN THE OINTMENT.

Logansport, Ind., Oct. 19.—After the gentleman had explained the manner in which your TRIBUNE insurance works he fell silent while the policy was being read over. Finally, while the "small print" was being pursued, he fervently remarked: "It's good."

"Everything THE TRIBUNE puts out is good," spoke up the lady reading the policy.

"Yes, everything but the editorials," I concluded.
DANIEL FRANCIS CLANCY.

VERY SORRY, ANNA.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—Would you please send me the name and address of the man who sent in the letter to your paper on our President's speach, titled "Ables' Irish Roosevelt?" It sounds like the same man who spoke to me and I'd like to meet this nice man as none of us had a chance to give each other our names as we got lost in the crowds when the President drove through. I'd like very much to see this man again some time.
ANNA.

FIRST HAND.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Will some one tell me how to force the committee on local transportation to take a ride on a 18th street car between 6:30 and 8:30 a. m., or 4:30 and 7:30 p. m.? I will help them hang on a step.

G-MEN HAND OUT LISTS OF RANSOM BILLS' NUMBERS

Tracing of Money Sole Hope in Ross Case.

More than 10,000 copies of the serial numbers of the bills paid as ransom to the kidnapers of Charles S. Ross have been distributed in the Chicago area by federal agents in the last five days.

Thus far only one of the ransom bills, a $10 one, has been turned in. This was traced to a bank in Blue Island, where the trail ended, because it was impossible to tell who deposited the bill.

The acute interest of the federal men in the money was taken as an indication that all other clews to the kidnapers have proved useless.

Plan Patient Campaign.

Apparently the governments' investigators have decided on one of their long campaigns of watchfulness and are prepared to expend time and man power in patient tracing of each bill that appears. This method, they reason, will almost certainly lead in the end to the men sought.

There is little hope that Ross will be found alive. When his wife paid $50,000 for his freedom those who negotiated with her promised to deliver him unharmed almost immediately. The pledge was not kept and the fear has grown that the victim, who is 72 years old and suffers from heart disease, died in the hands of his captors.

Report Ransom on Market.

The G-men have received reports that some of the ransom money has been offered for sale at a discount by underworld brokers. One such rumor has been investigated. Although the agents refused to talk about it, it was learned that results so far have been negative and that little confidence is placed in this line of search. It is being followed, however, on the theory that every clew, however slim, should be traced.

Ross has now been missing four weeks. He was kidnaped in Wolf road near the Westward Ho golf course on Sept. 25 as he and his former secretary, Miss Florence Freihage, were returning from a dinner at Sycamore.

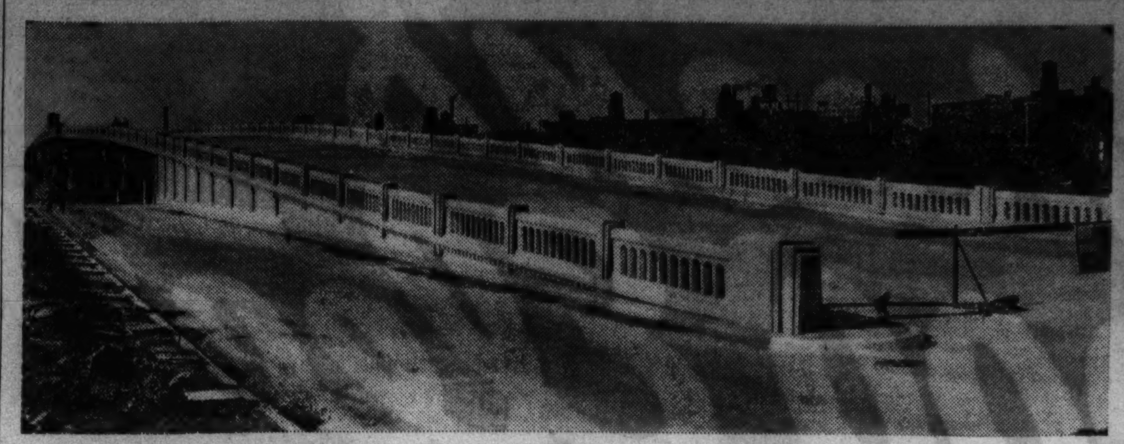
New Pershing Road Bridge to Be Opened Today



Looking west from Racine avenue at newly completed grade separation structure on Pershing road, which will carry street trafic over the tracks of the Chicago Junction railroad and the south branch of the Chicago river. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Ceremonies Slated

A colorful ceremony will mark the opening today of Pershing road from Halsted street to Ashland avenue. Passing through the Union stockyards, this link in a four lane highway opens to southsiders the first east-west thoroughfare between 35th and 47th streets.

The improvement includes a 1200 foot viaduct over the Chicago Junction railroad tracks and the south branch of the Chicago river. Built by the state highway department with the aid of PWA funds, the one mile improvement cost $518,000.

Locomotives passing under the viaduct will blow their whistles, giving the signal for similar blasts from the many industrial plants in the neighborhood. A parade of 80 automobiles will end at the bridge.

SHOOTS HIS WIFE IN HOSPITAL WITH WEEK OLD BABY

Springfield, O., Oct. 23.—(AP)—The mother of a week old baby was wounded in the hand tonight and the maternity ward of the City hospital was plunged into turmoil by a man who fired five shots from a revolver. An intern disarmed the man, who was identified as the husband of Mrs. Leonard Compton, 20, who was shot. Compton, 22, told the police that he shot his wife because of the baby. Four other mothers in the ward screamed in fright as the firing began. Compton recently was released from jail after serving a sentence for assault.

AGENTS SEIZE ROCKFORD STILL.

Agents under E. C. Yellowley, district supervisor of the federal alcohol tax unit, yesterday seized a 500 gallon still in a raid at 1314 Victoria avenue, Rockford. James Anastase was arrested.

11 PERSONS HURT IN NEW YORK CITY BY 88 MILE WIND

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Eleven of the 250 men asleep in the fifth floor dormitory of the Municipal lodging house, were injured today. An eighty-eight mile gale swept this city blew down a scaffold built around a smokestack. Part of the scaffold plunged through a 20 foot square skylight, showering the sleepers below with broken glass and metal. Only one of the injured required hospital treatment.

In Yonkers, one of the landmarks of Westchester county, the 142-foot brick water tower atop Nodine Hill, cracked almost at its base and collapsed during a violent storm in the Hudson hills.

Nearby residents said there was "one great roar, then a tremendous splash." And a wave eighteen inches high ran down the 400 foot hill along Elm street. Nearly 285,000 gallons of water were in the tower's steel tank. It was fifteen minutes before an emergency crew could shut off the flow in the water mains.

WOMAN DIES AFTER FALL.

Mrs. Minnie Gocker, 66 years old, died yesterday at County hospital after her right leg was fractured in a fall at her home, 537 Circle avenue, Forest Park, on Sept. 23.

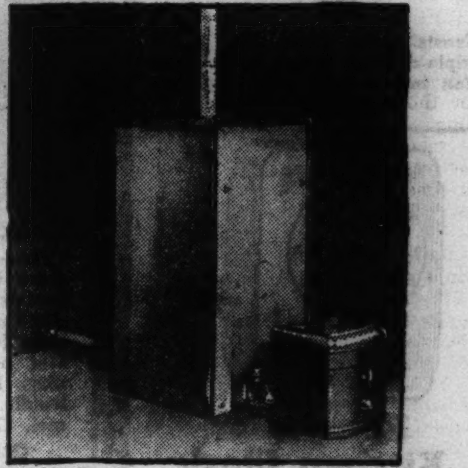
ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE



...if you have an
IRON FIREMAN
AUTOMATIC COAL BURNER

The most comfortable heating any home can have is the kind that saturates the entire building with a steady continuous flow of mellow warmth—that warms all the way through. That is the kind of heating job an Iron Fireman does—plenty of heat all the time all the way through. Floors are warm and stay warm.

Coal gives off its heat in a steady, continuous flow. The fire is never suddenly blazing hot one minute and "dead as a mackerel" the next. It is always there—always giving off heat. It regulates itself automatically, and when full on makes a bright, clear flame like oil or gas. When it shuts down it does so gradually, always leaving a bed of coals which continue to give off heat and prevents the house from cooling off.

That is why we say that Iron Fireman heating is the most wholesome and comfortable, as well as the most economical. Iron Fireman heating costs far less than any other form—even less than hand-firing.

Have you thought of installing an Iron Fireman in your present heating plant and having at low cost and on easy terms the finest, most economical heating that money can buy?

Ask an authorized Iron Fireman dealer to quote you.

HORSE AND DOG TRACKS IN EAST GANG INFESTED

Battle Over Narragansett Rages On.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Providence, R. I., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—A martial law over the Narragansett horse park has spotlighted a mixture of politicians, gamblers and outright gangsters who are banded together for the purpose of lining their pockets, but the disease is not localized in this one spot. The eastern seaboard reeks with it.

The bootleggers along the coast turned to the horse and dog tracks after prohibition put an end to their income from the running of booze. They're still "in the money."

In New York state a closely knit little fraternity of 100 bookmakers runs the betting at the horse tracks. This cunning circle has up to date prevailed upon the legislature, by one means or another, to keep out the pari-mutuel machines which are supposed to give the betting public a better break because automatic fingers are not as sticky as human ones.

Organized by Beer Lord.

The New York dog tracks, organized by the late Arthur [Dutch Schultz] Flegenheimer, the Bronx beer lord, ran this season with the aid of timely injunctions in the courts and studied apathy on the part of local officials. This notorious racket, controled by doctoring up the greyhounds in a variety of ways, has not been sanctioned by the New York legislature.

The bow-wows are also running openly in Massachusetts where dog racing rose to its full flower during the last two years when James Michael Curley was the governor. Directors and officials of the tracks are, in numerous instances, men with criminal records. The track at Taunton is partly owned and controled by one Edward J. O'Hare, former partner of Al Capone in some of his Chicago ventures.

Here in Rhode Island a bitter feud over domination of the Democratic party machinery spilled over into the unprecedented action of Gov. Robert E. Quinn in sending National Guard troops to close the horse park. Quinn is striving to oust Walter E. O'Hara, his political foe, as head of the track. The struggle has brought out an amazing story of corruption.

Investigate Kidnaping Attempt.

The police are investigating the tale of an attempted kidnaping told by the nursemaid to the infant son of Secretary of State Louis W. Cappelli. The woman, Mrs. Mary Cabral, declared two days ago that a pair of hoodlums, one of them armed, invaded the Cappelli back yard looking for the child who happened to be being wheeled around the block at the moment.

Detectives have disclosed that the woman has told several conflicting stories. The Providence Star-Tribune, owned by O'Hara, claims the whole thing was a hoax to turn public sympathy toward the governor. Secretary Cappelli, who was elected on the Quinn ticket last fall, declared that he was "fully and firmly convinced" that the incident had taken place.

Meanwhile, a federal investigation has been launched into the payment of $72,000 in race track money to public officials. Some went to persons in the Quinn camp and other payments were made to cronies of O'Hara, including a gift of $5,000 to Mayor Thomas P. McCoy, of Pawtucket in which the besieged track is located.

Voters Are Bewildered.

The people of Rhode Island, bewildered at the corruption unveiled, are growing sick of the whole mess and it appears now that if the law legalizing gambling is put up to them in a referendum it will be defeated.

Narragansett enjoyed the distinction of having more money bet there than at any other horse track in the country last year. Since 1934, when the track opened, a total of 110 million dollars has been pushed through the pari-mutuel windows. This betting volume is equivalent to the amount all the workers in all the manufacturing concerns in Rhode Island earn in a year.

CHIEF LAWYER ILL, COURT HALTS HAHN HEARING

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Illness of the chief defense counsel for Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, Attorney Joseph Hoodin, today postponed the regular Saturday morning session of her trial for the arsenic murder of Jacob Wagner last June 3. Common pleas Judge Charles S. Bell announced the trial will continue on Monday.

Some testimony remains to be presented to connect more closely with Mrs. Hahn two salt shakers, one of which contained arsenic and table salt, found in the satchel of George Obendorfer after his violent death by arsenical poisoning in a Colorado Springs hotel Aug. 1.

A series of witnesses will continue to tell on the stand Monday more about her relations with Albert Palmer, 72 years old, another elderly suitor of Mrs. Hahn's, who died, the state contends, of arsenical poisoning, last March.

Leon Mandel II. Divorced on Charge of Cruelty

After a brief hearing before Judge Philip J. Finnegan of the Circuit court Mrs. Virginia Moran Mandel was granted a divorce on the ground of cruelty yesterday from Leon Mandel II., vice president and general manager of Mandel Brothers store. No contest was made by Mr. Mandel. It was indicated that an alimony settlement had been made out of court. The two were married Sept. 19, 1935, on Mr. Mandel's yacht Buccaneer, which is now his home. Mrs. Mandel has lived in the Blackstone hotel since the separation.

TRACE OF NEGRO BLOOD BARS HER FROM RESIDENCE

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Any appreciable amount of negro blood is sufficient to prevent a person from occupying a home in a residential restricted district in Los Angeles, according to a ruling by Superior Judge Charles Burnell. The judge today granted an injunction against Mrs. Hattie S. Burns and thereby ruled that she and her family may not occupy a house in the West Adams district.

"Even though it is shown that some of a person's ancestors were white, the mere fact that they do have colored blood in their veins is sufficient to place them in the category of a Negro within the meaning of residential restrictions," Judge Burnell said.

"DO BETTER JOB," MRS. ROOSEVELT TELLS STUDENTS

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Speaking before several hundred Cornell women students today, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt advised her listeners, if they would be successful in life, to "do more than get by."

"College graduates," she said, "during the past years have gotten jobs easier than girls with grade school educations, but, at that, there were many college graduates who had accepted jobs as salesgirls in department stores."

"This," she maintained, "was deplorable, since it took jobs from less fortunate girls and in many cases ruined the prospective careers of the country's educated women."

ILLINOIS LABOR UNITY GOAL OF STATE LEADERS

Watch C. I. O.-A. F. of L. Peace Parley.

BY WILLIAM BROMAGE.

Unity in the labor movement in Illinois will not be difficult to attain if a peace agreement is reached between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization, state labor leaders asserted yesterday.

While they are hopeful that the labor peace conference between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. which begins in Washington tomorrow may lead to the settlement which they assert must ultimately be reached, labor chiefs here express the belief that considerable time will be required to heal the breach caused by John L. Lewis when he formed the C. I. O. after he found he could not control the A. F. of L.

Rank and File Seeks Peace.

Illinois labor leaders throughout the two year internal strife have maintained that the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. controversy is one primarily involving national leaders and is unwanted by rank and file union members.

On that basis, and realizing that bitterness and recrimination can result only in widening the breach, federation leaders here have exerted their influence to keep the controversy from becoming a rank and file affair.

They have been able to succeed in large measure because of the strong feeling among the rank and file of both sides that only through unity can the legitimate aims of organized labor be realized. Union workers want the strife ended and they want the labor movement under the A. F. of L. banner.

Illinois Leans to A. F. of L.

Illinois is predominately an A. F. of L. state. In fact, it is one of the strongest federation states. Considerably less than one quarter of organized workers in the state belong to C. I. O. unions, according to informed sources.

There will be only one major problem to solve in reconciling labor interests in Illinois, federation leaders say. That is the situation created by the chartering of the Progressive Miners' union by the A. F. of L. to replace the suspended United Mine Workers of America. That problem complicates the national situation also. The Progressive union was formed in Illinois in 1932 by U. M. W. members who revolted against the dictatorial control of the miners by Lewis.

While the Progressive-U. M. W. situation makes the national labor problem more difficult, an adjustment of that controversy will make easier a settlement of the older fight in Illinois, the leaders assert.

Aside from the mine situation, there is no major strife between A. F. of L. and C. I. O. unions in Illinois. Though in the steel organization drive the C. I. O. disregarded jurisdiction of steel plant craft unions, that difficulty can be handled the labor leaders say.

TEST TELEVISION FOR USE IN WAR BY AIR FLEETS

PARIS, Oct. 23.—(AP)—The French and British general stafs are testing a new system of liaison in their air fleets by television, informed aviation sources said tonight.

These sources said the stafs were conducting experimental flights, sending the positions of their planes to distant posts by transmitting pictures of the region over which they were flying.

A French plane went to Hendon, England, today for trials. Other flights were expected to be made in southern France and North Africa. Gen. Andre Niessel, former member of the French superior war council, recently said orders could be flashed by television in a fraction of the time it would take to send them by radio.

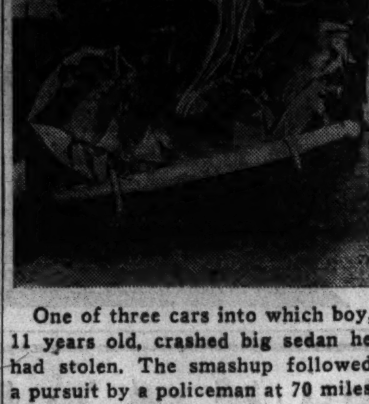
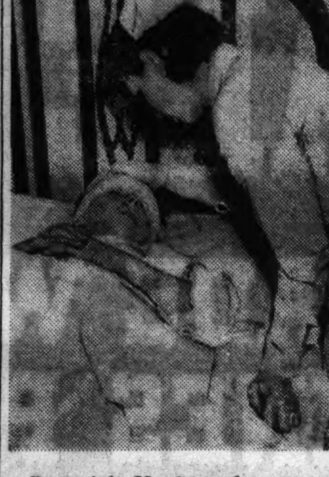
Wreck Ends Thrill



One of three cars into which boy, 11 years old, crashed big sedan he had stolen. The smashup followed a pursuit by a policeman at 70 miles an hour.



Roderick Hughes, the young adventurer, attended by a nurse in hospital after pursuer had pulled him from flaming auto.

Roderick Hughes, 11 years old, got up early yesterday to go fishing, but when he saw an expensive new automobile parked in front of 3260 Lake Shore drive he took it and started out for a ride. Park Police Sergeant Thomas Pavlis saw him speeding north in the outer drive at Fullerton avenue.

The chase ended in Waveland avenue near Racine avenue where the boy lost control of the car. It crashed into three parked machines, then overturned and burst into flames. Roderick was taken to the American hospital, where it was found he was not seriously hurt. His home is at 503 Aldine avenue. The owner of the car is Mrs. Grey Sullivan of the Lake Shore drive address.

U. S. ITINERARY OF DUKE STARTS FROM NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The itinerary of the duke and duchess of Windsor for their tour of this country was learned today. They will start their tour in New York by visiting the PWA housing projects in Williamsburg and Harlem.

A highlight of their trip will be the presence of the duke at the gridiron dinner in Washington on Dec. 11. This is an annual function of Washington newspaper correspondents. President Roosevelt plans to attend the dinner and the justices of the Supreme court in all likelihood will be there. The duchess will be entertained by Mrs. Roosevelt at the gridiron "widows'" party, given by wives of the correspondents.

The couple will visit Langston homes, a PWA project in the District of Columbia after a stop in the duchess' home city, Baltimore.

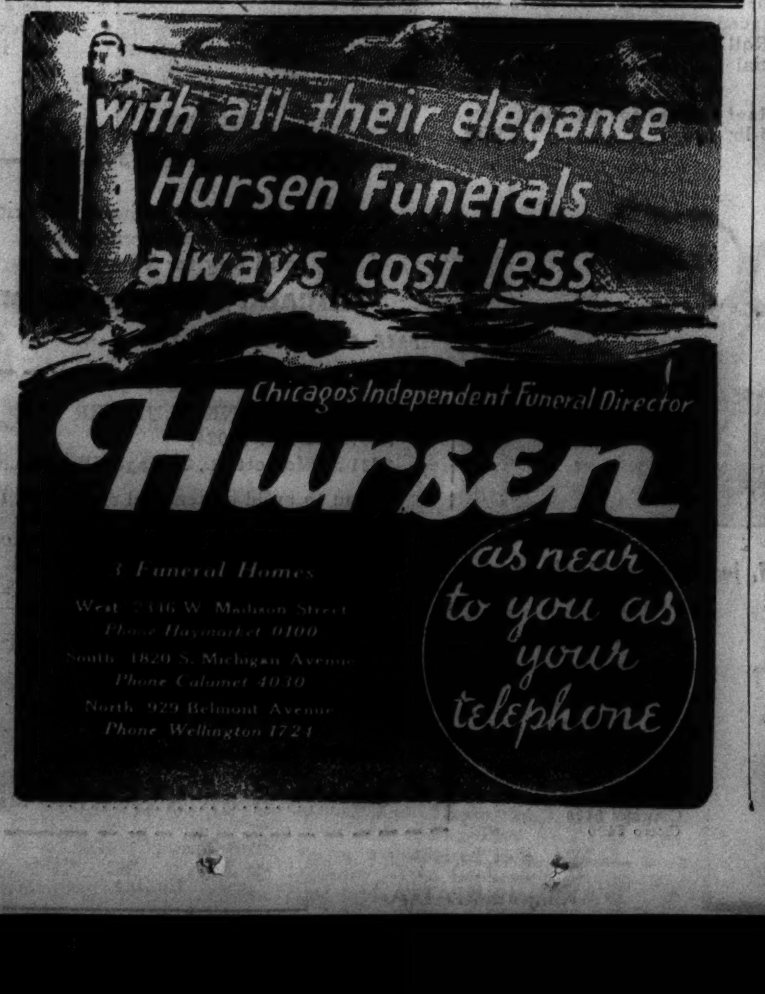
Other points to be visited on their tour are Peckwood homes in Atlanta, Ga., the first low cost housing project erected in the United States; Housing projects in Montgomery, Ala., and in Chicago, including the Jane Addams houses in Chicago.

Similar projects in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Minneapolis, and Milwaukee and the Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams in the northwest area will be visited.

The duke and duchess also contemplate a visit to Henry Ford and his automobile plant in Detroit.

Widow Plunges to Death from Apartment Window

Mrs. Irene Alleggretti, 34 years old, a widow, was killed yesterday in a fall from the dining room window of her apartment on the sixth floor of the building at 7150 Cyril avenue. Her son William, 19 years old, was asleep in another room at the time. Friends told the Grand Crossing police that Mrs. Alleggretti had been despondent since the death of her husband, Michael, a florist, a year ago.



SEWER PROJECTS TO EMPLOY 9,900 PUT BEFORE WPA

Mayor Requests Approval of $5,604,698 Jobs.

Mayor Kelly yesterday requested WPA approval of a dozen sewer projects that would cost $5,604,698 and furnish employment to approximately 9,900 men. In addition he asked for completion of sewer projects now under construction, requiring $597,350 to keep 1,062 men at work.

To make these projects possible under federal restrictions on material expenditures, Mayor Kelly proposes to contribute 2,700,000 brick. These are to be obtained from demolition of buildings, principally on the site of the new PWA housing project at South parkway and 37th street. The city is getting the salvage for wrecking without cost to the owner.

Ready to Start Work.

Engineering plans have been drawn for the new sewer projects and working schedules prepared to start Nov. 1. The larger projects, their cost, and description follow:

MICHIGAN-ST. CLAIR, $726,032. About 1¼ miles long, 4½ to 8 feet in diameter, between Walton street and the Chicago river, including Michigan avenue, St. Clair street, and Superior street.

KOSTNER AVENUE, $1,212,033. About 1.75 miles long, and including Pulaski road and Kilbourn avenue. With Western-Leavitt project, it will permit the closing of the west fork of the south branch of the river from Leavitt street to the city limits.

WESTERN-LEAVITT, $413,872. About one-half mile long and 9 feet in diameter, extending present sewers in the neighborhood near the south branch of the river along these streets.

97TH STREET, $1,096,211. About four miles, from 2 to 7 feet in diameter, on 97th and other streets between South Park avenue and Sangamon street.

74TH STREET, $470,481. About 1.75 miles long, from Stony Island avenue east on 74th street, 69th street, and Merrill avenue. Unlike other projects, this will use concrete pipe cast on the job.

ARCHER HEIGHTS, $294,028. About 4½ miles long, 12 to 15 inches in diameter, supplementing existing sewers in the Archer Heights system.

PULLMAN, $752,200. About 5 miles long, from 3 to 8 feet in diameter, in various parts of the Pullman district.

Other Projects Listed.

Other projects will be in North Edgebrook, South Chicago, and the far northwest side. Plans for completion of all of them by July 1, 1938. Day and night shifts may be used on the Michigan-St. Clair project because of the importance of the neighborhood through which it runs.

Busy drawing up WPA projects to employ 60,000 men, the staf in the city department of public works has been working nights and will be on duty today. Mayor Kelly hopes to lighten the relief load, which normally increases during the winter, by the transfer of able bodied men on relief to WPA.

The city council last week approved $1,260,000 additional funds for the Chicago relief administration for the remainder of this year, but a shortage of at least 13 per cent still exists.

X-ray showing how the pin is lodged in her esophagus.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.] — While physicians carefully studied its course, an open safety pin lodged in her esophagus meant little today to Marie de Simone, 18 years old. She was holding the pin in her mouth when she laughed at a sister's joke. Down went the pin. Miss de Simone was taken to Gallinger hospital, where she laughed again and said it didn't hurt. But physicians are anxious lest it turn upside down or get lodged in the stomach.

REVEAL MOTHER AND SON REUNION AFTER 30 YEARS

A hearing yesterday before Judge Oscar Caplan in the Stockyards court brought out the story of a recent reunion between Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan Marks, 63 years old, 6458 Union avenue, and her son, Earl Sullivan, 31 years old, 2447 Chicago avenue, after a separation of thirty years.

When Sullivan was 3 months old his mother placed him in the care of a family named Pearson, who soon afterward went to Sweden. On their return they told her her son had died abroad. A few months ago Mrs. Marks, who had remarried, received information that her son was living, and reached him through a radio broadcast.

Sullivan, who until the reunion went by the name of Pearson, has visited his mother often since then. He was arrested Friday night on a disorderly conduct charge made by his newly found sister, Mrs. Katherine Hasenfang. He charged the arrest to jealousy. The case was continued to Oct. 28.

$2,750 PERSONAL TAXES LEVIED ON JACOBUS ESTATE

Homer T. Cook, chairman of the Lake county board of review, announced yesterday that personal property taxes totaling $2,750 had been assessed against the estate of Mrs. Jessie M. Jacobus, 920 South Linden avenue, Highland Park, who died Sept. 19, 1936. An inventory filed recently in the Lake county court showed that Mrs. Jacobus owned personal property valued at $333,000, on which no tax had been paid for three years. The county board has under consideration eighty-five estates on which, it is suspected, there have been underpayments of personalty taxes.

TVA BIG ISSUE IN TENNESSEE'S ELECTION FIGHTS

Charges Fly To and Fro in Democratic Contests.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The Tennessee Valley Authority has become a football in Tennessee politics. At Nashville, where the Democrats, split wide open, are in the midst of a factional fight in the legislature, TVA has been punted into the scrap. As a side diversion opponents at times protest their undying love for the Authority and its 520 million dollar experiment in social planning and accuse each other of seeking to do the Authority dirt.

Knoxville, now in the throes of a city election, is making a slap-bang issue of TVA and a municipal plan to dispense TVA electricity. All candidates for mayor are whooping it up for TVA, the big spender which turned a golden flood from the federal treasury into the region while Norris dam was building. Some of the rivals are accusing others of having their fingers crossed. It sounds like Chicago in the old days when immediate municipal ownership—I. M. O.—the street cars and the strap-hangers were the political football.

Thinking of More Dams.

Meanwhile in its headquarters, the authority sits somewhat like an opulent buddah, saying little but apparently thinking of more dams to build on the Tennessee tributaries.

The city some years back voted for a municipal distributing system. Litigation tied it up. Now it is getting ready to go ahead with the project.

The Journal urges editorially that duplication of systems would be wasteful, and it proposes that TVA should sell power at wholesale to the local utility company which now furnishes service, and that the local company retail the juice at reduced rates.

The News-Sentinel which is pro-TVA, says the authority takes the ground that it is not free to enter into such a contrast with the private utility company because that would nullify the vote cast by Knoxville for a municipal system.

Large Firms Get Contract.

Old rugged individualism has become one of the leading beneficiaries of TVA, this through the contracts for prime and secondary power in large blocks given by the authority to a few large chemical and metallurgical industries.

In some of the valley cities, notably those in the Muscle Shoals area, one criticism is that TVA gives current to these industries at about half the price it charges municipalities. In Florence, Ala., the TVA power used by the municipal distributing system costs 5 mills per kilowatt hour of consumption. This is on the basis of TVA's estimate of 1938 revenue presented to a congressional committee in April.

In Athens, Ala., it costs 5½ mills a kilowatt hour, in Tuscumbia 6.8 mills.

The current furnished the municipalities, of course, is all the year around current. Under the industrial contracts, four of which are most talked of by critics, the power is part time, but largely secondary, or power which is not available all the year around. It depends on rainfall. The average rate for these concerns for TVA juice is figured by engineers at 2.25 mills per kilowatt hour consumed.

Helps "Economic Royalists."

Critics declaim that economic royalists are thus getting the cream. The TVA takes the ground that it did a good stroke of business by selling this secondary power, or part time power, to large industries which can use it in their furnaces, as otherwise a market would not easily be found.

Besides the Aluminum company which has a contract for 100,000 kilowatts of bargain rate power a year, TVA has a contract with the Monsanto Chemical company for the sale of up to 50,000 kilowatts demand of electrical energy. The company is to build a $6,000,000 plant at Columbia, Tenn. The electric furnaces however use tremendous amounts of energy, but few employés.

Chemical Firm Has Contract.

The Victor Chemical company is building a million dollar plant at Mount Pleasant, Tenn., to take advantage of deposits of phosphate rock. It has a contract which may run as high as 32,000 kilowatt demand of power at Muscle Shoals.

The Electro Metallurgical, a subsidiary of the Union Carbide and Carbon company has a contract for the purchase of 40,000 kilowatts of power. The corporation has assets of over 400 million dollars but one protest in the Muscle Shoals area is that it will probably employ only a few hundred men and will not build up much of an industrial pay roll for the neighboring cities. Florence has been shouting for small and diversified industries.

MRS. KATHERINE GEGAN.

Mrs. Katherine Gegan, 25 years old, a divorcée who used her maiden name, Fitzgibbons, in two recent court appearances, was found dead from motor exhaust fumes yesterday in the garage behind her home at 730 Ridge avenue, Evanston. She was the mother of a daughter 9 years old.

Lieut. Carl Ekman of the Evanston police said her body was found on the front seat of her automobile. The ignition was turned on and the gasoline tank was empty. The garage doors were closed, but not locked. Lieut. Ekman said she apparently backed the car into the garage early in the morning and fell asleep with the engine running. The young woman's mother, Mrs. Lavinia Fitzgibbons, who found the body, said the daughter had been absent from home since 6 p. m. Thursday.

Last June 16 Mrs. Gegan appeared in the Women's court after a disturbance in her room in a near north side hotel. On the same day she appeared in another court charged with driving an automobile without the owner's consent. She was arrested June 1 after driving a taxicab into a bridge abutment at 21st and Canal streets.

19 HURT IN CRASH THAT KILLED 10 ARE RECOVERING

Mason City, Ia., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Nineteen high school students injured yesterday when the streamlined Rocket of the Rock Island railroad crashed into a school bus and killed ten others were recovering in two hospitals here today. Only four were considered to be in serious condition, but even their chances were declared to be good if complications are escaped.

State and railroad officials made preliminary investigations today at the brickyards grade crossing where the new high speed train came from behind a pile of tile to demolish the Renwick, Ia., bus and scatter 29 dead and injured along 500 yards of the right-of-way. George Simpson, the engineer said he was moving at about 25 miles an hour, preparing to stop at the station a mile away.

Two teachers seven students and the bus driver were killed in the worst accident since the advent of streamlined trains in the middlewest. A coroner's jury was taken to the morgue to view the bodies and later to the scene of the accident. An inquest will be conducted Monday.

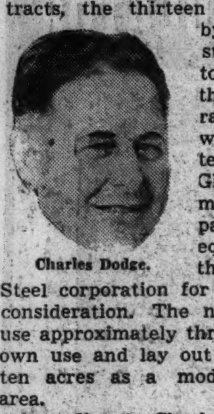
United States Steel Corporation Sells 13 Acres for New Industrial District

GLOBE COMPANY TO SPEND HALF MILLION DOLLARS

Ten Acres Will Be Sold as Factory Sites.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

One of Chicago's oldest industrial tracts, the thirteen acres bounded by 40th and Root streets, Princeton avenue and the Pennsylvania railroad tracks, was bought yesterday by the Globe company, manufacturer of packing house equipment, from the United States Steel corporation for an undisclosed consideration. The new owner will use approximately three acres for its own use and lay out the remaining ten acres as a modern industrial area.



Charles Dodge.

According to Charles Dodge, president of the Globe company, new streets will be cut through the ten acre tract, which is to be known as the Globe Industrial district. The land will be subdivided into factory sites and placed on the market at once by the Globe company.

Has Historic Background.

The ground has been owned by the American Bridge company, a United States Steel subsidiary. The property has a historic background, for in 1879 sections for the world's first steel bridge, erected over the Missouri river at Glasgow, Mo., were fabricated there.

On the thirteen acre tract there are now a group of buildings containing 245,400 square feet of floor space. The largest, a one story structure containing 64,975 square feet, and extending along 40th street from the Pennsylvania tracks to Princeton avenue, is to be occupied by the Globe company.

According to Dodge, the company's two plants at 824 West 36th street, Chicago, and in St. Louis, Mo., are to be consolidated at the new location.

James H. McQuade, consulting, construction, and valuation engineer for the Globe company, said a new east and west street will be cut through the tract and a new thoroughfare will be extended from it south to Root street. In addition, Stewart avenue will be widened from 40th street to Root street.

First Large Unit Sold.

It is understood that approximately half a million dollars will be spent by the new owner in modernizing and developing the thirteen acres into an industrial district.

Edgar G. Ball, real estate broker, represented the purchaser of the property and Paul Schwartz acted for the seller.

The transaction is the first large unit of land sold by the United States Steel corporation of its 3,650 acres in the Chicago area, which it announced last May it would place on the market. Arthur C. Wilby is in charge of the Chicago district real estate operations, with E. D. Hollinshead managing the sales.

In addition to yesterday's sale it was announced U. S. Steel has sold 145 homes in Gary for $598,000 since last May.

Properties for sale in the Chicago district are held by the following U. S. Steel subsidiaries: Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, Universal Atlas Cement company, American Steel and Wire company, American Bridge company, Scully Steel and Iron company, and the Gary Land company.

AIR CONDITION INSTALLATIONS BREAK RECORDS

Air conditioning contracts closed in Chicago during the first nine months of 1937 set a new high record both in number and capacity, according to the Commonwealth Edison company. Contracts for 549 installations were made, compared with 398 during the first nine months of 1936, an increase of 38 per cent. Capacity aggregated 11,367 horsepower, compared with 7,099 in the same period last year, a gain of 60 per cent.

A total of 291 electric room cooler units was contracted for during the nine months, against 184 a year ago, an increase of 58 per cent.

During September 16 air conditioning contracts were closed, compared with 14 in September, 1936. Capacity of the installations, however, showed a slight decrease.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago during the week of Oct. 15 to 21, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled 24, with a combined cost of $488,000. For the corresponding week last year there were 34 contracts totaling $439,900. So far this year the total cost of contracts is $46,547,483, compared with $36,875,900 for the same period last year.

Appraisers Protest U. S. Tax Dodging

The Northern Illinois chapter, No. 6, of the Society of Residential Appraisers at its last meeting on Oct. 19 passed resolutions protesting the proposed exemption of taxes for the Public Works administration's three federal housing projects in Chicago and the substitution of a so-called "service charge."

The resolution asserted that such total or partial tax exemption would be in unfair competition with privately built and owned housing, which is required to bear the full rate of taxation.

If the PWA builds enough housing units to accommodate all citizens who should be entitled to the same consideration from their government, the resolution pointed out, the tax burden on privately owned real estate would become unbearable and amount to confiscation.

Taxes on the $13,847,211 housing projects in Chicago, if owned by private interests, would amount to about half a million dollars. The federal government has offered to pay a "service charge" of $39,731 annually instead of taxes. It is this gift of nearly $460,000 asked by Landlord Uncle Sam to which the appraisers object.

SANTA FE PAYS $465,000 FOR TERMINAL LAND

Work has started on an extensive building program by the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe railroad of enlargement and modernization of its passenger engine and coach terminal on the west side of Wentworth avenue, between 16th street and Archer avenue. The railroad has purchased approximately three acres at the northwest corner of Wentworth and Archer from James B. Angell for $465,000.

The enlargement of the terminal includes construction of a Diesel and air conditioning repair shop, approximately 300 by 65 feet, equipped with overhead traveling crane and modern machinery for servicing high speed Diesel electric engines and temperature control equipment.

There also will be a two story servicing building of about the same dimensions and a single story building 400 by 30 feet to accommodate various activities such as carpet cleaning, Pullman servicing, generators, battery repair, paint shops, storage facilities, and locker rooms.

The plans also contemplate construction of a new power house, enlargement of the roundhouse and turn table, erection of an enlarged yard for cleaning and servicing passenger equipment, and additional storage tracks. There will be a pit 1,200 feet long for inspecting high speed trains.

Williams Bldg. to Have New Elevators and Lobby

Plans are being drawn by Holabird & Root for a modernization program for the ten story Williams building, at the southwest corner of Wells and Monroe streets, which is expected to cost about $30,000. A new lobby and new elevators will be installed.

With a full basement it will have a total of 9,200 square feet, all of which is to be air conditioned throughout the year.

According to W. C. Melohn, renting agent for the Cummings estate and manager of the building, who negotiated the lease, the lessee will spend approximately $20,000 in preparing the big unit for opening on Nov. 8. Charles Upham represented the Walgreen company.

The Walgreen lease is for fifteen years on a minimum guarantee basis, plus a percentage of gross profits. The company has 505 stores throughout the country, 213 units in Chicago.

SITES ACQUIRED FOR 15 HOUSES IN NORTH PARK

The Community Home Builders, Inc., yesterday purchased sites for fifteen new homes, which, according to Norman R. Petersen, president, will be improved with houses scheduled for April 1 occupancy. All locations are in the North Park area, north of Albany Park, also known as the Kimball-Bryn Mawr section. Paul Frederick Olsen and William Presto are architects. Each house will have a different design and the total investment, it was asserted, will be more than $200,000.

Petersen said his company has completed eight homes in the North Park area. It also has just built two residences to order in Park Ridge. One is at 115 Berry parkway, owned by Joseph Ossoski, mortgage banker, and the other is at 716 Merrill avenue, Max Shipley owner. Reuben H. Johnson was architect.

Survey Shows Few Vacant Stores in Loop District

A survey of stores in the Chicago loop district just made by Prof. L. M. McDermott of De Paul university shows that there are now 3,539, as compared with 3,511 in 1936, and 3,538 in 1935. The number of stores above the first floor was 827 in 1937, 802 in 1936, and 794 in 1935. On the north and south loop streets the most vacant stores were found on Wells street, with twelve unrented. Dearborn was second with ten of its 206 stores vacant.

Field Estate Will Remodel 71st St. Corner

The Marshall Field estate will spend approximately $165,000 in remodeling and enlarging all stores in the three story building at the northeast corner of 71st street and Oglesby avenue, it was learned yesterday. Each of the fourteen stores fronting on 71st street will be doubled in depth by adding sixty feet to the north. When completed each store will be approximately 17 by 128 feet. Raymond Gregori is architect.

Leases already have been renewed by the Cutler Shoe company, A. W. Klein, David Citon, and E. J. Ryan. The Walk-Over and Le Boy's leases continue. Sally Frocks and Lanathan's will move from nearby locations to the remodeled units.

Work will be started tomorrow, with completion set for Jan. 15. An effort will be made by the owners to have a diversity of colors in Neon tube signs over the fourteen stores. All stores will be required to keep their windows lighted until late at night. The upper floors of the building contain fifty furnished apartments, all rented.

RADIO CONCERN BUYS HALSTED STREET BLOCK

The Standard Transformer corporation, maker of radio parts, has bought the four story building at the northwest corner of Halsted and Blackhawk streets from the estate of Anna Wolf. H. E. Schuett of Lang, Weise & Cella, was broken.

Alexander & Brandt are drawing plans for extensive additions and remodeling. A new entrance will be built, using glass brick and decorative concrete. A reception lobby on the first floor will be connected with the executive offices on the fourth floor by an express elevator. All offices will be air-conditioned.

The building will be entirely remodeled for modern manufacturing and a new sprinkler system with a steel tower tank will be installed. Fireproof stair wells will be built. All heavy machinery will have sound deadening mountings.

A fireproof addition west of the present building will house a department where large quantities of inflammable materials are used. It also will include a fireproof garage and repair shop.

St. Louis Boom Forecaster to Speak at Chicago Meet

Roy Wenzlick, president of Real Estate Analysts, Inc., St. Louis, and author of "The Coming Boom in Real Estate," will speak at a luncheon of manufacturers and wholesalers of plumbing, heating, pipe, valves and fittings, at the annual convention of the Central Supply association at the Morrison hotel next Thursday, Oct. 28.

HOME BUILDING LEADS THROUGH UNITED STATES

Exceeds All Other Types of Construction.

Home building continues to lead all private construction in the United States, according to a survey of 44 states and 37 cities just completed by the National Association of Building Trades Employers. Building volume in the first nine months of 1937 increased over the same period last year, according to Robert D. Steele, association statistician, who compiled the report made public yesterday.

During the first nine months of 1937 there were completed or under way 47,159 new homes, valued at $229,493,000, in 32 of the 37 cities reporting. For the same period last year there were 32,378 new homes with a value of $161,890,000. Suburban residential activities were not included in the survey.

Total Figures for 9 Months.

Construction of all kinds in the 37 cities for the nine months of 1937 totaled 151,132 permits, valued at $550,617,000. For the same months last year there were 144,265 permits for buildings valued at $451,397,000.

Construction totals of 44 states during the first nine months of 1937 had a value of $2,512,919,000, compared with $2,212,634,000 for the same period last year. For the nine months of 1935 the total was $1,285,755,000.

"Indications are that 1937 building volume will show a 20 per cent increase over 1936," said E. M. Craig, executive secretary of the association.

Comparison Not Favorable.

"Comparing 1937 activity with former normal levels, the construction industry, now in its seventh year of subnormal activity, has only reached a high of 40 per cent capacity.

"The construction industry has not been a stimulus in strengthening the industrial upswing. Growing consumer resistance to high building costs is apparent. Wage increases and high cost of building materials are responsible for the recent downward trend of construction."

STATE OFFICIALS FAVOR HUNTING IN WISCONSIN

Deny Northern Deer Will Be Destroyed.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—State conservation commission officials today struck back in Wisconsin's little row over the advisability of a three day open deer season, beginning Nov. 26. The commission called "unwise" the threatened action of several far northern Wisconsin counties almost to exclude hunters.

Cite Other States' Laws.

First of all it would be unwise, said H. W. Mackenzie, state conservation director, for those counties to antagonize southern Wisconsin hunters whose license fees held pay for propagation, game protection, and other conservation operations in "the north."

Other officials defended Wisconsin's first successive open deer season in 13 years by comparing this state's game regulatory policies with those of Michigan and Minnesota.

In 1936 the records show that 97,958 hunters were issued deer tags. Each hunter paid one dollar for such a tag, plus a $25 nonresident or a one dollar resident hunting license fee. The estimated kill last year was 30,000 bucks.

Prepare to Carry Out Threat.

But it appeared tonight several northern areas were prepared to carry out their threat. Vilas county already has closed to hunters the 30,000 acres of delinquent tax land, hiring 50 special deputies, and encouraging private landowners to post "no trespassing" signs.

Madison officials said there is no danger of a deer shortage and unless there is a thinning of the herds many are likely to starve this winter.

3 KILLED, 8 HURT AS SIGHTSEEING PLANE CRASHES

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 23.—[U. P.]—Slipping suddenly downward just after taking off, a tri-motored airplane crashed near an airport here late today, killing three persons and injuring eight. The ship, owned by A. H. Walker, Kansas City, Mo., was engaged in sightseeing tours over the city and vicinity. The ship faltered and fell as it reached an altitude of 150 feet.

The dead were Pilot Leonard H. Rhiner, 40, Kansas City, Mo., who had sixteen years of flying experience; Fred Williams, 20, and Mrs. Helen Momblow, 78, both of Tacoma.

Critically injured is Esther C. Anderson, 30, Seattle. Hospital attendants said she might not live through the night. The others injured are Mrs. L. O. Peterson, 50; Fred R. Keiser, 22; Erling Larson, 18; William Hildebrand, Kenneth Oas, 28; Roger Jones, 22, and Lance Norton, 23, all of Tacoma.

GETS 75 YRS. FOR SLAYING SUITOR OF HIS DAUGHTER

Eminence, Mo., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Rejecting pleas of the prosecution for the death penalty, a jury of Ozark farmers tonight found Everett Counts, a mountain truck gardener, guilty of second degree murder for the slaying in a jail cell of Miller Crane, unwelcome suitor of his daughter.

Circuit Judge Will H. Green sentenced Counts to 75 years in prison. His instructions to the jury permitted verdicts for either first or second degree murder, acquittal or not guilty by reason of insanity.

Crane, 25 years old, was arrested and placed in jail last June 26 after he had made an unsuccessful attempt to elope with Count's daughter, Nadine, 16. Counts, 40, went to the jail to "talk things over" with Crane and killed him. Counts testified in court he could not remember what happened. His daughter said Crane forced his attentions upon her.

6 Inches in Michigan

Heavy snows caused considerable damage and interrupted highway trafic in northern Indiana and southwestern Michigan yesterday. While the storms were striking with greatest force there, Chicago was enjoying bright sunshine with temperatures a few degrees above the freezing mark.

At Benton Harbor, Mich., where the snowfall was estimated at six inches, ninety-one loading platforms of the fruit market collapsed under its weight.

The heavy Indiana snow was confined to a few square miles in the vicinity of Michigan City. The 4 inch fall began there at 8 a. m. and continued until noon. Slush made streets and roads slippery, and caused numerous minor trafic accidents.

HEIFETZ DECRIES HIGHBROW AS A TERM FOR MUSIC

"There is no such thing as highbrow music because art is the freest thing in the world."

Jascha Heifetz, world famous violinist, made this remark upon his arrival in Chicago yesterday for a recital at the Civic Opera house tonight. "Give the people good music and you'll have a hard time ever giving them anything else," he said. "Don't cal lit 'classical' music. Call it simply 'good music.'"

Mr. Heifetz believes that music's pleasures and benefits can be diffused more widely if listeners are disabused of the notion that a person must have a musical education before he can listen to good music intelligently.

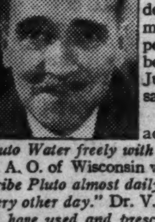
DO AS DOCTORS DO FOR CONSTIPATION

This is what over 50,000 doctors have used and recommended for gentle, thorough action



WHEN you need a laxative, play SAFE and follow the method thousands of doctors use and recommend. For doctors, of all people, know what is best for constipation. Just listen to what they say about Pluto Water: Dr. E. J. G. of Iowa advises, "I prescribe Pluto Water freely with excellent results." Dr. H. A. O. of Wisconsin writes, "I not only prescribe Pluto almost daily, but use it personally every other day." Dr. V. N. of Michigan says, "I have used and prescribed Pluto Water for 40 years."

Easy To Take This New Way

Simply mix 1/5 of a glass of Pluto Water in 4/5 of a glass of water. You'll find this new mixture pleasant. There's no overnight waiting. No painful griping. You get quick yet gentle, thorough action.

So when you need a laxative, be sure—take Pluto Water. Your own doctor will tell you there is nothing better than this non-habit forming saline mineral water, bottled at famous French Lick Springs, Indiana. Get Pluto Water from your druggist, and you'll feel worlds better quickly.

BLOCKED KICK SETS UP OHIO'S VICTORY MARCH

Nardi Plunges Three Yards for Score.

BY ARCH WARD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Columbus, O., Oct. 23.—Ohio State's smart, alert and well poised football team defeated Northwestern, 7 to 0, today before an overflow crowd of 67,521.

The touchdown came in the third quarter a few minutes after a Northwestern drive collapsed on Ohio State's 5 yard line. There were no horseshoes or rabbits' feet dangling from the Wildcats' belts when Carl Kaplanoff, Ohio State's right tackle, crashed through the line and blocked Bernie Jefferson's punt, the Buckeyes recovering the ball on Northwestern's 35 yard line.

Nick Wasylik, Ohio's left half back, scooted around his right end for twenty-one yards and a first down on the Purple's 14 yard line. Wedebrook and Kabealo, alternating as ball carriers, made a first down on the 4 yard line. Rabb, who was the offensive star of the game, was held to a one yard gain, but on the next play Dick Nardi, who had relieved Wedebrook in the Buckeyes' back field, went over Northwestern's right tackle for the touchdown.

Extra Point Brings Confusion.

The try for point developed one of the most unusual plays of the season. Bob Voigts, Northwestern tackle, blocked McDonald's kick from placement, but Nardi picked up the loose ball and lateralled to McDonald, who ran thirteen yards to the goal while the Wildcats stood around in a state of relaxation. There was some confusion among the officials as to how to rule on the incident, but after several conferences, they agreed the play was legal and Ohio consequently was awarded the point. The Northwestern boys, who obviously had not burned any midnight oil studying the rules, presumed the ball automatically was dead after McDonald kicked it.

This was the first defeat Northwestern has suffered in Big Ten competition since losing to Minnesota, 21 to 13, at the tail end of 1935 season.

There was no question about Ohio State's superiority, although Northwestern might have evened the score with a little more punch in the scoring zone. The Buckeyes made fewer mistakes, played harder football, were alert, swift and relentless, and were in superb physical condition. It was an Ohio team that forced the breaks and knew how to take full advantage of them. It was an Ohio team that capitalized Northwestern's errors of omission and commission and had the power and speed and drive to follow up its openings.

The Boys Pull Together.

Ohio State had its individual stars, of course, but there was no single player who stood head and shoulders above his mates. This was a day in which the whole team rode to victory. It took a whole team to do it, because Northwestern wasn't giving ground to anything less than eleven strong men.

Out of it all came one flaming fact. Northwestern's 1937 eleven, whether it is of championship caliber or not, can and will fight as hard as its immediate predecessors. It's a team that won't quit, no matter what the odds. It was in there swinging today as long as there was anything left to swing at and as long as there was a second on the watch. These Wildcats are full of the old time religion of the gridiron. They can't take that away from them.

Northwestern had two bright opportunities to score in the third period. Taking the kickoff on their own 13 yard line, the Wildcats came

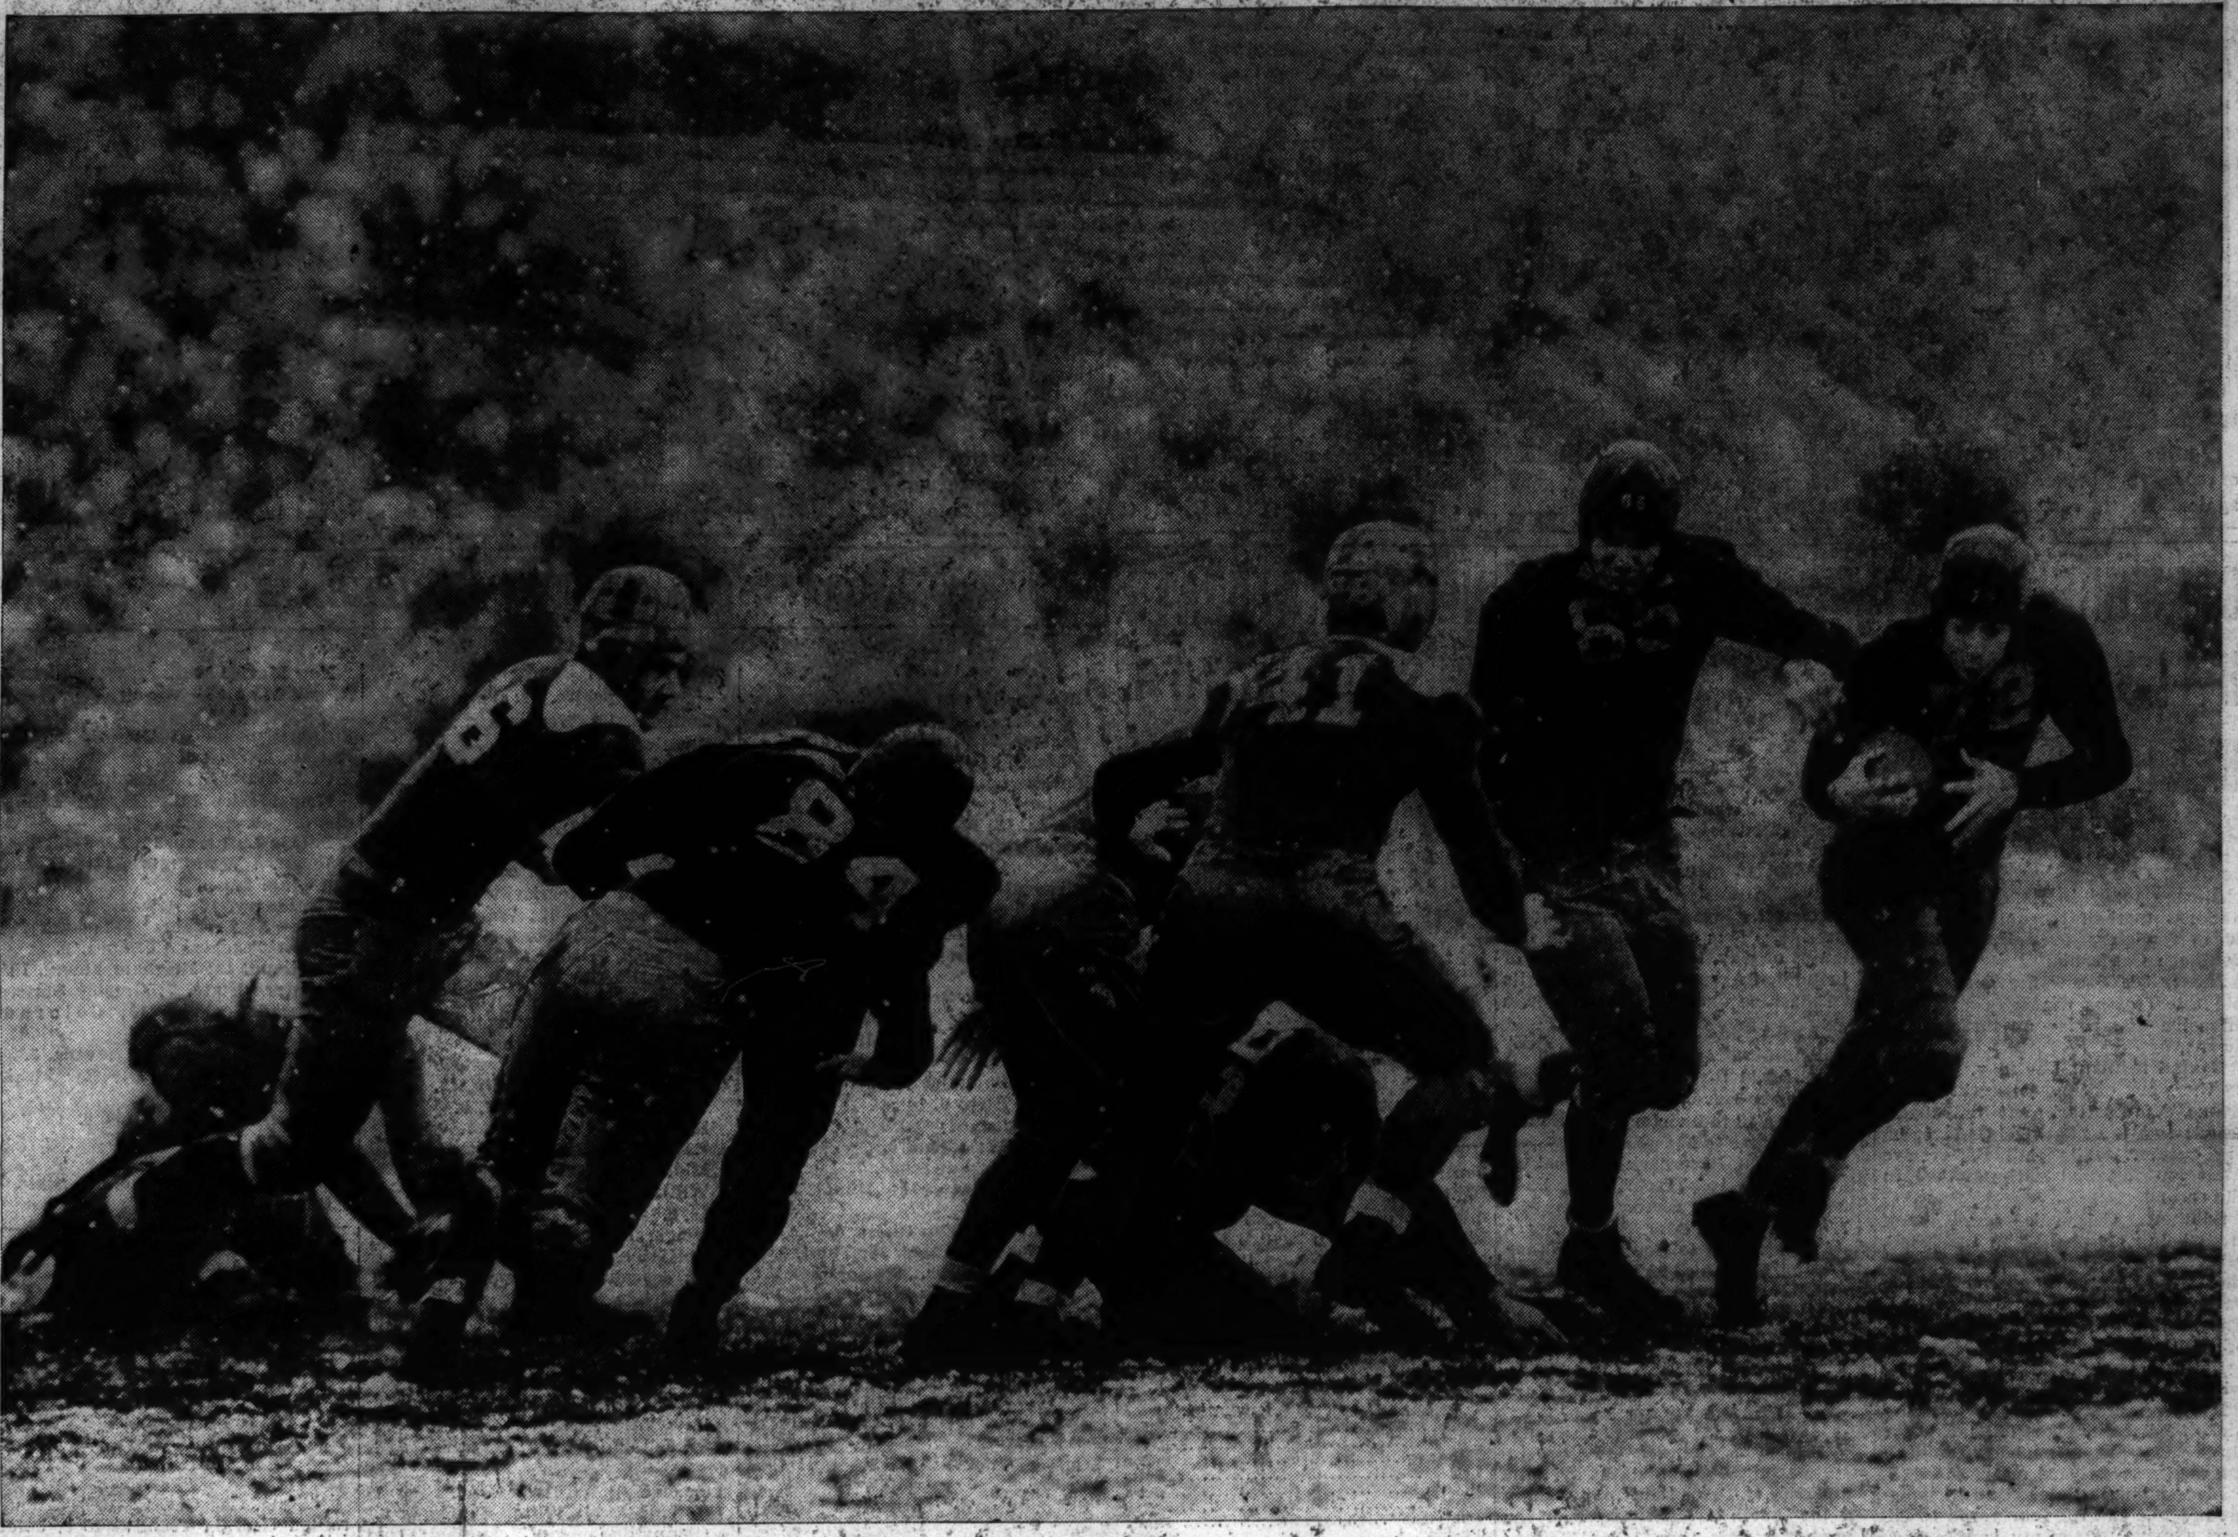
TWO TARS RIDE OUT A STORM OF SNOW AND IRISH



Lem Cooke (No. 72), Navy left half back, picks up a few yards with Quarter Back Art Franks (85), as his convoy in the second quarter of yesterday's game between Notre Dame and Navy at Notre Dame. Other players in the photo are Kuharich (56), Notre Dame right guard; Fincher (84), Navy center; and McCarty (41), Notre Dame center. The Middies dominated the first half of play, holding a first period lead of 7 to 0 until the final quarter, when Notre Dame scored the tying touchdown and point after and went on to win on a safety in the closing minutes. IRISH RALLY TO OVERTAKE NAVY IN 4TH PERIOD

Last Minute Safety Decides Game.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 23.—Notre Dame's football players again became the fighting Irish this afternoon. They waited until the second half for the long expected awakening, after letting the Navy prance and plunge to a first quarter touchdown. But they roused themselves in time. Notre Dame in the final quarter made a touchdown, point after touchdown and a safety for nine points, to give the Irish the best of the 9 to 7 final score.

The game, played before 45,000 in a gentle but heavy snow storm, saw the Notre Dame lads nonplused, outplayed and outfought at the outset. They halted a fifty-six yard Navy march on their 10 yard line only to fumble away the accomplishment. Emmett Wood, in the eleventh minute of the first quarter, scored a touchdown for the Navy, then added the point from placement. At that point things looked very, very bad for Notre Dame's boys, hissed during the last week even by their own freshman sparring mates. And they still were back on their heels in the second quarter.

The Irish Get Going.

Jack McCarthy, Bunny McCormick, Andy Puplis, and Chuck Sweeney, who turned out to be the Notre Dame heroes, must have gone into conference during the intermission. In fact, everybody must have thought up a lot of ideas during the bathhouse rest. At any rate, Notre Dame was a different team at the start of the second half, but despite a lot of sprightly running did not gain a decided edge until the closing seconds of the third quarter, when Lem Cooke executed a bad punt for the Navy.

McCarthy was the first to manifest the hero urge. After Cooke's poor kick, he reeled off nine yards to get everybody in the spirit of the renaissance.

The fourth, or Notre Dame victory quarter, opened with the ball in Notre Dame's possession on Navy's 29 yard line, a first down having been added to McCarthy's inspirational sprint late in the third period.

McCarthy Goes Over.

On the first play of the final quarter McCormick was thrown for a four yard loss. But McCarthy hadn't lost track of his hero scheme. On the next play he flashed through an opening at his right guard, swerved to his left and galloped thirty-three yards to a touchdown. The blocking was perfect and the Glencoe boy went over the goal line standing up.

Andy Puplis, who has been rooming with Clashmore Mike in the latter's doghouse off and on this season, was summoned from under his blanket. The Chicagoan added the point from placement to tie the score.

With the snow refusing to abate in the least, it appeared that most of the players were willing to settle for a draw until the closing minutes. Then Puplis again distinguished himself. He took a punt from Cooke on his own 38 yard line and ran to his left to the Navy 9, where he was thrown out of bounds.

Enter Mr. Sweeney.

For a little while it appeared Andy's dash had been in vain. After McCarthy and Simonich, had put the ball on the 4 yard line, McCormick fumbled and Clarence Corbett recovered for the Navy. Then, with a minute to play, Alan McFarland dropped into his end zone to punt out. The pass from center was none

GOLDBERG GOES OVER GOAL TWICE; PANTHERS FUMBLE EIGHT TIMES

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 23.—Pittsburgh's powerful Panthers, playing as unconcernedly as if practicing and with a complacent disregard for their eight fumbles, six of which were recovered by Wisconsin, overwhelmed the Badgers this afternoon, 21 to 0. Thirty-one thousand two hundred watched Pitt successfully defend its goal line for the fifth consecutive game this season and turn back the Big Ten invaders, who previously had won four contests and were undefeated.

The contest was far more one sided than the score indicates. Wisconsin never advanced into Pitt territory except by recovering Panther fumbles. The Badgers accomplished one first down in the first quarter, secured another by passing in the second and finished with another first down by passing in the final quarter.

Goldberg Leads Parade.

Pittsburgh, led by Marshall Goldberg, who scored two of his team's three touchdowns, piled up 14 first downs, 13 of which were accomplished from scrimmage.

Most crushing to Wisconsin is the comparison in yards gained by scrimmage. Pittsburgh had a net gain of 427 yards. Wisconsin had a net gain of thirteen yards from scrimmage, to which it added forty-one yards on four successful passes.

If Pittsburgh had not fumbled, and the Panthers broke their own record of six misplays last week in the scoreless tie with Fordham, it scarcely could have avoided scoring more touchdowns.

Pitt blanketed all receivers so effectively that until the final period Wisconsin had completed only two tosses for a total of sixteen yards. Wisconsin's longest gain was an eighteen yard pass in the fourth quarter.

On behalf of Wisconsin's disconsolate young men, it can be written that they played alertly, as witness their recovery of Pitt's misplays.

The score might have been larger; indeed, it is out of proportion to Pitt's superiority in yards, and this can be attributed only to the Badgers' determination. They were whipped effectively by the Panthers' eighty yard touchdown march on the second occasion that Pitt had possession of the ball.

When Marshall [Biggie] Goldberg, who last year on this same gridiron wrecked Notre Dame's victory hopes, carried the ball there was none who could stop him.

Meet the Fumblers.

Goldberg was replaced first by John Urban and later by Dick Cassiano, a sophomore. Harold Stebbins, regular right half, was supplanted by Lawrence Peace and Emil Naric. This shifting of men gave Peace opportunity to fumble three times and lead all his mates. Frank Patrick fumbled and lost the ball twice; Urban, Cassiano, and William Farkas, third string full back, had one error each.

Pittsburgh's opening kick off, which went out of bounds and gave Wisconsin the ball on its 35 yard line, was followed on the third Badger

Lead at Stake as Bears and Lions Battle

Today's Games

Detroit at Chicago Bears.
Chicago Cardinals at Pittsburgh.
Cleveland at Green Bay.
Brooklyn at New York.
Washington at Philadelphia.

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

During his five years in the National league, Dutch Clark has attempted six times to defeat the Bears in Chicago. Today he returns to Wrigley field in an attempt to accomplish as a playing coach what he was unable to do when only a player.

Clark leads his Detroit Lions against the Bears in the most important game of the day's professional schedule and one of the most important of the season. Detroit and the Bears, with Green Bay, are considered the leading contenders for the title now held by the Packers and the winner of today's game, which will decide present possession of first place, will become the championship favorite.

Bears Have Four Victories.

The Bears lead the race with four victories in as many starts. Detroit has won four games and lost only one, having been defeated by the Packers, who windup their home schedule with their second game in a week against the weak Cleveland club.

Aside from its importance in the pennant fight, today's game brings back to Chicago one of the bitterest rivalries in professional football. It will be the 16th meeting between the two clubs since the Lions first entered the National league in 1930 as the Portsmouth, O., Spartans. Eight of the games have resulted in Bear victories. Four went against the Chicagoans and three ended in tie scores.

Re-christened as Lions.

The Spartans transferred from Portsmouth to Detroit in 1934 and were re-christened the Lions. As Lions they have met the Bears six times, losing three, winning two and playing a 20 to 20 tie at Wrigley field last year. Seven of the sixteen games since the series opened have been decided by margins of three points or less. The most decisive margin

KINNICK RUNS 74 YARDS FOR SCORE; WOLVERINES BLOCK KICK FOR POINT

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 23.—Michigan's Wolverines, who since early in 1935 have searched in vain for a Big Ten football triumph, finally reached their goal today. After ten straight defeats at the hands of fellow members of the conference, they broke back into the winning class by vanquishing Iowa's Hawkeyes, 7 to 6, before 20,000 spectators.

The Wolverines actually staged two big drives, but one was enough. Gathering power suddenly in the second quarter, they shattered the enemy line, threw one successful pass into the proceedings and paraded forty-two yards to the Hawkeye goal, Ed Stanton carrying the ball across.

But the big thrill was still ahead and it came like a thunderbolt in the third period when Niles Kinnick, Iowa's handy man, grabbed a Michigan punt and raced seventy-four yards for a touchdown. Then Michigan was saved from a deadlock by Bill Smith, who batted down the extra point the Iowans sought by placement.

How Kinnick Did It.

Kinnick's touchdown sprint, late in the third quarter, was a startling and extraordinary performance. Standing on his own 26 yard line, he wrapped his arms around a punt from Gedeon. Three Wolverines were there to nail him, but he squirmed from the trap. He cut to his left, seemingly headed for the spot where help awaited him. He didn't err in his judgment. He had traveled only twenty yards before he was just about cut off from the view of Wolverines by a screen of assisting Hawks.

Behind this screen he tore straight down the field. Around the end of the screen came Siegel, the only Wolverine within calling distance. There still remained fifteen valuable yards for Kinnick to travel, but with Siegel almost ready to grab him the fleet footed Hawk cut toward the corner. Siegel chased him and finally dove, but he grabbed only an armful of air. Kinnick was across the goal. Then the point that would have created a 7 to 7 tie was knocked away when Smith broke through and blocked Eicherly's attempted placement.

Michigan Makes Ten First Downs.

The Wolverines, on the figures, may have deserved better than a lone point victory. They registered ten first downs against six for Iowa. In total yardage the winners led, with 180 to 106. Michigan connected in three of its six pass attempts for sixty-four yards. The Hawks tossed ten passes, most of them late in the battle. Only three of the ten were successful and the net gain from them was only twenty yards. Two of the ten were intercepted by Wolverines.

Fred Trosko was unveiled as the iron horse of the Michigan back field. The Flint lad was given work in thirty-three plays and responded with a net advance of seventy-two yards. Trailing him was Stanton, with forty-

Yale Wins, 9-0, from Cornell as Frank Stars

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—An amazing 39 yard placement kick of a soggy ball for a field goal by Full Back Dave Colwell in the first few minutes of play and a 68 yard touchdown dash by Captain Clinton Frank of Evanston, Ill., that ranks among the season's masterpieces of open field running gave Yale a 9 to 0 victory over a stubbornly fighting Cornell eleven in the bowl today.

At the end there was no question in the minds of the 40,000 spectators that the better team won this fiercely waged battle marked by one of the finest kicking duels seen in the bowl in years.

Big Red Fights.

Even though Cornell, led by its great Negro end, Brud Holland, offered such valiant resistance that it seemed the game would end at 3 to 0 until Frank broke loose midway in the final quarter, Yale's superiority was so pronounced that it is a testimonial to the fighting heart of the Big Red team that the score was not more one-sided.

Cornell, handicapped by injuries to its star running back, George Peck, who was in the game for three or four minutes, had nothing in the way of an attack, and the most it could hope to do was to hold Yale in check and press for a break.

274 Yards for Yale.

Cornell made only three first downs and gained only 80 yards to Yale's 10 first downs and 230 yards by rushing. The Elis also made two first downs and 44 yards through the air. Lineup:

INDIANA SCORES 27 TO 0 TRIUMPH OVER CINCINNATI

Reserves Do Bulk of Work for Big Ten Team.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—With second string players doing most of the work, Indiana swamped the University of Cincinnati football team, 27 to 0, this afternoon before 7,500 at Nippert stadium. The Hoosiers scored twice in the second period, once in the third, and again in the fourth.

One of the few occasions for Cincinnati cheering was when Johnny Popov, Cincinnati back, returned a kick-off forty-three yards.

An eighty yard drive led to Indiana's first touchdown. After Popov kicked over the Indiana goal for a touchback, Heistand raced around left end for nineteen yards to the Indiana 39 yard line. In two smashes, Oliver made thirteen yards.

Davis Scores Touchdown.

Fowler broke through to the Cincinati 34 yard line, and then threw a pass to Birr for a first down on the 24 yard line. Oliver cracked the line for eight yards, and Fowler for two. Heistand, running wide, was knocked out of bounds on the 1 yard line. Oliver was held for no gain as the first quarter ended. On the first play of the second quarter, Davis scored the first touchdown. Miller added the extra point.

A long pass from Filchock to Janzaruk put the ball on the Bearcat 13 yard line to pave the way for the second touchdown. A lateral pass gained ten yards, but Indiana was penalized five yards for offside. Davis then went through left guard for a first down on the 5 yard line. In two more tries Davis took the ball over. Miller again kicked the point.

Pass Becomes a Score.

A blocked kick recovered by Fowler started the Hoosiers toward the goal line again in the third quarter. After the Bearcats had stopped line thrusts, Fowler passed into the end zone to Heistand for the touchdown. Fowler kicked the extra point.

The last touchdown drive started from the Hoosier 26 yard line. Heistand jogged to the 36 yard line. Tanner lateraled for six yards. Heistand smashed tackle for fifteen yards, then lateraled to Davis for fifteen more. In three more smashes, Davis and Tanner made it first down on the Cincinnati 25 yard line. Tanner dashed the rest of the distance to the goal. Tanner's kick for the extra point was wide.

Indiana registered 16 first downs, to four for Cincinnati. The Hoosiers gained 192 yards from rushing and 72 through the air. to 72 and 12 yards, respectively, for the Bearcats.

BELOIT UPSETS KNOX, 22-19, AT HOMECOMING

Beloit, Wis., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Beloit college won its first Midwest conference victory today, beating Knox in a homecoming game, 22 to 19. Beloit flashed an aerial attack which netted two touchdowns and resulted in the third. Knox, the favorite, suffered its first defeat of the season.

Beloit opened the scoring on a pass, Virgili to Brown. Brown kicked the extra point. With less than a minute remaining in the first half Wiltsie tossed a ten yard pass to Bartsch for Knox's first touchdown.

Early in the third quarter, Brown swept around left end for a touchdown and kicked for the extra point to give Beloit a 14 to 6 lead. Knox, on a sustained drive, then took the ball to Beloit's 3 yard line and Johnson plunged for the score.

Beloit's third touchdown resulted from a thirty-seven yard pass, Virgili to Brown. A bad pass by the Knox center later gave Beloit a safety. With three minutes remaining, Wiltsie returned a Beloit punt fifty-three yards for the final touchdown.

Mike Kabealo (No. 16), Ohio State half back, had serious intentions of collecting a yard or two in the third quarter of yesterday's game against Northwestern at Ohio State, but the Wildcats were ready for him, and he was dropped for no gain. John Kovatch, Northwestern end, is making the tackle, while four other Northwestern men—Erwin Wegner (14, kneeling); Cleo Diehl (51), Mike Calvano (18), and Nick Cutlich (64)—look on. CALIFORNIA'S 1ST HALF THRUSTS BEAT U. S. C., 20-6

Berkeley, Cal., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Undefeated California sounded another challenge today in its drive toward national football recognition with a 20 to 6 victory over University of Southern California.

Nearly 80,000 saw the Bears trample the Trojans during a first half offensive that rolled up three touchdowns.

Behind brilliant line play, featured by the work of Guards Stockton and Evans, Vic Bottari, left half back, scored two touchdowns in the opening quarter, while Full Back Dave Anderson followed with another in the second.

Southern California saved itself from being blanked when Landsdell, reserve quarter back, went over from the 1 yard line to end a seventy-seven yard advance in the third quarter. The score was made against a team of California substitutes.

Here's how the bears rolled up the winning points:

Nine minutes after the opening kickoff Bottari cracked left tackle for three yards and a touchdown, following a fifty-seven yard march.

Five minutes later Bottari spun around left end for four yards to climax a drive of seventy yards.

The Huskies with a previous defeat and a tie, lost all hope of retaining their conference title.

Late in the second period Stanford recovered a fumble on Washington's 44 yard line. A following Stanford punt rolled to the 3 yard line. The Indians blocked substitute Half Back Johnston's punt in the end zone and Stanford's right end, Stone, fell on the ball for a touchdown.

In the third period, substitute End Wise punted from behind the Washington goal line. The ball went out of bounds on the Husky's 16 yard line. Stanford's full back, Groves, drove down the sidelines to the Washington 4 yard line, and three plays later smashed over for the second Stanford touchdown.

The Huskies rallied in the same period to march from their own 16 yard line, Full Back Cruver plunging the final half yard for the score.

NEBRASKA BEATS MISSOURI, 7 TO 0, ON TWO PASSES

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Missouri's defense cracked for a few seconds late in the first period today and Nebraska passed its way to a 7 to 0 victory over the team early rated as the biggest hurdle in the Cornhuskers' path to another Big Six championship.

As 16,000 fans sat in silence Marvin Plock, Husker half back, raced beyond his left end, took a flat pass from Thurston Phelps, and ran thirteen yards to score.

That one thrust, preceded by a brilliantly executed thirty-five yard pass, Phelps to Jack Dodd, was the culmination of the one real threat of a ball game which saw two great lines hold opposing offenses in check.

Neither team could provide even a hint of a sustained running attack, and, except for the few seconds late in the first period, the aerial assaults likewise were ineffective.

The lineups:

KANSAS WINS, 6 TO 3.

Norman, Okla., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Kansas university's Jayhawkers put all their chips on a final aerial thrust here today and stunned 15,000 fans when they came up with a forty-eight yard touchdown pass in the last ten seconds to defeat Oklahoma, 6 to 3.

With only seconds remaining, Don Ebling, 155 pound sophomore half back, took the ball on the Oklahoma 48 yard line, faded back, and fired straight over the middle of the line. Three Sooner backs went after the ball, which bounded into the waiting arms of Dick Amerine. Amerine cut to the left and outran Merrell of Oklahoma to the goal line. Kenneth Caldwell's kick for the extra point wasn't even close.

KAS. STATE, 15; CREIGHTON, 7.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Touchdowns in the first and fourth quarters and a safety scored on a bad Creighton pass from center in the opening period gave the Kansas State Wildcats a 15 to 7 victory over the Bluejays today. Creighton scored with a pass following a fourth quarter drive.

DRAKE, 30; IOWA STATE, 0.

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Drake's highly geared Missouri Valley conference eleven rolled over Iowa State, old Big Six rival, 30 to 0, in a homecoming game today.

Pug Manders, Underwood, and Suter slashed the Iowa State forward wall for steady gains in piling up three touchdowns in the first half, a safety in the third quarter, and seven more points in the final period. Drake piled up fifteen first downs to two for the losers.

CARROLL WHIPS LAWRENCE, 27-7; ART BUCK STARS

Waukesha, Wis., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Art Buck, Carroll college half back, led his team to a 27 to 7 victory over Lawrence today. Buck scored only one of his teams four touchdowns, but his repeated off-tackle slants featured Carroll's offense. The game was Carroll's homecoming and stretched the Pioneers' winning streak to fifteen straight.

Carroll scored twice in the opening period on sustained drives starting deep in its own territory, Earl Cook and Jerry Muenzer going over.

The third touchdown came in the second period on Ken Binder's pass interception and the final score early in the third period on Buck's nine yard run. Buck kicked three of the points after touchdowns.

Auburn Wins, 21 to 0; Steals Ball to Score

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Auburn routed Georgia Tech, 21 to 0, before 19,000 shivering fans today.

Henry Kelly tossed a pass that Page of Tech intercepted on the Tech 9 yard line and ran back to the 15, where Sivell, Auburn guard, tackled him high, stole the ball out of Page's arm and ran for a touchdown.

KENTUCKY, 19; MANHATTAN, 0.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Before a crowd of 10,000, the University of Kentucky defeated Manhattan college 19 to 0 today on a wet field. Except for the final period, when two clipping penalties put the ball deep in Kentucky territory, most of the play was in the visitors' part of the field.

MISSISSIPPI STATE WINS.

Starkville, Miss., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Mississippi State college defeated the University of Florida today, 14 to 13, before 6,000. Moon Mullins scored both the Florida touchdowns and the extra point in the final period.

OHIO MARCHES 35 YARDS TO DEFEAT WILDCATS, 7 TO 0

Nardi Plunges 3 Yard for Touchdown.

up the field with Heap and Jefferson carrying the ball until they made a first down on Ohio's 13 yard line. Heap tried center, fumbled, and recovered for a yard gain. He bolted through his right tackle for three yards and Jefferson whirled around left end for four, making it fourth down and a yard to go on Ohio's 5 yard line. Heap hit a wall of concrete and was stopped at the line of scrimmage by Wolf and Schoenbaum, and Ohio took the ball.

Poor Punt Hurts.

The wheel of fortune favored Northwestern a moment later when Wedebrook lost his balance trying to get away the punt, the ball sailing out of bounds on Ohio's 13 yard line, but the Wildcats weren't able to capitalize on the spin. Heap and Jefferson had no success trying to pierce the Buckeye line and a forward pass, Heap to Ryan, was good for only five yards. On fourth down Ryan attempted a place kick, but it was low and to the right of the bar.

It was only a few plays later that Kaplanoff blocked Jefferson's punt setting the scene for Ohio's touchdown.

Ohio State advanced beyond Northwestern's 20 yard line twice in the second quarter. The first march collapsed when Vanzo, Purple quarter back, who had to retire with a leg injury a few moments later, recovered Rabb's fumble on the 12 yard line. Jefferson, hurried in his punting, hoisted the ball almost straight into the air, the ball soaring out of bounds on Northwestern's 26 yard line.

Pass Defense Superb.

After Rabb was tossed for a four yard loss trying to get around the Purple's right end, the Buckeyes lined up without going into their usual huddle. The Wildcats were caught napping momentarily and Kabealo flipped a pass to Ream, who lateraled to Nardi. He was brought down on the Northwestern's 15 yard line. This drive was stopped when Heap intercepted McDonald's pass on the 1 yard line from where Jefferson kicked out to midfield.

Those were the only scoring opportunities other than Ohio's touchdown set up in the third quarter.

Ohio State's secondary put up a brilliant defense against Northwestern's passes. The statistics:

Pitt Whips Wisconsin—Northwestern Loses to Ohio State—Notre Dame Wins

NOT SO FAST THERE, MR. MIDSHIPMAN—Emmett Wood, Navy half back, is stopped after a short gain during the second quarter of yesterday's game with Notre Dame. Wood made all of Navy's points, smashing over for a touchdown in the first quarter and then kicking goal. Those seven points weren't enough, however, for the Irish came back for the second half in a fighting mood and ran up enough points in the final quarter for a 9 to 7 victory.

NOTRE DAME HAMMERS AT NAVY LINE—Bunny McCormick, Notre Dame half back, goes off tackle for a short gain in yesterday's game with the Navy at Notre Dame. After Navy had taken a 7 to 0 lead in the first quarter, the Irish came back to tie it in the fourth period. With a minute to play a Navy man was downed in the end zone for a safety, giving Notre Dame a 9 to 7 victory. Snow fell throughout the game, which was played before 45,000.

In the final quarter, Michigan State put over two touchdowns to clinch victory.

Northwestern players shown are Conteas (28), Ray (41), Calvano (18), Cutlich (64), Wegner (14), and Heap (22). This play occurred in the second quarter. The Buckeyes won on a 35 yard march to the goal after blocking a Northwestern punt in the third quarter, Dick Nardi going over for the touchdown in plunge from the three yard line a second down.

BADGERS STOP GOLDBERG—MOMENTARILY—Here is Pittsburgh's great half back, Marshall Goldberg, in the grasp of Wisconsin tacklers. He was thrown for a two yard loss on this play, but broke away on other occasions to score two Pittsburgh touchdowns. The Badgers lost, 21 to 0. This was their first defeat of the season. Wisconsin players in this picture include Hovland (91), O'Brien (57), and Dorsch (81).

TILDEN TECH, SENN TRIUMPH TO NEAR SECTIONAL TITLES

Turn Back Lindblom and Sullivan Elevens.

Tilden Tech and Senn approached sectional championships in the Chicago Public High School league football race by scoring their fifth consecutive victories yesterday.

Tilden triumphed over its traditional central section enemy, Lindblom, 14 to 7, at Normal park, while Senn maintained first place in the north division by crushing Sullivan, 21 to 0, at Loyola stadium. The triumphs assured Tilden and Senn at least a tie for the sectional titles, as each team has only one game remaining on its schedule.

Win on Blocked Punt.

A blocked punt enabled Tilden to defeat Lindblom. The ball was recovered by Tilden on the 20 yard line and Mike Fisher, left half back, scored the winning touchdown in two plays. He made six yards on his first effort and then dashed around left end for the score. Tilden scored its first touchdown in the first quarter when Hal Schumacher intercepted a Lindblom pass and ran forty yards to cross the Lindblom goal line.

The score was tied, however, in the second period when Lindblom marched to the Tilden 5 yard line, from where Full Back Ramcke plunged over. Half Back Regan kicked the extra point. Tilden will close its central section schedule on Nov. 6 against Englewood.

14 to 7 Lead at Half.

A pair of blocked punts also enabled Senn to pile up its score against Sullivan. Cookie Leis, Chuck Friend, and Roy Osterveer led the attack. Senn held a 14 to 7 advantage at the half.

Michigan Defeats Iowa, 7 to 6; Kinnick Returns Punt 74 Yards

one yards in twelve plays. Kinnick, the Iowa flash, was involved in thirteen ball carrying assignments for a gain of twenty yards. His mate, Edwin McLain of Chicago, contributed thirty-four yards in nine plays.

The first period didn't provide even a mild scare for either of the participants. The Wolverines, after taking the initial kickoff, soon discovered that a punt was advisable. The Hawkeyes promptly revealed a flash of offensive power. With Kinnick, McLain, and Bill Gallagher carrying the ball, Iowa drilled a nineteen yard trail to Michigan's 41 yard line. Then the Wolverine defense tightened and Kinnick got off a rolling punt which Capt. Harris of the Hawkeyes downed on the Wolverines' 3 yard line. A beautiful 70 yard punt by Gedeon moved the Wolverines from this predicament.

Late in the opening period the Wolverines launched their first experiment on Iowa's defense against a pass attack. With the help of a short smash by Trosko and a nine yard smash by Stanton, Michigan made a first down on the Iowa 47 yard line. Two line assaults by Trosko netted nothing. Then Trosko drifted back to pass, but before he could throw, Lannon flattened him for a twelve yard loss. Gedeon immediately punted deep into Iowa territory.

Wolverines Get Going.

The Wolverines' last effort of the first period was an eight yard end sprint by Trosko for a first down on the Iowa 42 yard line. The Wolverines marched on from this point. In the opening play of the second quarter, Trosko smashed through for four yards. He followed with one yard on the next play. Stanton went through his left guard for a first down on Iowa's 28 yard line. Anderson ruined a charge by Trosko, but Farmer followed with a two yard smash at center. Then the Wolverines took to the air with disastrous results for the Iowans. Trosko sailed a pass diagonally across the field to Barclay, who clutched the ball on the 12 yard line and advanced four yards before being run out of bounds.

Two more plays completed the touchdown thrust. The Iowa line weakened under the charge and Trosko drove through his left tackle for five yards. Stanton dove through his right guard and went over the goal. With Farmer serving as ball holder, Trosko place kicked for the extra point which gave the Wolverines a 7 to 0 lead.

Michigan Starts Again.

With the help of a blocked punt, Michigan came right back and for several minutes threatened with another drive across the Iowa goal. Heikkinen of Michigan fell on Kinnick's blocked punt on the Iowa 25 yard mark. Happily for the Hawkeyes, a fifteen yard holding penalty was inflicted on the Wolverines on the first play. A pass erased the damage done by the penalty. Trosko heaved the ball to Barclay, who sprinted to the Hawks' 16 yard line. A short gain through center by Trosko netted first down on the 15 yard line.

The fifteen yards to the Iowa goal melted under a thrust into center by Stanton. Trosko smashed through his right tackle for six and Trosko made it first down on the 4 yard line. This was where the Iowans stood their ground. Kinnick stopped Trosko with a yard. Trosko came back with another one yard dive. In his third straight charge, Trosko was halted in his tracks. Then Trosko threw a pass into the end zone and the ball was slapped down by Kelly of the Hawkeyes.

The last two periods, barring the thrill provided by Kinnick, were just give and take affairs with neither faction ever getting very close to the other's goal.

Fenwick vs. Loyola, Loyola stadium, 2 p. m.
Weber vs. De Paul, De Paul field, 2 p. m.

Fifty thousand are expected to see the game.

Galvin Leads Leo.

Leo, which has rolled up 71 points in winning three south division games, played Lindblom in Mayor Kelly's game in 1934 and 1935. Last week the Lions crushed St. Ignatius, 32 to 13, for their third victory.

The leader in the victory against St. Ignatius was Johnny Galvin, veteran left half back, who scored four touchdowns. Tom Martin, regular right half back, who was injured in the contest, has recovered, and will be in the starting lineup, according to Coach Whitey Cronin.

St. Mel will be strengthened by the return of George Lennon, left end, and Emil Schmidt, right guard, who have been out with injuries.

Five League Games.

Five league games will be played, the feature game bringing together Fenwick of Oak Park, 1936 champion, and Loyola at Loyola stadium, Sheridan road and Loyola avenue. Fenwick is undefeated, having won its first two games in the north section. Weber will play De Paul on the latter's field in another north division contest.

In the south section De La Salle will seek its third straight victory meeting Mount Carmel at Shewbridge field. Catholic High of Joliet will meet St. Ignatius at St. Philip field, while St. Philip will oppose St. Rita at St. Rita field, in other games.

MICHIGAN STATE IS VICTOR, 21 TO 7, OVER MARQUETTE

Pingel Runs 80 Yards for Last Touchdown.

East Lansing, Mich., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Michigan State's power was unleashed in the fourth quarter as the Spartans turned back Marquette university, 21 to 7, today, before 15,000.

Marquette, paced by a sophomore quarter back, Andrew Bakula and Ray Sonnenberg, fought the Spartans to a standstill until the last quarter when a driving attack brought two touchdowns.

After State had suffered setbacks because of fumbles in the first quarter, Jack Pingel, spearhead of the Spartan attack, tossed an 18 yard pass to Gaines, who was downed on Marquette's 11 yard line with one minute left to play. Pingel crashed over from the six yard line for the first score. Bruckner added the extra point from placement.

Bakula Intercepts Pass.

Early in the third quarter Bakula intercepted Pingel's pass intended for Gates in mid-field and ran forty-two yards to State's 8 yard line. After failing to gain on two attempts Bakula tossed a flat pass to Sonnenberg, who stood in the end zone. Niles was sent in and added the extra point from placement.

Pingel's brilliant punting kept the Marquette team in its own territory for the rest of the period.

Eddie Pearce, early in the fourth period, speared Bakula's pass intended for Leysenaar and advanced to Marquette's 44 yard line. Ualf Haney, behind perfect interference, swept around his own left end for eighteen yards. After State had lost a yard on two attempts Haney broke loose for another long jaunt—this time for twenty-one yards to Marquette's 8 yard line. Pingel then went through center and crossed the goal line standing for State's second score. Bruckner again added the extra point.

It's Pingel Again.

Soon afterward Bakula punted into the end zone and State took the ball on its own 20 yard line. On first down, Pingel, finding an opening over his own right guard, broke through, and picking up his interference, ran eighty yards to Marquette's goal line for State's third touchdown. Bruckner kept his record clean by booting the extra point.

PLAY AT SOLDIERS' FIELD

Chicago will be the scene of one of the season's outstanding intersectional football games next Saturday afternoon when the University of Santa Clara Broncos, Sugar Bowl champions, will come from California to face Paddy Driscoll's Marquette university eleven of Milwaukee at Soldiers' field.

The game, which will start at 2 o'clock, will be played as a benefit for the employés' voluntary welfare fund of the Chicago park district. Under a similar arrangement Marquette met the Galloping Gaels of St. Mary's college of California last fall and won, 20 to 6.

Next Saturday's battle will mark the first appearance in the central states of a team that in the last two years has gained outstanding prominence in west coast gridiron circles. Lawrence T. [Buck] Shaw succeeded Clipper Smith as head coach last fall, and his 1936 eleven not only won from Stanford and St. Mary's but went on to a decision over Louisiana State in the Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans on New Year's day. The Broncos were beaten only by Sammy Baugh and Texas Christian.

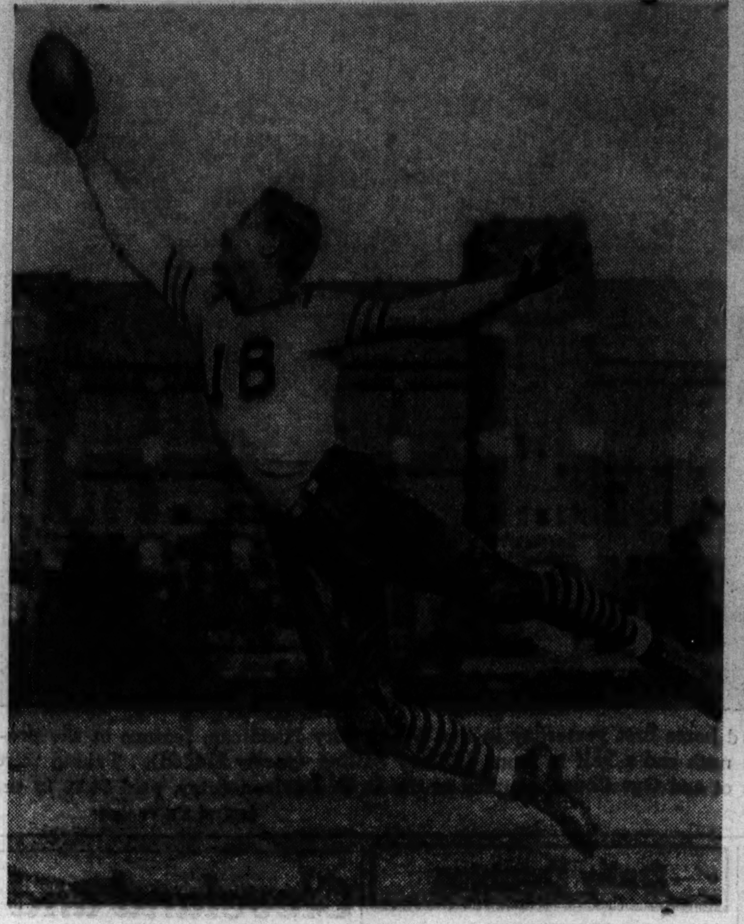
IT'S AN ALL-AMERICAN AFFAIR WHEN BEARS MEET LIONS

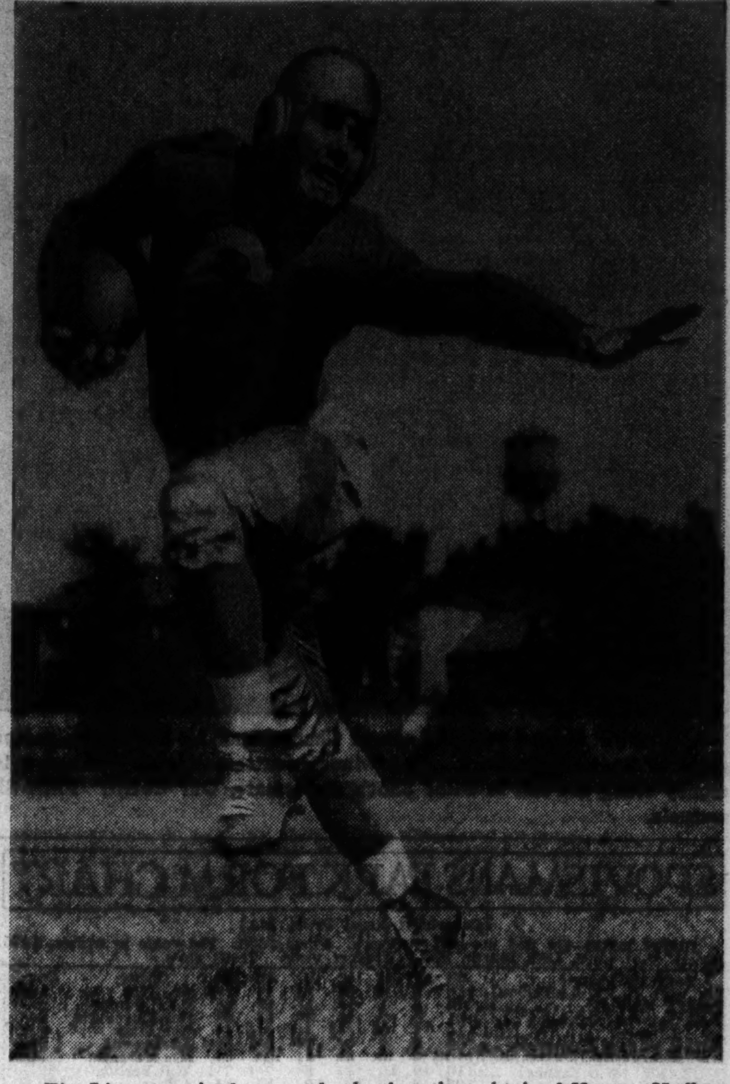
Members of All-American elevens which have battled National Professional league champions in The Tribune's annual pre-season charity event will figure heavily today in the game between the undefeated Bears and the Detroit Lions at Wrigley field. Each team has several All-American graduates. Delbert Bjork of Oregon is likely to see service for the Bears at tackle.



Edgar Manske, former Northwestern end, came to the Bears this season after three years with Philadelphia. He is 6 feet 1 inch of football player.

Ray (Buzz) Buivid was an outstanding half back for last season's strong Marquette eleven and is one of the Bears' most valuable new acquisitions.

Bob Reynolds of Stanford is in his first season with the Lions. He was an outstanding tackle on the coast.



The Lions acquired a great back when they obtained Vernon Huffman of Indiana, who last year won The Tribune award as most valuable player to his team in the Big Ten.

FORDHAM BEATS T. C. U., 7 TO 6, IN LAST 2 MINUTES

Rams Within Scoring Distance 8 Times.

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The law of averages caught up with Fordham and Fordham caught up with Texas Christian university in the final two minutes of a close football battle at the Polo Grounds today as the Rams jammed across a touchdown and kicked the extra point to win 7 to 6, and remain unbeaten. A crowd of 25,000 saw the game.

Eight times Fordham was in scoring territory—five within the 13 yard line—and it was not until this football drama had practically moved off the stage that the Rams won a game they could have taken a half dozen times before.

Texas Christian struck swiftly with a scoring burst in the opening minutes and then hung on grimly to a six point lead for fifty-five minutes, frustrating Fordham with the fierceness of its line charge and the severity of its tackling. Fordham's break finally came when Dom Principe, sophomore full back, bolted right over center from the 2 yard line to tie the score with two minutes to go.

Wilbur Stanton, place kicking specialist, was sent into the Fordham lineup. He carefully wiped clear the mud from his cleats with a towel, swung easily with his right leg and kicked the extra point.

PENN, GEORGETOWN TIE.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 23.—(AP)—A boner today cost the University of Pennsylvania a 3 to 0 victory over Georgetown, the game ending in a scoreless tie.

A crowd of 20,000 was amazed in the last 30 seconds of play when Bill Miller, a substitute half back, dashed onto the field as Ed Fielden kicked a thirty yard field goal. Referee D. W. Very nullified the three points, ruling Penn had 12 men on the field.

Fielden attempted another field goal after Penn had been penalized five yards, but this time the ball fell short and Georgetown took the ball on its 20 yard line as the game ended.

The play climaxed a fifty-nine yard drive by Penn from its 23 yard line to the Georgetown 18. Penn held Georgetown for downs on the 1 inch line in the second quarter. Five fifteen yard penalties for holding broke up the Penn offensive.

PRINCETON, 6; RUTGERS, 0.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 23.—(AP)—A touchdown in the opening period gave Princeton a 6 to 0 victory over defensively powerful Rutgers today as these oldest of all gridiron rivals waged one of their finest battles before 35,000 in Palmer stadium.

The Tigers' margin of superiority today was greater than the score indicated, but aside from the single touchdown march of fifty-six yards, it was the Scarlets' brilliant defensive play that featured the contest. Twice Rutgers held within its one 1 yard line.

Bob Hinchman, sophomore half back from Pittsburgh, passed to Dick Wells for twenty-five yards to the Rutgers' 29 yard mark and he then dashed sixteen yards off tackle to the 1 foot line. From there Larry Taylor of Haverford, Pa., plunged across for the score. Tackle Charley Craig blocked Taylor's try for extra point.

BROWN, 7; COLUMBIA, 6.

New York, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Brown's battered Bears delivered a fourth quarter knockout punch today to spring the biggest surprise of the eastern football season—a 7 to 6 victory over Columbia's heavily-favored Lions.

A ninety-three yard march with less than ten minutes left to play gave the Bears their first major victory since 1933 and their first triumph over Columbia since 1932.

Playing on a field of mud and in a heavy rain that began falling in the second half, the Browns' march began on its 7 yard line and was paced by the ball carrying of Irv Hall and the passing of Larry Atwell, whose two tosses to Frank Foster covered the last twenty-five yards. Hall kicked the point.

When Hall added the point, it wiped out the advantage the Lions had gained with their touchdown in the third quarter on Luckman's pass to Taylor. Hub Schulze, rushed in to kick the point, was unable to produce, the Brown line blocking his effort.

MARYLAND, 13; SYRACUSE, 0.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Syracuse university's previously undefeated and untied football team was knocked from its pedestal today by a University of Maryland eleven that played the Orange off its feet to earn a 13 to 0 victory.

The two touchdowns came to Maryland by air. In the first few minutes of the second quarter, Charlie Weidinger, tossed a thirty yard aerial to Jim Meade, who raced over the goal line untouched.

After outplaying Syracuse during the third period and most of the fourth, Maryland's Frank Skotnicki broke up a desperate Orange passing barrage by hauling down a toss from Glickman and pounding forty yards inside the sidelines for the second score.

HOLY CROSS WINS, 6-0.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Holy Cross remained untied and undefeated today by defeating Western Maryland, 6 to 0, before 5,000 on rain soaked Fitton field today. The touchdown came in the first period when Cahill ran twenty yards to the Western Maryland 5 yard line and then on an end play went over unmolested. Turner missed the point after touchdown.

ARMY WINS, 47-7.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Army had an easy time today, burying Washington university of St. Louis, 47 to 7.

Only 5,000 ventured out into the rain and high winds to see the game. Washington kept trying all the way and was finally rewarded with a touchdown, but was not in the same class with the cadets, who used second and third stringers throughout the last two quarters.

DETROIT DASHES TO 14-0 VICTORY AGAINST BOSTON

Newton, Mass., Oct. 23.—(AP)—The University of Detroit eleven defeated Boston college, 14 to 0, before 7,000 rain soaked spectators today.

Al Oliveto, the Detroit full back, scored the first touchdown in the opening period when he intercepted a Boston pass on the Titans' 19 yard stripe and raced up the sidelines 81 yards to cross the goal line standing up. John Shada, the right guard, place-kicked the extra point.

Midway through the third quarter Ed Palumbo, Detroit half back, cut through left guard and romped 43 yards to the Boston 4 yard line. Two rushes netted three yards and on third down Andy Farkas went around right end to score the final touchdown. Shada again added the extra point.

The Eagles threatened to score in the final period, but with the ball on the Detroit 4 yard line on third down the game ended. Lineups:

DETROIT [14].		BOSTON [0].
Larson	L. E.	McFadden

Touchdowns—Oliveto, Farkas. Points after touchdown—Shada, 2 [place kicks].

DARTMOUTH, 20; HARVARD, 2.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Wild Bill Hutchinson, sophomore full back, splashed for three touchdowns to provide Dartmouth with a 20 to 2 victory over Harvard today before 30,000. The game was played in a northeast rainstorm.

Hutchinson's first touchdown came late in the first period from Dartmouth's 38 yard line. As Don Daughters, Harvard's right end, rushed in to block a kick Hutchinson sidestepped, raced through the opening, and went sixty-two yards to score.

In the third period, in blinding rain, Hutchinson slipped around his right end and, after reversing his field, churned through forty-five yards of puddles for his second score. He added the third in the final quarter, ploughing over from the 2 yard line after he and Bob MacLeod had carried the ball from midfield in two rushes.

DUKE, 13; COLGATE, 0.

Hamilton, N. Y., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Two blocked punts led to as many touchdowns to give Duke university a 13 to 0 victory over Colgate in the latter's homecoming day game played on a rain soaked field this afternoon.

Fred Yorke, a guard, batted down a kick by John Long to give his team the ball on the Colgate 5 yard line midway in the opening period. Three plays later Harwood [Silver] Smith plunged across for the score.

Honey Mackney, Duke quarter back sent a perfect placement kick between the posts for the extra point.

The second touchdown came early in the final quarter. This time it was Herb Hudgins of Norfolk, W. Va., who blocked another punt from Long. The ball skittered back into the end zone and Joe Brunansky, 210 pound tackle, dived headlong on the ball for the second score. This time Hakney failed to kick the extra point.

WESTERN RESERVE WINS, 7-0.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Western reserve of Cleveland stretched its unbeaten string to 28 straight games and tossed Boston university from the ranks of the undefeated elevens, 7 to 0, in a driving rain today before 5,000 at Fenway park.

A 75 yard runback of a Boston university punt by John Andrews, Western Reserve safety man, ended Boston's hopes for an unbeaten season and kept clear the record which Western Reserve started to roll up back in 1934.

was twelve points, compiled by Detroit in 1935 when it defeated the Bears, 14 to 2. As further evidence of the closeness with which battles between the two rivals have been waged, the total points scored in fifteen contests give the Bears only a nineteen point advantage, 162 to 143.

Clark's chances of breaking the Chicago jinx in his first year as a coach rest more on what the Bears fail to do than on what his own club does. He brings to Wrigley field a formidable squad, playing at its peak. On the basis of the Bears' previous showings, the Lions should be favorites.

Bears Potentially Strong.

But the Bears are potentially a much better team than they were in their first four victories. Even if they never reach the heights Coach George Halas expects, they should play more impressive football than that which enabled them to beat Green Bay, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and the Cardinals. Outside of Pittsburgh, not much football was necessary to remain undefeated this far.

In the Bear backfield, Bernie Masterson, the most improved quarter back in the league, will direct the famed man-in-motion attack against Detroit's devastating weak side offense from a wing back. The clash between these two offenses, for years the best running attacks in football, has always led to sensational performances which have lifted all Lion and Bear games out of the ordinary class. Today's meeting at Wrigley field should be no exception. Detroit still has the same back field quartet which marched to a league championship in 1935 and in 1936 led the league in total yards gained, setting an all-time record of 2,885 yards by rushing.

If Frank Christensen is able to play at his regular left half back position, this quartet will be intact. Christensen has been injured and used sparingly, but his absence has not been felt, except for his kicking. Huffman, who has been relieving him, has proved an efficient ground gainer and blocker and climaxed a series of excellent performances with a 97 yard run for touchdown against Pittsburgh last week.

Not as Nifty, but Efficient.

Against this combination, the Bears will send Bronko Nagurski, Beattie Feathers, holder of the all-time individual gaining record, and Ray Nolting. This trio, with Masterson at the helm, may not be as nifty as the Lions with their intricate attack, but on occasions it has proved more efficient.

Fifteen of the men who will take an active part in today's proceedings, eight Bears and seven Lions, are graduates of THE TRIBUNE's All-Star game. Five of the fifteen will start for the Bears and two, Vernon Huffman of Indiana and Bob Reynolds of Stanford, for the Lions. The left side of the Bears' line will be manned by men who got their first intimate glimpse of professional ball in the All-Star game. Eggs Manske, the former Northwestern end obtained from Philadelphia last winter, will be at left end, beside tackle Joe Stydahar, who teamed with Reynolds on the team which held the Lions to a 7 to 7 tie in 1936. Danny Fortmann, the Bears left guard, also was a member of this All-Star team.

Morris Harvey Passes, Blocks Punts to Win, 26-7

Steubenville, O., Oct. 23.—[U. P.]—Relying on passes and capitalizing on blocked punts, Morris Harvey defeated Bethany college, 26 to 7, today.

Notre Dame Rallies in Fourth Quarter to Defeat Navy, 9 to 7

too good, McFarland juggled, then tried to run out the ball. Sweeney had different ideas about that. The Bloomington flash cast him to earth with a bang and that was the ball game—a safety and the two point winning margin for the Irish.

The Irish made nine first downs, six of them in the second half, the Navy six, all of them in the first half and four of them before Notre Dame ever gained possession of the ball. All first downs on both sides were made from rushing, the snow making forward passing a negligible weapon. Notre Dame attempted only one pass, Navy two. None came close to making connections.

Notre Dame made 186 yards from rushing, eighty-one of which were negotiated by McCormick in seventeen tries and seventy-two by McCarthy on twenty tries. Navy made 110 yards from rushing, fifty-three by Cooke on twenty-eight tries and fifty-four by Wood on fifteen tries.

The teams were tied on punting each with an average of 36.7 yards. Notre Dame fumbled seven times, Navy four times. Notre Dame recovered only one of Navy's fumbles, Navy speared four of Notre Dame's.

Navy Starts Early.

Navy served notice of serious intent by effecting a fifty-six yard march after Antrim had returned Beinor's opening kick off to the Navy 34 yard line. The first down of the game was accomplished on the Navy 44 yard line on a splurge, the largest item of which was an eight yard gain by Wood.

Cooke who had carried the ball twice in the first series of downs, carried it three times for the second first down for Navy on the Notre Dame 44 yard line.

Two short plunges by Cooke and an offside penalty made it the third Navy first down on Notre Dame's 30 yard line and two yards by Cooke and a bang through center by Wood added still another first down on Notre Dames 19 yard line. After this Wood negotiated three yards thorugh left guard and Cooke added two. Cooke was thrown for two yards loss. On fourth down Wood missed the seven yards required and the Navy march was halted temporarily on the Notre Dame's ten yard line.

Irish Fumble for First Down.

The first Notre Dame progress of consequence resulted from an Irish misplay. After McCarthy had made two yards, he fumbled on the next play and Beinor recovered for a gain of thirteen yards and a Notre Dame first down.

Shortly after the break came which soon resulted in a Navy touchdown. Thesing fumbled and Gunderson recovered for Navy on Notre Dame's 9 yard line. Wood then made two yards and Cooke made four at right guard, after which Wood plunged over center for the touchdown. Wood then added the point for placement.

The four minutes of the first quarter after the Navy score and the second quarter developed few threats and those that did show up ended with punt exchanges and in the closing minutes of the half in an exchange of fumbles.

Teams Trade Fumbles.

Late in the second period Navy had progressed for a first down on Notre Dame's 22 yard line, the biggest factor being a seventeen yard sprint by Wood. Then there was a bad pass from center which Cooke couldn't handle. The ball rolled to the Notre Dame 47 yard line where it was recovered by McCarty. On the second play, however, Simonich fumbled and Fincher recovered for Navy on Navy's 47 yard line. Cooke made nine yards on two efforts just before the half ended.

Notre Dame partisans enjoyed themselves quite a bit at the start of the third quarter. Fike kicked off to Thesing, who returned eight yards to his 44 yard line. McCarthy lost a yard, but McCormick, on a reverse ran left end for thirteen yards and a first down on Navys 44 yard line.

Thesing made a yard on a plunge and McCarthy added three yards at center. McCarthy couldn't find a receiver on his pass, so circled right end for eleven yards and a first down on the Navy 31 yard line.

Irish Drive Stopped.

Navy drew a five yard penalty for offside. McCormick failed at left end. McCarthy failed at center. Cooke knocked down McCarthy's pass to McCormick. McCarthy back to punt, juggled a low pass from center, kicked hurriedly to one of his own mates on the Navy 30 yard line and the ball went to the middies. The remainder of the third quarter saw much kicking, but no breaks for either team until the last minute, when Cooke got off a bad kick, which was downed on Navy's 45 yard line. McCarthy ran to Navy's 34 yard line. After a Navy's offside penalty and two plays the quarter ended with the ball on Navy's 29 in Notre Dame's possession. Then came the fourth quarter, and on the second play that Notre Dame touchdown and tying placement kick resulted, followed by the winning safety almost 14 minutes later.

Goldberg Leads Pittsburgh to 21-0 Victory Over Badgers

play by Fred Benz's punt which was downed on Pittsburgh's 31 yard line. Then Full Back Patrick presented Wisconsin with the ball when he fumbled and Benz recovered on Pitt's 29 yard line.

Three line smashes netted nine yards but on the fourth down Bronko Malesevich was stopped and the Panthers took the ball on their 20 yard line. They did not stop until, on the 12th consecutive play, Goldberg cut back inside of Wisconsin's left tackle for eight yards and crossed the goal line standing up.

Hovland Recovers Fumble.

Almost immediately after this score Lynn Hovland, Badger left guard, secured the ball on Pitt's 34 yard line when Patrick fumbled a second time. Howard Weiss, Wisconsin full back, plunged three times to gain thirteen yards and first down. The drive immediately collapsed and four plays later, when Weiss slipped and fell on a reverse, Pitt took the ball on its 20 yard line.

Twice more in the first half Pitt's fumbles were recovered by Wisconsin and incipient offenses were checked.

Late in the second period Peace shot inside of the Wisconsin right tackle, reversed his field and ran seventy-seven yards down the east side line to the Badger 10 yard line, where he was dragged down from behind by Bellin.

Peace apparently scored on the following play, smashing again at the right tackle, but Pitt was penalized five yards for having only six men on the line of scrimmage.

Goldberg came back to start the second half, and, as if he needed to show further proof of his ability, he ran sixty-four yards for a touchdown on the second play. Wisconsin was assessed a penalty of five yards on the first play after Pitt had taken the kickoff on its 31 yard line.

Goldberg Does It Again.

As Pitt's backs faked a wide sweep at Wisconsin's right end, Goldberg burst through left guard, cut to his right, and outran all trailers to the goal. Bill Daddio place kicked the second of his three points after touchdowns.

Pitt started another drive as soon as it received the ball, but this time, after Pitt had gained fifty-nine yards in eleven plays, Wisconsin stopped the assault by holding Patrick's fourth down thrust to a one yard gain and took the ball on its 1 yard line.

Cassiano fumbled a fair catch of Benz' kick out and Al Dorsch recovered for the Badgers on Wisconsin's 44 yard line. Again Benz kicked, and the ball was downed on Pitt's 12. This set up the final scoring play. After an exchange of punts Pitt had the ball on its 20 yard line. Stebbins picked up five yards and then Patrick crashed inside of left tackle, ran eight yards, and tossed a lateral pass to Cassiano, running wide.

Cassiano sprinted to the goal and Daddio added the final point.

Wisconsin attempted thirteen forward passes and completed four. Pitt was penalized thirty yards and Wisconsin lost thirty-five yards by penalty. The Badgers fumbled twice, Schmitz losing the ball in the second period and Full Back Herbert Paul recovering his fourth quarter fumble.

Each team averaged thirty-nine yards on punts, but Wisconsin kicked thirteen times while Pitt only punted four times.

BUTLER DEFEATS WASHINGTON AND JEFFERSON, 12-0

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Butler conquered a stubborn Washington and Jefferson eleven, 12 to 0, amid snow flurries here today. Led by Tom Harding and Inman Blackaby, Butler pounded steadily at the Presidents' goal line. A half dozen times W. and J. stiffened to prevent touchdowns.

In the second period Harding paved the way for the first touchdown, carrying the ball on two plays to the Presidents' 21 yard line. From there Blackaby took over the job and scored. The other touchdown came a half minute before the game ended, Welton scoring from the 3 yard line.

W. and J. never threatened seriously.

WABASH COLLEGE TRIUMPHS OVER ROSE POLY, 25-0

Crawfordsville, Ind., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Wabash college scored its second victory in five games this season by defeating Rose Poly, 25 to 0, today. Gruca, Chicago back, scored the final touchdown in the fourth quarter on a line plunge. Rutledge, full back, plunged over for the first touchdown in the second quarter and Gilbert, end, caught a pass to make the second score. Carr, Logansport substitute half back, raced sixty-four yards to score in the third quarter.

VANDERBILT USES TRICK TO END L. S. U. REIGN, 7-6

Tackle Dashes 44 Yards to Score Touchdown.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Vanderbilt used a tricky play to defeat Louisiana State university, Southeastern conference football champions, 7 to 6, today. Eighteen thousand saw the game.

Vanderbilt's winning touchdown came after 5 minutes of play. After an exchange of kicks, Vanderbilt had the ball on its 44 yard line. Dutch Reinschmidt took a pass from center and End Bill McElreath and Tackle Greer Ricketson pulled out on a reverse. Reinschmidt handed the ball to Ricketson and the big tackle swept unmolested down the sideline for the touchdown as Louisiana's team was caught napping.

Agee Kicks Winning Point.

Full Back Joe Agee kicked the extra point that was to mark the end of Louisiana's reign, which included 13 consecutive conference victories and championships in 1935 and 1936.

A trio of sophomores, Young Bussey, Ken Kavanaugh, and Jabbo Stell, put on an aerial attack for Louisiana's score.

Bussey tossed to Steel on the 5 yard line to climax a march and the Louisiana half back squirmed over the goal.

On the try for the extra point by place kick the pass from center was low and the ball bounded away. The lineups:

FLINT SHOT WINS EASY VICTORY IN WINDY CITY STAKE

Betting Sets Record for Half Mile Track.

BY FRENCH LANE.

A champion of the handicap division of the Sportsman's Park course crowded his way to the front in the annual running of the Windy City handicap yesterday afternoon.

The new champion is Flint Shot, 6 year old son of Chance Shot-La Bayonette, bred by Joseph E. Widener but which carried the silks of Clarence Davison, Wheaton horseman, to triumph in the mile and a sixteenth struggle.

He was making his sixth start of the Sportsman's Park season. Three of these efforts have wound up in victories. He finished second once, third once, and has been out of the money only on one occasion.

From start to finish Flint Shot, snugly and confidently ridden by Jocky A. Bodiou, dominated the running. He turned up as the winner by a length and a half. Easy Sailing, after running second all the way, finished in that position, a length and a half in front of Our Count.

Flint Shot Pays $4.20.

The race was decided over a slow track, still Flint Shot ran it in the remarkably fast time of 1:51 2-5. This was less than three seconds off the track record.

Many big wagers were made on the Davison entry during the closing minutes of the wagering. As a result Flint Shot went to the post as the 6 to 5 favorite, paying $4.20 for a $2 ticket. Easy Sailing paid $3.80 to place. The entry paid $2.80 to show.

A crowd of 9,000 that wagered in the neighborhood of $340,000 watched Flint Shot win his race. This brought the total betting for the first 18 days of the Sportsman's Park season to $3,600,000. This shatters all records for wagering at the half mile track. It no doubt is a new American record for betting at half mile tracks.

The big excitement of the afternoon came in the running of the two mile and seventy yard race which was seventh on the program. The horses passed the stands five times on this long, heart breaking journey.

Duchess Reigh Balks.

First thing to happen took place at the start when Duchess Reigh, the odds-on favorite, wheeled and refused to start running until she was some 30 lengths back of all the others.

Gradually during the first mile she fought her way into a contending position. On the last turn she took the lead. The drive to get it, however, had taken too much out of her. She faltered in the final strides then lost the decision by half a length to Bold Bid. She saved second money. Monocle staggered home third.

Had Jocky R. Haber displayed better judgment on Duchess Reigh instead of moving her up too quickly in the first mile she would have won anyway. As it was she indicated she was about 20 pounds better than other horses in the race.

Bold Bid paid $10.80 for a $2 ticket.

Dogs Are Sent to School for Specialty Show

BY BOB BECKER.

Between 1,000 and 1,500 dogs of a variety of breeds now are going to school in preparation for the big Western Specialty Clubs association dog show which will be held in the Coliseum in Chicago the week-end of Nov. 20, 21. This is Chicago's big fall show which brings together many specialty clubs. THE TRIBUNE will sponsor the children's handling classes in the show and award prizes to the boys and girls who win. Mrs. Denis Sullivan Jr. of Chicago and Mrs. Noel S. Young of Lake Forest will judge these classes.

The schooling the show dogs will get between this date and the opening day of the show mainly will be for young dogs who need more training in posing and general ring manners. It takes many hours of work to get a show dog that will walk well on leash, stand quietly before the judge, hold his pose, and generally show himself to the best advantage.

24 Clubs Represented.

The twenty-seventh combined specialty shows, which this year will bring together twenty-four breed clubs, include the following:

American Sealyham Terrier club [first appearance in the Chicago show this fall], Central States Dachshunde club, Chicago Bullterrier club, Chicago Bulldog Club, Inc., Chicago Collie Club, Inc., Chihuahua Club of America, Cocker Spaniel Club of the Middle West, English Springer Spaniel Club of the Central States, German Shepherd Club of the Great Lakes, Inc., Irish Terrier Club of Chicago, Inc., Kerry Blue Terrier Club of Chicago, Mid-States Chow Chow club, Midwest Great Dane club, Midwest Standard Schnauzer club, the Central States Airedale Terrier club, the Dobermann-Pinscher Club of America, the Scottish Terrier Club of Chicago, the Western Pomeranian club, Western Boston Terrier Club, Inc.; Western English Setter club, Western Irish Setter club, Western Pekingese Club, Inc., and Wire and Smooth Fox Terrier Breeders' Club of Chicago. The last organization to get under the wire to join this group was the German Boxer club.

Largest Entry List Expected.

With this augmented list of breed clubs joining in the Nov. 20-21 show Adolph Kramer, president of the Western Specialty Clubs association, anticipates the largest entry list in recent years.

GETTYSBURG WINS, 19-6.

Bethlehem, Pa., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Gettysburg, led by Paul Fulmer, substitute half back, defeated Lehigh, 19 to 6, today before 8,000.

A SHOT SHOOTS HOME IN FRONT

Flint Shot, 6 year old son of Chance Shot-La Bayonette, romped home first yesterday in the Windy City Handicap, feature of the program at Sportsman's Park. The winner (extreme right) finished a length and a half in front of Easy Sailing (partly hidden). Taking third money along the rail is Flint Shot's stablemate, Our Count. Flint Shot and Our Count, coupled as the C. E. Davison entry, paid $4.20 in the mutuels.

PITT CHANGES ITS ATHLETIC POLICY; DROPS MINOR FOES

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 23.—(AP)—The University of Pittsburgh tonight announced a revised athletic policy which Athletic Director James Hagan said "is designed to bring football to a proper plane in relation to other college educational activities."

The new policy "reserves the right to secure employment for students with athletic ability on the same basis such help is given to other university students" but opposes outright athletic subsidies.

It also declares that after existing contracts expire, Pitt will play no more than nine games, but all with major opponents. Beginning in 1940 the season will not open until the first Saturday in October and warmup games will be eliminated.

In a preface to his recommendations to the university athletic council Hagan said:

"We should bear in mind the true purposes of athletics are educational. . . . Our athletic teams should represent a normal and logical development of the whole program of athletics. They should not be a product of highly specialized training given only to a small group of students especially selected for that purpose previous to the time of matriculation at the university.

"Our coaches should not at any time initiate contact with any prospective athlete. Neither should they attend any athletic contest with the objective of scouting for prospective athletes. A strict adherence to this rule should be observed."

UNION PRINTERS ENTER FOR FUN; BURN UP LEAGUE

Bowl Into First Place Tie in Randolph League.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

When the Chicago Union Printers entered the Randolph Bowling league, organizers of the team were a bit apprehensive. That's all changed now and the shoe is on the other foot; in fact, most of the worrying is done by the fifteen other teams trying to keep up with these specialists of the printing trade and the bowling alleys.

At the start of the season the Printers thought they would form a team and if nothing else have an enjoyable evening in major league competition. But from the way the quintet of Becky Koeller, Jim Ogden, Gus Engelhardt, George Wolf, and Capt. Ed Baebl is knocking the pins dizzy the Printers stand a good chance of winning the league championship.

Tied for First Place.

They're tied for first place with the Mineralites, perennial champions of the league, at 15 won and 3 lost, these two teams being far ahead of their pursuers.

The last team to realize that the Printers are going places was the Wagner & Hansons, who were dealt three setbacks. All the Printers did was total 3,009 in compiling games of 1031, 1003, and 975 to win each contest decisively.

They're Consistent.

Thus far consistency has been the chief reason for the success of the Printers. Wolf led the team at last Thursday's session, followed by Engelhardt, 621, and Koeller, 620. This, of course, is a far cry from the 724 total turned in by Matt Siwe of the Whitecaps at the last session, but the Whitecaps were not equal to the occasion when they encountered the Printers.

The Birk Brothers, who suffered three defeats at the hands of the Mineralites, will be the Printers' opposition next Thursday at the 29 West Randolph street alleys.

Windy City League.

Although he shot the season's second high game of 278, P. Veverka of the Soper Brothers was nosed out by W. Hoar of the McKesson Old Crows, 679 to 678, for high individual series of the week in Windy City Major league. By winning three games from the Strachan Coals while the Budweisers were taking two out of three from the Whitecaps, the J. M. Kralovecs grabbed undisputed possession of first place. The leaders have won 13 and lost 5 games.

North End League.

The Birk Brothers again led the scoring in the North End Traveling league, their total this time being 3,151. They, however, lost ground to the Michelobs, who swept over the Keeley five with the aid of Pete Petersen's 701 series. The Samuelsons were runners-up to the Birks with a 3,049 total, 697 of which was contributed by Joe Janis.

On South Side Alleys.

Tom Crowe helped himself to a 677 series and had the honor of leading the Bruck Major league. He topped Bill Harper by 12 pins. Next were Harry Willett, 668; Jim Garvey, 656; Harry Heermans, 651; Clem Lightfoot, 644; Fred Berchaus, 643, and Bill Smith, 642.

Classic League.

The Classic league will bowl at the Gold Coast Recreation, 1213 North Clark street, tonight at 8 o'clock. The schedule:

Triangle Shirts vs. Oak Leaf Motors.
Pabst Blue Ribbon vs. Baby Ruth.
Monarch vs. Prager.
Charles H. Weber vs. Power House.

COMPANIES SEEK WORKER PROFIT SHARING PLANS

Desire to Stabilize Relationship.

BY WILLIAM BROMAGE.

Employers today are devoting more study to plans for rank and file worker participation in corporation profits than at any time in the history of American business. A survey discloses that many corporations are considering adoption of permanent plans providing for profit sharing, workers' savings funds, and employé stock ownership.

Cash bonuses paid to workers by corporations at the close of last year were larger than ever before, but there is a general belief that the straight bonus distribution without other features will not accomplish the goal toward which employers are working—that of stabilizing worker relationships.

Labor Situation Causes Study.

The unsettled labor situation today is the principal reason for the growing interest of the employer in this subject. Concerned over the labor strife in the last two years, corporation heads are seeking ways to improve labor relationship by giving the employé a bigger stake in his job than the weekly or bi-monthly pay check.

Employé stock ownership plans were in great vogue in the 1920s. There had been a limited experience in earlier years, but most plans originated after 1921. And most of them ended after 1929.

The national industrial conference board estimated that in 1928 about 800,000 employés of 315 corporations held shares of their employers' stocks with a market value of more than a billion dollars. This was nearly a third of the total employés of these concerns.

Early Plans Unsatisfactory.

The experience with most of the plans that were active when the 1929 crash came was unsatisfactory. Many proved embarrassing to employers.

These plans generally provided for purchase of stock on an instalment basis, which in many respects is like buying on margin. All was fine while prices were going up, but when the turn came a worker making instalment payments on a stock was not happy when the shares were selling in the open market far below the purchase price.

In many instances he found that long before he had the stock paid for the market value was less than he had already paid in. His resentment at the turn of affairs usually was directed at his employer—in most cases unjustly.

Many profit-sharing plans are in operation today. Some are straight bonus arrangements. Others are profit sharing programs combined with stock purchase plans. There are relatively few direct stock purchase plans for rank and file workers.

Must Be Business Proposition.

Most of the plans which came through the severe depression years successfully have several important features in common, although they differ in detail of operation.

A study of several outstanding plans for workers, including those of Procter & Gamble, Sears, Roebuck & Co., and the Joslyn Manufacturing and Supply company, leads to the conclusion that the first essential is that the plan must be a business proposition. It must not be charity.

These plans require that the participating employé pay a part of his wage into a fund to which the corporation adds a part of its profits. Through investment of the money, either in the securities of the employing company or otherwise, the employés' fund grows. Generally the goal is to create a retirement fund.

The biggest worry of the responsible worker who is regularly employed probably is that he will have little when he reaches his sixties. His greatest desire probably is to have a share in the profits of the business which employs him.

Bonus Doesn't Answer Age Problem.

A cash bonus does not answer his old age problem. The social security pension is not enough. In most cases his cash bonus is spent soon after he receives it. And bonuses generally are paid only in good times.

Employers who maintain permanent profit-sharing plans say that savings are an important part of a successful arrangement, both from the standpoint of employé welfare and labor relationship. The worker, they say, believes he has a partnership in the business.

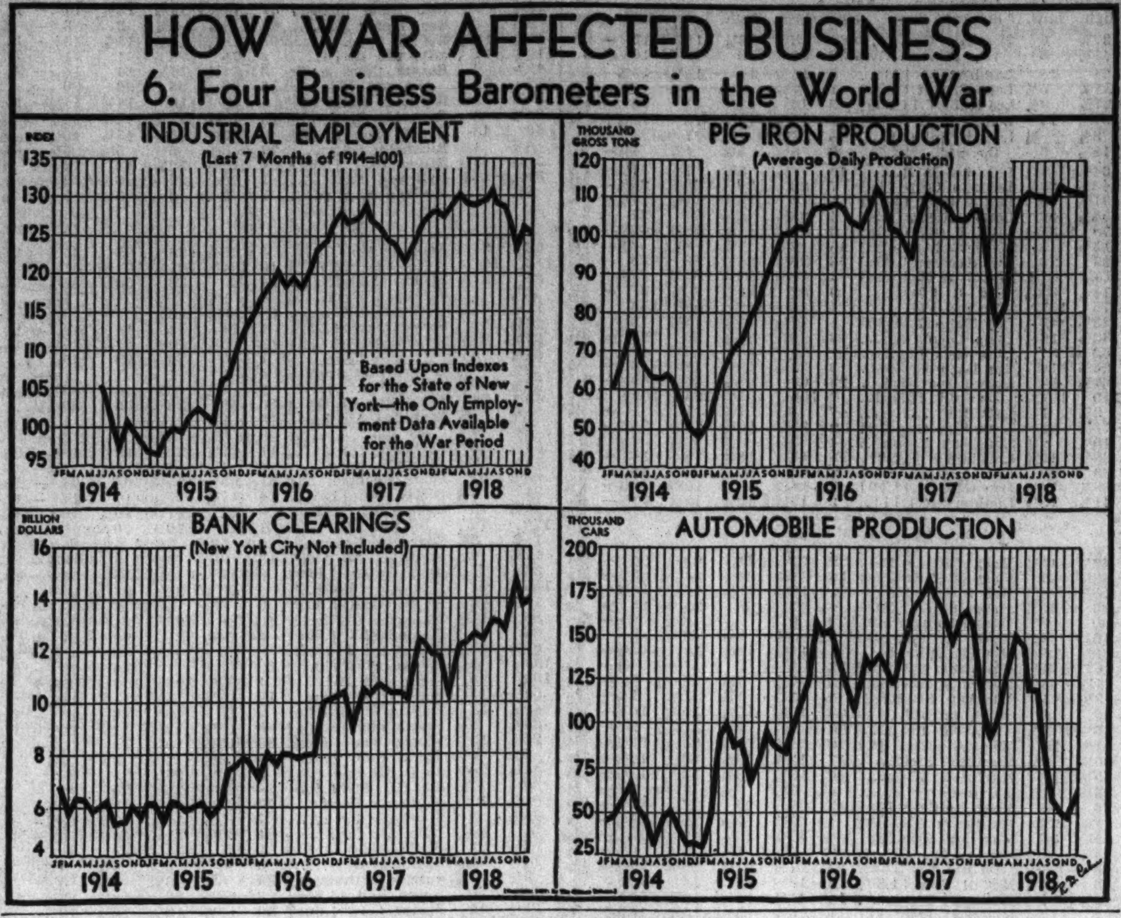
Employé contribution to the fund is important. The worker has something to do with the creation and building of the fund. It is not a charity proposition.

Later articles will discuss the operation of several outstanding profit-sharing-savings plans maintained by large and small corporations.

HOLDS 8.7 PCT. AIR LINE RETURN NOT EXCESSIVE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—A return of 8.7 per cent on the investment of an aviation operating company should not be regarded as excessive in view of the frequent changes necessitated by government regulations and the rapid development of air navigation, Francis W. Brown, interstate commerce commission examiner, said in a report made public today.

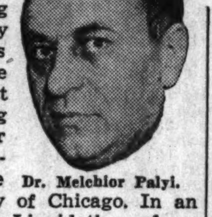
The report, which observed that neither congress nor the courts have decided what constitutes a "fair return" on the value of airline properties, was the result of the examiner's study of the finances of the Western Air Express corporation.



Federal Policy Broke Market, Palyi Asserts

BY HOWARD WOOD.

The ill fated attempt of the administration's economic "planners" to engineer a revival of prosperity through pump priming and monetary management was the cause of the recent market crash, according to Dr. Melchior Palyi, guest professor of finance at the University of Chicago. In an article on "The Liquidation of an Induced Prosperity," prepared for Stifel, Nicolaus & Co., Dr. Palyi traces the various steps by which Washington planners set their scheme in motion and outlines the consequences.



Dr. Melchior Palyi.

"Everybody knows," he says, "that the upturn started in 1933 by government fiat: devaluation, budgetary deficit financing by the banks, and direct or indirect price raising devices. This governmental character of credit demand did not change substantially in the whole period."

Policy Boosts Deposits.

The trebling of the gold reserves of the nation, itself largely a result of the administration's policies, was not the chief element contributing to the upward surge of prices, Dr. Palyi explains. He points out that the gold influx accounted for only a small part of the aggregate increase in bank deposits, the larger part being the direct result of the government's borrowing and spending program and money printing devices taking the form of silver certificates or federal reserve notes. The inflationary effect of the government induced expansion in bank deposits was a basic factor in the rise in stock prices and the acceleration of business activity, he said.

Of sixteen billion dollars of new assets placed in the hands of banks as a result of administration schemes, he says, about five or six billions represents the results of the gold influx, but about ten billions is nothing but the product of credit demand from the government.

"Government Credit Prosperity."

"From beginning to end," Dr. Palyi continues, "this prosperity wave was a government credit prosperity—as opposed to the usual business credit prosperity. Most of the expansion was due to federal demand for funds and to increase credit to finance government ventures.

"The velocity of money lagged behind the expansion of its volume, contrary to all known experience in previous upturns. The impetus of new money turned out by the government set the wheels of the economic machinery in motion, but failed to create sufficient power to provide the expected automatic acceleration. The disbursement of public funds accomplished the purpose of the original expenditure, but did not succeed in stimulating productive investment.

"It should have been foreseen that when the original driving force was diminished the mechanism would of necessity slow down."

Artificiality Is Demonstrated.

Dr. Palyi's description of the manner in which the administration's "planned" recovery movement stalled as soon as the stimulus of huge government spending began to weaken has interested financial men because of the manner in which it demonstrates the artificiality of the upswing. Inasmuch as the government cannot continue indefinitly to spend billions in excess of its income the test of the genuineness of the recovery comes only when the artificial stimulus of such spending is removed. In other words, the experiment is not complete until the budget is back in balance.

To date mere talk of balancing the budget—or tapering of the deficits—has not helped business sentiment and the markets. Indication that the administration is attempting to bring the budget into line, in fact, has even heightened the fears of business men and investors because of the prospect that the attempt to bring about a balance would be by means of higher taxes rather than reduced expenditures.

"Essentially, we experienced an upturn based overwhelmingly on government credit expansion," Dr. Palyi says. "The government used the credit to finance business and for other purposes. The assumption was that such indirect methods of financ-

Investment and Speculation (4).

The first thing an investor must do in purchasing a bond is to satisfy himself that the security is sound. The issuing corporation should have a good record of past earnings and should have good future prospects.

Most sound bonds are backed by a first mortgage on the company's property. The value of this property should be well above the total amount of the bond issue, because in the event of possible foreclosure and forced sale a margin of safety is necessary.

The investor should also know how the interest and principal are to be paid; whether the company can redeem the bonds whenever it wishes or only on a certain date; whether there are prior obligations—that is, other securities which in the case of liquidation would be paid off first or have prior claims—and whether a sinking fund is provided. A sinking fund is one in which money is placed at stated intervals to accumulate until the bonds mature, when the money is used to pay off the bonds.

Some business men, who want to invest money for a limited period, buy short term bonds which usually pay a slightly higher interest rate. The average investor, however, wants his money in long term bonds which yield a fair return and still offer safety. Such a course obviates worry about his investment.

FOREIGN MEAT IS BIG ITEM ON AMERICAN TABLE

More Being Sold in Butcher Shops.

Foreign meat is growing in importance as an item on the American dinner table, according to data furnished by the department of commerce.

In American butcher shops meat of foreign origin is accounting for an increasing proportion of the total meat sold. Constant competition is provided for meat products of the American farm. Much of the foreign meat that comes into the country loses its identity before it reaches the butcher shop. Without knowledge of the fact one may be a consumer of foreign meat.

It is estimated that the meat imported in August, including animals brought in on the hoof, was equal to one-third of the output of domestic meat by Chicago packing plants that month.

Meat Imports Soar.

August receipts of foreign meat amounted to approximately 33,707,000 pounds, against 19,437,000 pounds in August, 1936. These figures include the estimated meat tonnage represented by the live animals brought in. Included is all beef, veal, and pork. The increase over last year is large, but the growth in American consumption of foreign meat is brought out even more forcibly by contrast with import figures for August, 1935, and 1934.

This year's August total is more than double the 13,304,000 pounds of foreign meat imported in August, 1935, and four times greater than the 6,823,000 pounds received in August, 1934. This means sales of foreign live stock raisers to American consumers have grown 380 per cent in three years.

Imports Far Above 1934.

Foreign meat imported in the first eight months this year totaled 248,694,000 pounds. In the same period of 1934 the imports amounted to only 44,134,000 pounds.

A summary of the four year record of imports is given in the following table [in millions of pounds]:

	—August— Beef & veal.	Pork.	—8 mos.— Beef & veal.	Pork.
1936	15	4	168	31
1935	12	2	133	6
1934	7	*..	43	1

*Less than 500,000 pounds.

The effect that the growth in meat imports has had on the domestic live stock industry has its counterpart in foreign countries. In many countries the live stock industry has registered impressive expansion, due in a large measure to the opening of the American market to their products.

Foreign Slaughter Increases.

The hog slaughter in Denmark and Uruguay in the first seven months this year was larger than last year. A better export demand also resulted in an increase in the number of cattle and sheep killed for market in Uruguay in the same period.

Meanwhile the official figures on the hogs and cattle slaughtered in this country in the first nine months of 1937 show decreases from last year. Government figures show that 21,678,000 hogs were slaughtered under federal inspection from Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1937, compared with 23,590,000 in the corresponding period last year. The cattle slaughter in the same period was 7,395,890 head, against 7,872,414 last year.

LIVE STOCK PRICES FALL

Prices of live animals were cut drastically at the Chicago stockyards last week. Fed steers and yearlings tumbled unevenly 50 cents to $2.50, good heavy cattle showing the sharpest downturn, with the plain light stock off the least. Most cows closed steady with a week ago, but hefers declined $1 to $1.50.

Hogs finished unevenly 65 cents to $1.25 lower, new crop stock being off the most and lard hogs down the least. The close on lambs was 50 to 75 cents lower.

Hog receipts at Chicago yesterday at 6,000 were largest since April. Sales were mostly 10 to 15 cents under the average of Friday.

Ten loads of lambs arrived yesterday, but were locked up by commission men to be carried over until tomorrow.

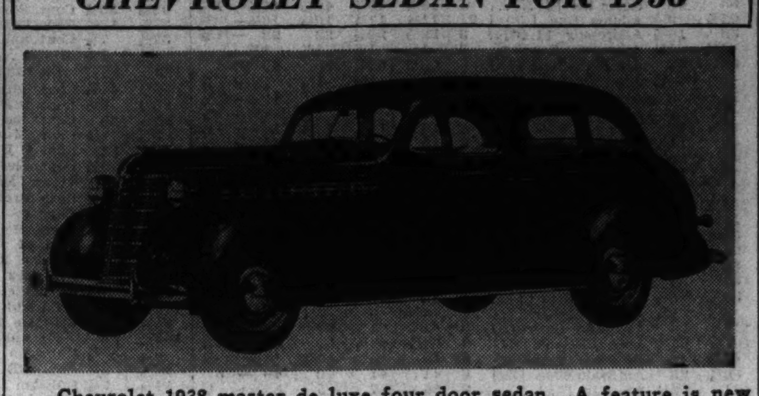
CHEVROLET SEDAN FOR 1938



Chevrolet 1938 master de luxe four door sedan. A feature is new clutch described as being of revolutionary design.

New Chevrolet Cars Offered to Motorists

Numerous improvements in engineering and mechanical details, and restyling of the body to a considerable extent are to be found in the two 1938 Chevrolet lines—the master and master de luxe—which have just been presented formally to the public.

The principal engineering improvement over the 1937 line is a new type of clutch which is described as combining more positive action with greater operating ease, and adding greatly to the safety, comfort, and durability of the car.

Contrasted with the 1937 models, the principal change in appearance is found in the front part of the car. The top of the hood sweeps forward from the cowl in a curve to cap the almost vertical flat-topped radiator and grille. The grille is made up of chromium plated horizontal bars.

Engine Is Improved.

Apart from the new clutch most of the engine improvements are refinements. The engine still is of 85 horse power. However, the Chevrolet engineers say that a new and lighter flywheel, in conjunction with the clutch, affords quicker response and greater flexibility to the controls. Valve springs, valves, and portions of the cooling system have been redesigned rather than simply refined.

There is a faster transfer of heat from the combustion chambers, especially in the vicinity of the valves. There is a generator of larger capacity and a new starting mechanism with overrunning clutch and automatic throttle to insure easier starting.

The rear seat in the five passenger cars has been made two inches wider through changes in the rear wheel housing design. The rear springs have been attached in a new manner to give quieter operation over any kind of road.

Other Improvements Made.

Trunks have been redesigned so that the flat shelf under which the spare wheel rests horizontally has been removed, giving 6⅞ inches additional height. The compartment floor has been redesigned to include a well in which the spare wheel restis in a nearly vertical position. Tools are in a separate compartment just inside the rear edge of the trunk.

Many improvements are incorporated in the interior, including an instrument board that is easier to read, an illuminated ignition lock, and numerous conveniences. As a safety measure for the protection of rear seat passengers, the hard portion of the back of the front seats terminates several inches lower than in previous models and the portion above it is cushioned.

Both the master and master de luxe series contain the new clutch, the principal difference being in the substitution of the conventional I-beam front axle and elliptic springs on the master for knee action on the master de luxe.

COURT RESERVES ACTION ON TRUST REORGANIZATION

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Circuit Judge Edwin Dickerson reserved action today for 60 days on petitions and cross petitions asking liquidation or reorganization of Continental Shares, Inc., investment trust holding company founded by Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier.

Judge Dickerson ordered the delay "to afford all parties in interest the opportunity to propose a plan of reorganization fair to all concerned, and if such plan shall have the approval of the court, a further time will be afforded in which to obtain such assents thereto as may be necessary in order to carry such plans into effect."

Continental Shares, now in receivership, has a present estimated valuation of $8,000,000. One group of preferred stockholders petitioned for immediate liquidation. Common stockholders, contending they would receive nothing in event of immediate liquidation, and another group of preferred holders opposed the proposal.

STEEL OUTPUT STILL FALLING; ORDERS LIGHT

Cleveland, O., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Steel operations continue to recede and indications are they will break below the 50 per cent of capacity mark next week, the Daily Metal Trade said today.

"Steel buyers have ceased making commitments and are utilizing their inventories pending a clarification of the general business situation," the publication said. "Steel makers' new business is at the point where order volume is only a fraction of that a year ago."

STOCK MARKET SINKS DEEPER IN SELLING WAVE

Railway and Steel Issues Swamped.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 23.—A fresh wave of selling poured into the stock exchange today and sent prices tumbling as much as $10 a share. Railroads and steels bore the brunt of the attack with United States Steel common falling to a new low for the year at $52.50 a share.

The Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed today at 127.15, off 5.11 points from Friday and 8.33 points from Thursday, the high point of the recovery from last Monday's crash. The average fell to a low of 115.83 Tuesday, but closed that day at 126.85. Thus, in yesterday's and today's trading, most of the gain since Tuesday's closing was erased.

Closes Strenuous Week.

Today's decline brought to a close the most strenuous week of trade on the stock market since the initial uprush early in 1933, which ended with a precipitous slump in July of that year. At the close today yesterday's prices were back in the range in which they fluctuated during the two years from midsummer, 1933, until the sustained bull market got under way in 1935.

Trading today was heavy for a short session, amounting to 1,565,020 shares. Of the 920 issues traded, only 69 advanced. A total of 746 closed lower and 105 were unchanged. One new issue, Otis Steel prior preferred, bucked the trend to establish a new peak for the year. Only 20 recorded new lows, most of the year's minimums having been reached on Tuesday's break.

Cause of Rail Selling.

Liquidation of railroad shares was attributed to disappointment over the meagerness of the interstate commerce commission's rate boost granted after the close Friday. Although increase will add $47,500,000 to the roads' annual income, it falls several hundred millions short of caring for increased expenses which the carriers must meet in the form of wage boosts and higher taxes and costs.

Steel shares were adversely affected by week-end reports that the industry will cut production further this week, following a drastic reduction in output last week.

New York Central was the day's most active issue. It fell $2.37½ to $18.87½. Other prominent losers were Union Pacific at $90, off $10; Nickel Plate preferred at $40, off $8; Deere at $72, off $8; Case at $95.50, off $7.50; Santa Fe at $40, off $4; Great Northern at $26, off $4; Southern Pacific at $19.37½, off $3.62½; Atlantic Coast Line at $24, off $3.12½.

Other Large Declines.

Louisville and Nashville closed at $58, down $5; Chrysler at $61.62½, off $4.12½; General Motors at $37.87½, down $2.25; Consolidated Edison at $24.62½, off $3.75; Anaconda at $28, off $2.12½; Westinghouse at $92,

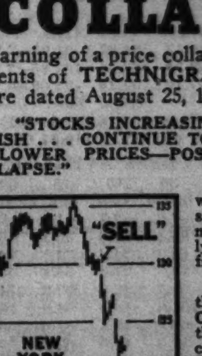
Warned of COLLAPSE
Warning of a price collapse was given clients of TECHNIGRAPHICS in a wire dated August 25, 1937:
"STOCKS INCREASINGLY BEARISH . . . CONTINUE TO LOOK FOR LOWER PRICES—POSSIBLY COLLAPSE."



This telegram which also advised short sales, climaxed consistently bearish advices from July 28 on.
On August 25, the day TECHNIGRAPHICS sent this warning to clients, the Dow-Jones industrial average was at 181.70. Since then it lost 65 points in the second greatest collapse in stock market history.
Just as these advices anticipated the March-to-June decline on March 18-20 (and recommended 100% liquidation in investment and semi-investment accounts, short sales in trading accounts), so TECHNIGRAPHICS again anticipated this disastrously swift decline.

The violence of the selling was a surprise to trade, although some reaction resulting from profit taking and week-end evening up of speculators had been expected.

The selling in the first half hour was so heavy that the quotation ticker lagged 4 minutes behind in reporting prices on the floor of the exchange. The pace of trading slowed later and the ticker caught up, only to again fall behind in late trading. Single transactions of as much as 1,000 to 15,000 shares were recorded frequently. Volume was the heaviest for Saturday since March 6. So far apart were buyers and sellers on prices that Santa Fe, New York Central, and Union Pacific were 25 minutes late in opening.

CHICAGO STOCKS LOWER

Chicago stocks finished the week irregularly lower yesterday. Of 117 issues traded, 72 declined, 22 advanced and 23 were unchanged from Friday's close. Last week's trading of 746,000 shares was the largest volume on the Chicago Stock exchange since the week ended Jan. 16, 1937, when 748,000 shares were traded.

Volume leaders in yesterday's session included Commonwealth Edison, which closed 1¼ lower at 24½ on sales of 4,050 shares, Chicago corporation common, off ⅛ at 2½, on sales of 3,500, and Armour & Co. common, which closed ⅝ lower on sales of 2,450 shares.

Middle West closed at 5¾, down ½ point. Zenith Radio sank 1⅛ to 19½, and Walgreen common was 1⅞ lower at 21¼. General Household at 2½ was off ⅜. Cities Service closed ⅛ lower at 2⅛. Butler Brothers common was off 1 point at 8¾. Borg-Warner sank 3 points to 30.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE average of 20 stocks on the Chicago exchange closed at 11.45, compared with 12.17 on Friday and 12.41 last Saturday. The high yesterday was 11.97 and the low was 11.33.

Production of Cigarets Rises During September

Output of small cigarets in September totaled 14,853,803,420, compared with 14,341,883,483 in September, 1936, the bureau of internal revenue reported yesterday. Large cigars totaled 498,835,303, against 489,293,034.

Commodities

A renewal of selling in commodity markets sent prices lower yesterday. In nearly all markets the spot and future delivery prices quoted on commodities were below Friday's level and all showed decisive losses compared with a week earlier.

The Dow-Jones index of commodity future prices fell to 55.87, off 0.57 from the preceding day. The Associated Press index of spot prices of thirty-five principal staples closed at a new low for the year at 81.67, compared with the preceding day's figure of 82.09.

Losses in the hide futures market were among the heaviest yesterday. Closing prices were off 0.45 to 0.47 of a cent from Friday's close. Hides for delivery in December closed at 11.93 cents a pound, a third of a cent above the season's lowest quotation.

Futures prices on rubber, cocoa, coffee, and copper dipped moderately.

Butter and egg prices on the Chicago Mercantile exchange incurred moderate losses on yesterday's transactions. Eggs for December delivery closed at 19¼ cents a dozen compared with 19¾ cents on the preceding day. Butter closed at 33⅝ cents against 33⅞ cents on Friday.

Copper futures were moderately lower yesterday but other metals were comparatively steady.

PURE OIL WILL PAY DIVIDEND ON COMMON SHARES

First Payment to Be Made Since Sept. 1, 1930.

Directors of the Pure Oil company yesterday declared a dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, payable Dec. 1 to stockholders of record Nov. 10. This is the first dividend on the common stock since Sept. 1, 1930. The regular quarterly dividends on the preferred issues also were authorized.

Redemption of the $7,662,000 of 8 per cent preferred stock outstanding was provided for on Jan. 1, 1938, out of the proceeds of the recent sale of 5 per cent cumulative preferred shares, the company announced.

Earnings of the company for the nine months ended Sept. 30 were estimated to be in excess of $9,000,000, after all charges, as compared with net income of $4,800,000 for the corresponding months of 1936.

Share Earnings Estimated.

Earnings on the 3,982,031 common shares now outstanding were approximately $1.77 per share, compared with 94 cents per common share in 1936, when 3,257,610 common shares the nine months ended Sept. 30, were outstanding.

An extra dividend of 20 cents and the usual quarterly payment of the same amount were voted by directors of Crown Cork & Seal Company, Ltd., at Montreal. A similar extra was paid at this time last year.

GRAIN MARKETS JOLTED BY DROP IN SECURITIES

Wheat Recovers Part of Earlier Loss.

CHICAGO GRAIN FUTURES

Closing prices on the December delivery of principal grains on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday:

	Saturday.	Friday.	Year ago.
Wheat	$ .97¼	$ .97¾	$1.15
Corn	.57¾	.59	.94¼
Oats	.30⅝	.30⅝	.41⅛
Rye	.72⅝	.72¼	.83⅝
Soy beans	.96½	.97	1.25¼

Weakness in the securities markets was largely responsible for a lower level of grain prices yesterday. Wheat futures reacted about 2 cents after an early upturn in sympathy with an advance in the Liverpool market, but the break brought in a good class of buying headed by cash interests and a rally toward the close wiped out a large part of the earlier loss. Closing trades were ¾ to 1 cent a bushel lower, with the May delivery leading the decline.

Corn developed independent weakness due to uncertainty regarding the government's loan policy and the forecast for freezing temperatures in Illinois, Iowa, and Indiana, which would assist in drying out the new crop.

Corn Closes on Bottom.

Closing trades in corn were at practically the bottom, with losses of 1 to 1¼ cents a bushel. Oats, rye, and soy beans weakened in sympathy with other grains.

Political complications were the main influence in an advance of ¾ to 2⅝ cents a bushel in wheat futures in Liverpool. A fairly active foreign demand developed for North American cash wheat and sales of hard winter and Canadian wheat were placed as high as 1,000,000 bushels. The continent was the best buyer. Business in domestic wheat was facilitated by lower ocean freight rates from the gulf to European ports.

Cash Corn Prices Decline.

Cash corn prices declined 1 to 3 cents a bushel yesterday and the basis in the sample market was ½ to 2 cent lower relative to the December delivery. Traders expect much larger receipts this week if weather conditions are favorable. More than 200 cars, or 300,000 bushels, were received here yesterday.

December corn in the Buenos Aires, Argentine, market went to about 5 cents a bushel premium over the Chicago price, putting American grain closer to an export basis with Europe than has prevailed in the last four years. No export sales were reported, however.

ing would lead in due course to the rise of a genuine demand on the part of business which would displace and replace government stimulation. The assumption did not materialize."

Last spring when the money managers in Washington, fearing an inordinate boom, sought to tighten bank credit by the device of increasing the reserve requirements of the commercial banks, he points out, the upward trend was reversed and a deflationary psychology set in motion.

"Monetary management," says Dr. Palyi, "means the conscious attempt to fully apply scientific methods to control the economic system instead of permitting it to operate in its own quasi-automatic fashion with management restricted to a necessary minimum. It is not the first time that such an attempt has been made. It is the first time that it has been done in a period of peace with the enormous resources of the United States and the most modern technique at the disposal of the management. Unexpected reactions and unforeseeable results are the result.

Failed to Foresee Effects.

"Such is the tragi-comical situation in which the monetary management of this country finds itself. Equipped with the greatest gold reserve in the world's history, a liquid economic structure, and all other prerequisites, it failed to foresee the effects of its medicines on the psychology of the subject. The situation which arose may go down in history as the crisis of monetary management.

"It is easy to suggest what should be done to end the present slump, but far more difficult to advise how not to carry into a boom which would end in a future slump. What steps will be taken in the immediate future and what the market's reaction to them will be, are matters of political speculation."

Everybody's Business

Unreasonable Fluctuations of Security Prices

To banish depressions forever by preventing "sudden and unreasonable fluctuations of security prices" was one of the avowed aims of Congress in enacting the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

Section 2, Paragraph 4, Title 1 of the Act reads:

"National emergencies, which produce widespread unemployment and the dislocation of trade, transportation, and industry, and which burden interstate commerce and adversely affect the general welfare, are precipitated, intensified, and prolonged by manipulation and sudden and unreasonable fluctuations of security prices and by excessive speculation on such exchanges and markets, and to meet such emergencies the Federal Government is put to such great expense as to burden the national credit."

The stock market relatively suffered a more severe percentage of collapse in the 65 days ended October 20, 1937, than in any other similar period of history.

No one in the financial districts of America—and you will find these centers even in cities of moderate size—advocates the repeal of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. We believe the original concept of the Act was good, but the stock market decline indicates a need for reviewing the law and its effects.

Congress has been summoned for an emergency session November 15. We urge government officials, business executives, labor leaders and laymen to call for a re-examination of the wisdom of the rules and regulations which have increased rather than reduced the violence of security price fluctuations. We urge a review of such measures as the capital gains tax, undistributed profits tax and restrictions of securities purchases and sales by corporation officials.

When markets cannot absorb moderate selling, and the collapse in values undermines the nation's business structure, it then becomes everybody's business.

Convertible Securities—2.

Convertible bonds, debentures and preferred stocks have made up such a large proportion of recent security offerings that the implications of this type of financing are of vital interest to investors.

Prior to the recent sinking spells in the stock market, coupled with a sagging bond market, corporations had been finding this form of financing particularly attractive.

By setting a conversion price a few dollars higher than current quotations for their common stock, they dangled a speculative lure in front of investors' noses.

A small further stock market upturn has meant profit to the holder of the convertible security. His convertible bond or preferred share will sell above par when the price of the stock is above the conversion price. And if the company continues to do well, he may want to exercise his privilege of converting his holding into common stock to receive dividends which may give him a higher return on his money.

The speculative profit lure attaching to convertible securities has enabled corporations to sell them at better prices or with a lower interest or dividend rate than if the conversion feature were absent.

These facts mean two things to the corporation. It gets its money cheaper now. It has smaller interest charges to meet in the future, when business may not be so good, because of the lower rate and because of the amount of such securities that reasonably may be expected to be converted into common stock on which there are no dividend requirements.

The common stockholder also stands to benefit from the lower fixed charges ahead of his holding, but he also stands to be injured through dilution of his stock equity.

It is true that he may buy the convertible securities to protect himself against dilution, but he may not have the cash or desire to do so. An extreme example can be used to illustrate the point. Suppose he owns ten of a corporation's 1,000,000 shares and enough bonds are converted to increase the number of shares to 2,000,000. Theoretically, at least, his equity is cut in two. In fairness, it should be added that elimination of the bonds will lessen the dilution of his equity by eliminating fixed interest charges. In some cases the dilution will be minor; in others it will be considerable.

Stockholders, if offered first rights to buy convertible securities, gain some protection in that they can sell rights they do not choose to exercise.

RAILROAD LOANS LEAD BONDS TO LOWER LEVELS

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Railroad bonds wilted today under a renewed attack of selling which carried leading issues down fractional points to nearly $40 per $1,000 bond. Trading was unusually heavy in the group.

The selling apparently was based on belated realization that the rate increases granted by the interstate commerce commission Friday would not offset even half of the recently granted wage boosts. The roads, in addition, must meet millions of dollars in heavier expenses and taxes.

Medium priced and defaulted issues were the hardest hit among the rail group. The index of one leading agency dropped 1.6 points to 78.2.

Price changes in bonds of the federal government were small with principal activity centering in the longer term maturities. Gains and losses in the group were confined to 5-32 point, or $1.56¼ a bond.

Elsewhere in the list the general trend was downward although most losses were held to less than $10 a bond. The industrial average declined 0.6 point to 98.4, and the utility index dropped 0.4 point to 91.8.

In the foreign department price changes were mixed with gains and losses held to within $10 a bond.

Transactions amounted to $7,721,175, par value, the largest volume for a Saturday session since April.

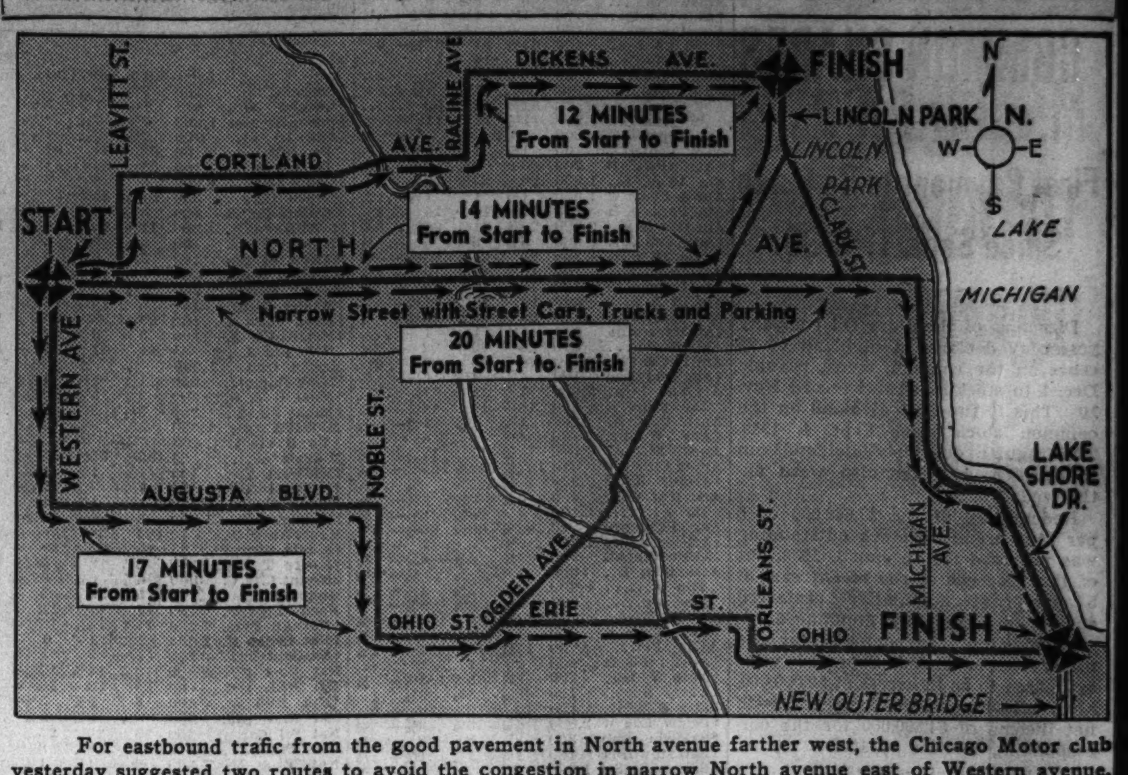
NORTH AVENUE ALTERNATES TO OUTER BRIDGE



For eastbound trafic from the good pavement in North avenue farther west, the Chicago Motor club yesterday suggested two routes to avoid the congestion in narrow North avenue east of Western avenue. The map shows the time saving value of the alternate routes as checked by the club's engineers.

NEWS AND VIEWS

A preview of the Chicago Automobile show on the night of Nov. 5 will be held in the International amphitheater, Halsted and 43d streets, it is announced by officials of the Chicago Automobile Trade association under whose auspices the exposition will be held during the week of Nov. 6 to 13.

Invitations to attend will be sent to leading automobile dealers of Chicago and to officials of the factories. Together with their families, they will pack the central arena of the amphitheater to its 12,000 capacity.

Contests are under way to pick the young women of twenty nationalities who will take part in the "Fashions of the World" spectacle in the central arena. A different group of cars and women will appear each afternoon and evening.

Complete lines of every make of American built passenger car, totaling twenty-three, will be represented at the show.

Nine makes of trucks, occupying most of the south wing of the main floor, will be on display. The trailer section, like the car and truck divisions, will be more comprehensive than at former shows, with twenty makes on exhibition.

The New York Automobile show will open on next Wednesday, continuing for a week.

"In all the measurable qualities the Chrysler cars for 1938 are by far the finest we ever have been privileged to offer," Joseph W. Frazer, vice president in charge of sales of Chrysler division, Chrysler corporation, stated yesterday.

"They are larger, more powerful, safer, more comfortable, and in the opinions of all who have seen them, more beautiful. They are more liberally endowed than ever before with that quality sometimes known as 'class.'

"Our dealer body is the strongest it ever has been. Last year it placed upward of 100,000 new Chryslers in the hands of owners. Naturally this tremendous success has fitted our dealers for still greater successes to come.

"The result of this combination of superior merchandise and a stronger dealer body plus the owner good-will built up by the success of the Chrysler Royal in the low priced field in 1937 is bound to be a considerable increase in our sales for the coming year.

"There will be two cars in the 1938 line, the Royal and Imperial. In each of these models we have arranged to supply the demand for a larger car than is made in the standard body styles by offering seven-passenger accommodations on a much larger wheelbase. For the person who wishes the absolute acme of size and luxury, we are building the Chrysler Custom Imperial on a chassis of 144 inches.

"Our share of the total business has been constantly increasing and with our new merchandise and our splendid outlets, this percentage we feel is bound to be larger in 1938 than ever before."

W. C. Butler, president of Butler Motors, Chicago distributors for Hudson and Hudson Terraplane cars, stated last week that eighty-six official American Automobile Association records for performance, endurance, and speed testify to the merits of the engineering and construction used in the current Hudson automobiles.

"It is not child's play to capture these records which are eagerly sought by car manufacturers," said Mr. Butler. "To capture a record a car is pressed to its last ounce of energy and endurance, and when it comes through with a record it has achieved something which has tested the stamina of the automobile to a degree far beyond anything which the normal driver or owner ever will contemplate."

1938 HUDSON TERRAPLANE IS MORE LUXURIOUS

The Hudson Terraplane, which is the lowest priced car line in Hudson's range of three models, in the 1938 line is larger and more luxuriously trimmed than in the models it succeeds. It is made in two series, the De Luxe, with a 96 horse power engine and the Super Terraplane, with a 101 horse power engine.

Both series of the Hudson Terraplane are mounted on a 117 inch wheelbase. Both cars have as optional equipment Hudson's selective automatic shift transmission, which is now entering its fourth year of use.

Among the improvements in the automatic shift transmission are automatic compensation for wear and for different clutch adjustment.

Besides adding to the refinements of the interior fittings, an improved system of ventilation has been installed. The speedometer and other dials on the instrument board have been placed for greater ease in reading.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

ROAD HOGS.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—This afternoon at Foster avenue and the drainage canal there were two road hogs of the type that should be disciplined. They were blocking trafic, failing to keep to the right so others could pass. The license numbers were 571-086 [issued to Lester Clamage, 1313 West Randolph street], and 556-333 [issued to Otto Fechtner, 4111 North Mason avenue]. STAFFER.

MORE ROAD HOGS.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—At 11:25 this morning, at Oak Park and North avenues, there were two trucks in the center of the street that refused to move to the right in response to a horn from the rear. I noticed last Sunday that you published the names of some road hogs and I believe that these chauffeurs should also get some publicity. The license numbers were X-2916 [issued to Edward Hines Lumber company, 105 West Adams street], and X-2572 [issued to Edwin A. Stoike, 423 Belden avenue]. READER.

HIGHWAY HAZARDS.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—The writer has read your article on Lincoln highway, under date of Oct. 18, with much interest. As you have clearly pointed out, it is merely a pioneer's trail paved, and the same may also be said of route 66, running from Chicago to Joliet.

If you want to obtain a picture of a very dangerous curve on route 66, you will find it at McCook about two miles west of Harlem avenue. On your right hand side, as you go west, you will find a deep stone quarry operated by the Consumers company. There is little or no protection around this curve between the highway and the bottom of this 50 foot drop. Cars coming from the west at high speed could easily bound over and into this pit.

In going about two miles further west, between Willow Springs road and Wolf road on your right hand side, you will find a curve on which they tried to maintain guards, but these have been broken down from time to time. In fact, I am told, a few days ago that posts were set up along this road and that night a truck went over the whole row and broke them off and kept right on going. I believe the neighbors across the road can give you all the information you want.

F. D. WILSON.

HIGHWAY LIGHTING.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—I noticed your story in Sunday's paper pertaining to highway illumination. I introduced and had adopted by the house and the senate a resolution urging highway lighting.

I am firmly of the opinion that this method of saving human life will ultimately be adopted by the various states. However, I am also convinced of the cost item of this experiment. I have requested the highway department of Illinois to give this matter its consideration and attention.

RICHARD J. DALEY,
Representative, Ninth District.

CLUB OFFERS TWO ALTERNATES FOR NORTH AVENUE

BY HAL FOUST.

Narrow and congested North avenue east of Western avenue is a bottle neck in an otherwise fair thoroughfare between Lincoln park and the west side and western suburbs.

Since the outer bridge has been opened motorists have an ever stronger protest against the delays and hazards in these three miles immediately west of the park. If North avenue were favorable for through trafic as far east as the lake it would be a good approach from the west side and western suburbs to the outer bridge and thence to the loop or south side.

The Illinois highway department carries its route 64 markers in North avenue from the Mississippi river through St. Charles on the Fox river to Lake Shore drive. From the Fox river to Western avenue, 33.8 miles, it is a good route. West of Chicago to St. Charles it is a forty foot slab on a broad right of way that will permit future widening. In Chicago west of Western avenue, there has been much new pavement and widening in the last few years.

New Slab Is Narrow.

East of Western avenue there has also been some recent paving, but the new slab is so narrow that its main function has been to smooth the parking zone next to the curb. With a truck parked at the curb or with a passenger car parked with one end a couple of feet from the curb a driver can't pass a street car. The pavement in the car tracks is rough.

Small stores line both sides of North avenue for most of this three mile bottle neck. Parking is extensive for the entire distance. Truck travel is also heavy.

The Chicago Motor club last week scouted for alternate routes for North avenue trafic east from Western avenue. For trafic en route to Lincoln park it recommended turning north in Leavitt street to Cortland street, thence east across the river to Racine avenue, thence north to Dickens avenue and east to the park. This is an escape from the delays and hazards of North avenue congestion, although it introduces the new risk of traveling streets not protected by stop signs.

Route Should Be Marked.

For eastbound North avenue trafic en route to the outer bridge the motor club recommended turning south in Western avenue to Augusta boulevard, thence east to Ashland avenue or Noble street to jog south to Ohio street, thence east to jog in Ogden avenue for the Erie street bridge over the Chicago river, thence jogging south in Orleans street to Ohio street for the trip to Lake Shore drive.

This is a complicated route, difficult to follow for those unfamiliar with the neighborhood. The club pointed out that it should be marked, possibly with the Ill. 64 markers that now lead strangers into the North avenue mess. If this were selected as a state highway route it would be protected with stop signs.

Stop Watch Times Routes.

This Augusta boulevard, Erie, and Ohio alternate from Western avenue and North avenue to Ohio and Lake Shore drive was measured by stop watch and odometer at seventeen minutes for the 5.1 miles. The drive between the same two points via North avenue and Lake Shore drive was measured at twenty minutes for the 4.7 miles.

The alternate route recommended by the motor club from North and Western avenues to Lincoln park was clocked at twelve minutes as compared with fourteen minutes via North avenue, Ogden avenue, and Lincoln Park West.

In order that both credit and debit sides of urban church work may be strictly accounted for, experts in economics, sociology and psychology have been summoned to advise the council which meets under the leadership of Bishop Ernest G. Bit of Mexico Looms Larger on West Side

[This is the ninth of a series of stories about the work and adventures of head residents of west side settlements. Another will appear soon.]

BY MILDRED WILDS.

Once they came down from the mountains or from narrow winding streets for Fiesta day. Then there were floods of sunshine, laughter, warmth, and street vendors shaded in the archways of ancient buildings. There Mexico—blazes of color and mazes of carving and peons who worked all day in the fields.

Miss Frances Craig.

Now they come from man-made city canyons to Firman house, 922 Marshfield avenue, these men, women, and children of Old Mexico, who, tired of the fields, came to America to work on the railroads and who drifted into the city in answer to its labor needs. And Firman house restores a bit of the color and gayety of Fiesta day with its parties, its song, and its art.

Mexican-Americans are made to feel at home in Firman house. Soon even more doors will be opened to them, for the Chicago Presbytery and the Congregational church board who support the settlement in a few weeks will purchase a larger building. Last month the settlement staf was reorganized and Miss Frances Craig was invited to become head resident.

Admires Her Neighbors.

Miss Craig admires her Mexican neighbors, who, she says, have the temperament of the Spanish and the solidity of their Aztec ancestors. One of her charges is a brilliant 6 year old child who can already read both Spanish and English. She is acquainted with a Consuelo who loves pictures, an Angelina who likes to dance, and Tito and Celemencia who build blocks and then let them tumble to the floor.

The new Firman house head is a young woman who began her career teaching school in small Kansas towns. It was then that she saw the importance of directing after-school leisure. In 1924 she started her social work training in the Jefferson Park church and institute, Throop and Adams streets. Through this experience she received a fellowship from the department of city immigration and industrial work of the board of national missions of the Presbyterian church. This permitted her to study at Columbia university.

She did her field work at Labor temple on the lower east side of Manhattan, where she worked with Italians and Jews. After she received her masters' degree in religious education she returned to Chicago and for the last eight years has worked at Garibaldi institute.

Once a Sunday School.

The new chapter about to open in Firman house will be another added to the story of a Sunday school that grew in two directions, in scope and size. Butler Winfield Firman started it all. Mr. Firman was head of the shoe department in Marshall Field's store and spent his spare time seeing that the feet of west side youth were turned in the right direction. He started Sunday school groups all over the area and, when in 1900 the Second Congregational church of Oak Park came to the near west side to help organize a Sunday school in the Ewing Street Congregational church, Mr. Firman gave his support.

In 1911, when he died, Mrs. Firman bought a three story building at 828 Gilpin street [Cabrini street] and opened the house to neighborhood socials. In 1931, the year after St. Mark's church burned down, Firman house was moved to 1213 Gilpin street and became a Mexican center. The Addams housing project required its removal to the present site at Marshfield.

Miss Craig has spent the first six weeks in her new position studying the needs of the Mexican people. She has found a great amount of tuberculosis among the Mexicans, who are accustomed to a warmer climate. She found also a great amount of artistic talent among the youth, who have no outlet for it in drab surroundings.

Will Organize Nursery.

When the house moves into larger quarters within the next month Miss Craig will organize a pre-school age nursery that will include health lectures for the mothers, and music, art, and drama classes for the young people.

Miss Craig plans to give to her Mexican neighbors advice on American living standards. She will show them how to keep their children free from disease by giving them fresh fruits and vegetables. The Mexicans, in turn, she believes, will teach her of their mecca, the Gaudalupe Hidalgo, the visiting spot of 100,000 pilgrims; of Teotihuacan, the "pyramid of the sun"; of "brown men in apron skirts directed by master craftsmen with lined wise faces"; of Mexico that is friendly and quietly glamorous, and of a Mexico that has known conquerors and cruelty. They will be peons who have become American people, preserving their culture to add to the city through the settlement. This is Miss Craig's dream at the beginning. Now there is work to be done.

Pumpkin Personalities Made to Order

Now is the time of the year when they can eat their pie and have their pumpkin, too. It's on Halloween that the pumpkin gains expression. The corners of its face can turn up, permitting it to grin about its plump perfection. Or the corners can turn down in disdain at ghosts and eerie things that stalk about among the corn shocks. It all depends upon Billy Hays, who wields the knife, or the kibitzers who have come to criticize. Pumpkins will play a dual role of dessert and decoration at the Thursday night Halloween party of the Austin Town hall art class in its rooms at 5610 West Lake street. Billy's helpers are Margaret Ellen Cahill, wearing the pinafore; Geraldine Cahill, seated; June Peterson of the curls, and Helen Jane Lindsay, holding the pumpkin's crown. Miss Mable Sherman is the art teacher. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

GROUPS ORGANIZE FOR COMMUNITY CHEST IN BERWYN

Goal Tentatively Set at $10,000.

Berwyn's first community chest recently was organized as welfare agencies of the city banded together, elected officers and laid the groundwork for an intensive fund drive which will begin about Nov. 1. The goal of the drive, which will last two weeks, was tentatively set at $10,000.

Affiliated with the community chest in Berwyn are the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Berwyn Community Welfare association, the Women's auxiliary of the Berwyn Hospital association and the American Red Cross. Each of the five organizations will receive its proportionate share of the funds collected. The money they receive will be used to promote scouting, give indigent families hospital care and to continue general welfare work.

Coyle Elected President.

Leaders were named as officers and members of the board of directors at the organization meeting, held in the Berwyn hotel. Charles H. Coyle, president of the Berwyn Lumber company, was elected president of the chest. Attorney James J. Shepro, local chairman of the Berwyn Red Cross unit, was elected vice president of the chest and general chairman of the fund drive. Mrs. John Krizan, a member of the Women's auxiliary of the Berwyn Welfare association, was chosen as secretary, and Paul R. Skala, president of the Berwyn State bank, was elected treasurer.

The board of directors will consist of the four officers, four representatives of coöperating organizations and four private citizens, who will be chosen at the close of the fund drive.

The organization representatives include the Rev. Warren N. Clark, pastor of the Berwyn Methodist Episcopal church, who will represent the Berwyn Welfare association; the Rev. Paul Langhorne, pastor of the Berwyn Baptist church, who will act in behalf of the Berwyn Hospital auxiliary; Robert J. Teeter, Boy Scouts; Mrs. H. W. Clark, Girl Scouts, and the Rev. Hency C. Hoover, pastor of the First Congregational church, who will officiate as Red Cross representative.

Will Form Advisory Group.

A citizens' advisory committee, which will be composed of city officials and several business and professional men, also will be voted upon later.

Establishment of the community chest, it is explained, eliminates fund drives instigated by individual organizations throughout the year. It was tentatively agreed that a milk fund and an infant welfare dispensary might be possible if the fund drive nets the expected results.

SOCIETY TO MARK SITE OF PIONEER HOME IN COUNTY

Plaque to Give Facts on Forbes Residence.

Site of the first home built in the present Cook county west of Chicago will be dedicated with a marker at 3 o'colck Saturday afternoon as an activity of the Riverside Historical society. Interest in the pioneer home of the family of John and Ann Sawyer Forbes, which had its location in what is now the Thomas Martin coal yard, was stimulated during Riverside's centennial celebration a year ago. Dr. S. S. Fuller is president of the historical society.

The Riverside-Brookfield High school band will play and there will be Indian dances by the Boy Scouts, and folk songs by the high school girl's chorus in pioneer costumes.

Judge John C. Lewe will be chairman of the program committee. Speakers will include H. M. Taylor, president of the village; James Todd, attorney for the Cook county sherif; Dr. Fuller, and Mrs. Robert Ripley, of Los Angeles, Cal., a member of the Forbes family.

First Voting Place.

The time of the arrival of the John Forbes family to the area in 1836 was the date on which the Riverside centennial celebration hinged. The Forbes house is said not only to have been pretentious for the period in which it was built, but was the only voting place of Cook county for its first colonel of state militia, which resulted in the election of Jean Baptiste Beaubien.

It is recorded that Daniel Webster, related to the Forbes family, visited the home during a trip to the Chicago area. Stephen Van Rensselear Forbes, son of John and Ann Forbes, was Cook county's first elected sherif, and because of that fact the county board has officially recognized the dedication and location of the Forbes home marker.

County Provides Boulder.

The county has supplied and will mount the granite boulder which will bear an appropriate inscription. Dr. Fuller said that invitations had been extended to county officials to be present at the dedication.

At a recent meeting of the Riverside Chamber of Commerce, President Theodore Osberg named a committee to encourage merchants to display historical relics in their windows over the week-end. Members of the committee are George W. Jindrich, chairman, Dr. S. S. Fuller, H. S. Welch, Walter A. Bonow, Arthur Brainard and John Harvie.

ASSETS ASSURE $81,700 REBATE TO DEPOSITORS

Auditor Reports on Receiverships.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Six closed west side state banks are expected to repay $81,700 to their depositors by the end of this year or early next, it was announced last week by Edward J. Barrett, state auditor.

Barrett's prediction accompanied his statements of condition for 40 of the 139 closed Cook county state banks for the quarter that ended on Sept. 30. Twelve of these 40 are on the west side or in western suburbs. Barrett's reports were based principally on those of Charles H. Albers, general receiver for 137 of the closed banks.

The banks expected to repay a per cent of deposits soon are the Ashland State, the Baker State, the Berwyn Trust and Savings, the Brookfield State, the Cicero Trust and Savings, and the Congress Park State. The Ashland bank is expected to pay 10 per cent and the others 5 per cent each.

COLLEGE CAMPUS HAS NEW LEAGUE OF NATIONS AIR

Wheaton Foreign Youths Tell U. S. Impressions.

For first hand information on the customs and characteristics of foreign lands, students at Wheaton college this fall need only turn to some of their classmates. Forty-six states, six Canadian provinces, and fifteen countries—Switzerland, New Zealand, Palestine, Mexico, Hawaii, India, Egypt, Bulgaria, Korea, China, Persia, Belgian Congo, Japan, Siam, and Brazil—are represented on the campus. The enrollment of 1,100 also includes five sets of twins.

The foreign students, mostly children of missionaries, have interesting comments concerning their first impressions of America.

Miss Helen G. Torrey, from China, said her first thought at seeing derelicts around the docks on her arrival in this country was "These are Americans and I am one of them."

Finds U. S. Unfriendly.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Hill from Korea spoke of the apparent unfriendliness of people on the streets in American cities.

George Shiroma from Hawaii was of the opinion that America was a wonderful place in which to study but not in which to reside—that is, for very long.

Zaida Harvey from India plans to return and teach mathematics in a high school located in the Himalaya mountains.

Bernard Erickson from Norway, where his father is pastor of a church, said he preferred America, probably because he was born in Madison, Wis.

Among others who traveled great distances to attend Wheaton college are Miss Caroline Lane from Switzerland; Hudson Armerding, New Zealand; Paul Fried, Palestine; José Luna, Mexico; Miss Alice McKelvey and Bernard Steiner, India; Miss Anne and Donald Moore, and Miss Edna and Miss Mary Thompson, Egypt.

Six from Korea.

Vasil Andeloff comes from Bulgaria; Samuel and Howard Moffett, Miss Eleanor and Miss Mary Soltau, Miss Frances Parker, and Dayton Roberts, Korea; Miss Elizabeth Rosseau and Miss Rosa Bell, China; John and Charles Frame, Persia; Miss Ruth and Theodore Holland, William Barnett, Belgian Congo, Africa; and Ernest Young, Japan.

The five sets of twins include Miss Rosemary and Miss Claralice Hanna, born in Siam, who are registered in the academy; Miss Katherine and Miss Elizabeth Kuhn, Miss Virginia and Miss Constance Wyckoff, Carleen and Carleton White, and Vane and Gerald Johnson.

The twins from Siam explained that their home was in the middle of a big rice plain, surrounded by a ridge of mountains. Asked what she thought of America, Rosemary replied:

Amazed at Trafic.

"I didn't know what to think at first. There are so many people and so much noise in the cities here. We have a few automobiles but mostly we travel by ox cart. America has so much trafic. At home, we drive in the middle of the road, and if we have to pass something we keep to the left."

Claralice said she was amazed when an elevator man in Chicago called out "Fifteenth floor." She said at home the highest buildings in Bankok were two stories.

Doubling Up on Wheaton Campus

Confusing members of the faculty has its advantages as well as drawbacks, declare the twins, five sets of them, enrolled at Wheaton college this fall. Seen on the campus (front to rear) are Miss Rosemary and Miss Claralice Hanna, Miss Katherine and Miss Elizabeth Kuhn, Miss Virginia and Miss Constance Wyckoff, Miss Carleen and Carleton White, and Miss Vane and Gerald Johnson. SUBURBAN ART LEAGUE TO SEEK FUNDS FOR HOME

Group Hopes to Obtain Oak Park House.

An active drive to complete its funds for the purchase of a home dedicated to art will be started this week by the Austin, Oak Park, and River Forest Art league. The organization has an option on property on the north side of Chicago avenue, east of Oak Park avenue. The cost of the property, reconditioning, and furnishing the home will be $7,500. Of this amount approximately 30 per cent has been raised by league members and suburban residents.

The building which the league contemplates buying has been used as a private school for some years. It has ample space downstairs for an exhibition gallery and receptions. The upstairs rooms can be used for art classes.

Plan New Entrance.

Extensive alterations are contemplated such as the paneling, decoration, and lighting of the gallery space for the hanging of paintings. A new entrance will be built and the grounds will be landscaped. Mrs. Albert J. Pohlman, president of the league, is chairman of the building fund.

The art league was founded in 1921 as a neighborhood club, meeting in the homes of members and holding its exhibitions in church halls. Three years later a charter was taken out specifying that the object of the league was to promote art appreciation to the mutual benefit of the artist and the layman. Among the first members were Mrs. John M. Meyer, Mrs. Frederick Bartholomew, Curtis Camp, Mrs. Frederick C. Lowrey, and Mrs. Pohlman.

West side artists who are charter members of the league include Charles Dahlgreen, Edward T. Grigware, Holgar Jensen, Carl Krafft, John Nolf, Emory P. Seidel, John Spellman, James Topping, and Ellsworth Young.

Three Classes a Week.

The league provides classes for adults and children. Mrs. Cornelia Weyburn teaches a class for adults every Tuesday morning in the rooms at 115 North Marion street. A life class is held Tuesday evenings, and on Saturday morning Mrs. Averill Conwell teaches grade and high school children assisted by Miss Grace Goodrich.

The league officers in addition to Mrs. Pohlman are Mrs. Averill Conwell, Mrs. M. B. Murray, and Mrs. Carl S. Junge, vice presidents; Mrs. Frederic H. Bradshaw and Louis F. Kullman, secretaries, and Allen S. Pearl Sr., treasurer.

Walther League West Zone to Go Skating Tomorrow

The west zone of the Walther league will hold a Halloween skating party tomorrow evening at the Madison Garden Skating rink, Madison and Rockwell streets. Robert L. Sullivan of Immanuel church is social chairman assisted by Miss Caroline Lohrentz of Grace church, Miss Eleanor Shorrer of Ebennezer church, Miss Loretta Blank, Immanuel, and William Walther of St. John's church.

TEACHER TELLS OF JAPS' FERVOR FOR CHINA WAR

Shanghai Bombing Is Seen by Maywood Girl

"It was like a Fourth of July fireworks display—except that you realized the bombs contained bullets and bolts," explained Miss Solveig Christensen, who spoke as an eyewitness of the Japanese bombardment of Shanghai, at a recent meeting of the Women's Alumni group of Elmhurst college.

Miss Solveig Christensen.

Miss Christensen, daughter of Mrs. Cecille Christensen, 420 South 20th avenue, Maywood, took her summer vacation in the orient and was in China at the opening of hostilities. A graduate of Elmhurst college, Miss Christensen is a teacher at the Washington school in Maywood.

Both Romance and Religion.

"In Japan," explained Miss Christensen, "the war was both romance and religion. Mothers bereft of sons through battle rejoiced that their sons were now in the Japanese Valhalla. Fortunately, for my own mother's peace of mind, my original plans had not included the port of China where I witnessed a nation at bay.

"At first," added Miss Christensen, "all seemed peaceful enough in Shanghai until a Russian offered to show me districts being evacuated against impending bombardment. Then, one day, passengers were told to evacuate the train in which we were traveling, as Japanese bombers had been seen headed toward the railway.

"The first bombs dropped in Shanghai fell a few blocks from where I was lodging and killed 200 persons in the Cathay and Palace hotels.

Takes Chance with Rest.

"When it came time for the Japanese steamship to sail from the docks, I was obliged to take my chances with the rest. On my homeward journey, I could not help but think of the Japanese women I had seen on the street corners asking passing women to contribute a stitch to little quilts that were tokens of a patriotic affection to be sent to the boys at the front over in 'naughty China.'

"Then I thought of those trusting and friendly but now dead, wounded or homeless Chinese women and children for whom there are no magic symbols meaning peace or security."

FOUR NATIONAL BANKS MAY PAY NEW DIVIDENDS

Ogden Expected to Write Final Checks.

Improved collections may mean additional dividends soon to depositors of four closed west side national banks under the receivership of Harry Joseph, he indicated last week. Mr. Joseph made his disclosure as he released the report of his stewardship for the third quarter, which ended on Sept. 30.

Joseph's four banks are the Alliance National, the Austin National, the Ogden National, and the West Side-Atlas National.

Present indications are that the Ogden National bank will pay its final dividend by the end of this year, Joseph said. Depositors have received a total of 35 per cent of the money they had on deposit when the bank closed on Sept. 26, 1931.

The only remaining asset of the Ogden bank is its building at 3616 Ogden avenue. This has a book value of $145,919, but an estimated value of only $6,086, the quarterly report shows. The quarter closed with $33,361 cash on hand. This indicates that the total of the final dividend will be something less than $40,000.

Collections of the Ogden bank from assets and stock assessment totaled $2,728 last quarter, and $314,862 since the bank closed. The quarter added $1,650 to the cost of liquidating, bringing this total since suspension to $57,714.

Mr. Joseph and his associates have labored diligently to assemble $1,041,080 for depositors of the Austin bank, and now they are working as hard to find the owners of some $30,000 of the money. Checks were sent to depositors as dividends [which now total 56 per cent] were declared, but the $30,000 worth were returned because the addressees had moved and left no forwarding address.

Those who had money on deposit in the Austin bank when it closed on March 30, 1931, can obtain their checks by calling at the receiver's office at 3616 Ogden avenue.

$79,000 Cash in Ogden.

The Ogden bank's assets, which had a book value of $816,395 as the third quarter ended, have an actual estimated value of only $21,991, the receiver's report shows. There was $79,789 in cash on hand.

The quarter's collections from assets and the $250,000 stock assessment totaled $12,588, bringing the total since the bank closed to $1,773,337.

Liquidation costs mounted $2,854 during the quarter to a grand total of $133,045. This figure does not include the interest and other expense attendant upon loans from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, but it does include fees paid to the receiver and attorneys.

About $40,000 in unclaimed dividends is awaiting depositors of the West Side-Atlas bank, Joseph revealed. The bank has declared total dividends of $483,490.

Assets remaining have a book value of $170,661, but the receiver estimates that not more than $41,707 can be realized from their sale. There was $19,727 in the receivership's cash account as this month opened.

Collects $2,000 in Quarter.

Collections from assets and the stock assessment of the West Side-Atlas bank amounted to $2,039 for the quarter and $1,334,775 since suspension. The third quarter added $1,310 to the liquidation costs.

Depositors of the Alliance bank ultimately will take a heavy loss, the quarterly statement indicated. The bank has paid dividends of only 28 per cent since it suspended on June 15, 1932. There is $37,657 cash in the rceivership accounts, and remaining assets have an estimated liquidation value of only $51,496, although their book value is $453,289.

The Alliance bank's assets declined $3,984 in liquidation value in the quarter. Cash collections from assets and stock assessments totaled $9,800 during the three month period, of which about $4,000 represented the receiver's equity in the building at 1605 West Chicago avenue, which was sold to satisfy an RFC mortgage.

By the end of last month it had cost $49,482 to liquidate the bank's assets, of which $3,671 was paid out during the third quarter.

BUSES TO SHUNT OLD CAR LINE OFF LARAMIE AVENUE

New Harrison to North Service Scheduled.

Badly needed improvement of transportation in Laramie avenue on the west side will be realized by the end of this year, it was predicted last week by Ald. Roger J. Kiley [37th].

Kiley announced that plans had been arranged for the replacement with modern buses of antiquated street cars that now ply Laramie avenue between Harrison and Lake streets, and for extension of service northward to North avenue. Only the technical details of the change remain to be worked out, Kiley said.

Will Be Repaved.

Laramie avenue is to be repaved as soon as the street car tracks are removed, Kiley said. The new paving and better transportation are expected to revive business along the street, he said.

The trackage to be abandoned is only a mile long, but the service that will replace it is two and one-half miles long. The new bus line will make connections with crosstown car lines at Harrison, Madison, Lake, and Division streets, and Chicago and North avenues.

John Kennedy is chairman of a committee that is now at work on plans for a civic celebration of the change to modern transportation. John Dooley is co-chairman.

Aids in Celebration.

Subchairman who are serving with Mr. Kennedy include Fred Meier, James Sorenson, Robert Nitzberg, James Vacco, Arthur Asmus, Robert Burns, Emil DeMuth, John Jones, Henry Gabriel, William Turner, D. L. Roscoe, Sam Greenfield, Joseph Kallas, John Schrik, Joseph Epstein, Leo Mastien, E. H. Olson, Joseph Cappot, James Considine, Walter H. Krouskup, Lloyd Hiller, Samuel Farras, Charles J. Costello, Charles E. Bailey, Al Moore, Peter L. Verschuur, and Walter Kelly.

INSULATION PAYS BIG DIVIDEND TO HOME BUILDER

Utility 'Den' Is Feature of Sauganash House.

Learn how to save fuel and keep the house warmer. Read the booklet, "Let's Keep Warm—For Less Money," by Louise Bargelt, Tribune home builders' editor. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 3 cents. Postpaid, 5 cents.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

This new brick home of Dr. and Mrs. Homer Hunley, recently completed at 5881 North Kilbourn avenue, shows many of the definitly new trends seen in modern building.

The architect, Frederick E. Sloan, 737 North Michigan avenue, has designed the house with a simple blending of the modern and the traditional. It is strongly suggestive of its English ancestry. The exterior walls are of brick veneer, a mixture of common and clinker brick, with horizontal courses of dark red-brown face brick. The roof is of dark asphalt shingles. For sturdy weather resistance and economical heating costs the exterior walls are given one inch blanket type insulation, and the second floor ceiling has four inch mineral fill type insulation. The steel casement windows, with their attached metal framed screens for summer use, have metal framed storm sash for the cold weather months.

Such weatherproofing is well worth its additional cost, well worth its cost to any home, new or old. It opens the door to lowered fuel bills and to a comfortable, free from draft interior. Also to a cooler house in summer. But it's the winter ahead which concerns us most immediately now! And in the cold weather months this weather resistance in a house is worth its weight in the metal of which dollars are made, and in the comfort which warm rooms yield.

Basement for Living.

New trends disclose that basements continue with us. Their popularity shows no sign of wane, and their form and decoration take on an added glory with the years.

This basement has its finished game room, with natural wood burning fireplace, and painted walls and floor. Besides this, it has rooms and spaces directly apportioned to concrete uses: A room for the family workshop, for the family laundry, and a room for a warm air heating plant, gas fueled, with provision for winter air conditioning, and possibly for summer cooling, to be added later.

As you enter the house there is an illuminated house number at the left of the entrance door. This has been especially designed with black numerals on opaque glass, set in a stone frame. At night, illumination behind this glass silhouettes the numerals.

The first floor plan contains an extra room, a way with many of the new floor plans. This room usually serves a dual purpose. In Dr. Hunley's home it is called the "den," though it can be used as a bedroom when emergency demands it. The fact that it is in close proximity to the first floor lavatory, with its shower stall, is an extra advantage worth noting.

Cabinet for Firewood.

The living room is at the left of the entrance hall, and two steps down. It has canvased walls, painted a soft shade of lemon, and at the front there is a wide, sunny bay. Almost opposite this bay, at the other side of the room, is a large log burning fireplace, with face of dark green quarried stone, closely resembling marble. At one side is a cabinet for logs with an opening at the back so that it may be filled from the basement. Above this cabinet are built-in book shelves.

You go up two steps from the living room level to the dining room. This dining room seems a continuation of the living room, except for low walls projecting out to form a semi-division. These low walls offer convenient shelves for plants and books.

The kitchen, which is 9 feet by 15 feet 6 inches, has a generous supply of cabinet space, a kitchen ventilator, and cabinet counter tops, linoleum covered, with chromium trim. The floor is also linoleum.

The kitchen door leads out to a terrace which can be converted into an outdoor living room in the summer months.

On the second floor, which has three bedrooms and two tile bathrooms, there also is provision for warm weather comfort. This provision takes the form of a large glazed porch.

Cubic contents of this house: about 34,000 cubic feet.

Cost of building in Chicago area: about 40 cents a cubic foot.

Mrs. Bargelt will speak over W-G-N next Monday at 2:15 p.m.

BLEND OF MODERN AND ENGLISH

A gracious blending of the modern and the English spirit is seen in this new brick home, just built at 5881 North Kilbourn avenue. The owners are Dr. and Mrs. Homer Hunley. The architect is Frederick E. Sloan, 737 North Michigan avenue.

WEST SIDE GIRL SCOUTS STRESS INDIVIDUALITY

New Director to Seek Hidden Talents.

There will be no lights hidden under a bushel on the west side this year. Miss Lois Nelson, the new west side director of the Girl Scouts of the Chicago council, will instruct the 120 captains and lieutenants to discover the latent talents of the 1,200 Scouts in the area and develop them.

Miss Lois Nelson.

This stressing of ndividuality is the 1937 interpretation of scouting brought back from Camp Edith Macy, the New York National Scout training school, by Miss Nelson who, two weeks ago, began her career as director. From now on she will spend her days at her desk in Scout headquarters, 35 East Wacker drive, working on such psychological problems as her lieutenants bring for solution. She will cut a program pattern for groups of quiet girls who are afraid to talk and for rowdy girls who talk too much. She will attempt to unravel inferiority complexes and figure out ways to get the girl with the superiority complex "down off her high horse."

Will Strengthen Leadership.

Miss Nelson says that her first job will be to strengthen the leadership of the seventy west side troops, twenty of which are sponsored by settlements. In the settlement troops she says ways and means must be devised to "do things and go places" without the expenditure of money. Her two years of experience as a recreational worker on the south side at the Kenwood Interdenominational church will help her in this. She will pass on to her leaders her handicraft suggestions in which waste matter, scrap lether, sponge trinkets, and scrap wood is used.

The settlement Scouts will be taught "that the best things of life are free." They will go on short hikes to the parks, study the historical heritage of a prairie town grown big, understand the song of the wind through the trees, and the poetry of spring and summer.

Attended School Here.

Miss Nelson has been a Girl Scout only three years but she has studied physical education since she was a grade school student. She attended Crane Junior college for two years and took a two year course in social science at George Williams college. The last two summers she spent at Juniper Knoll, the Chicago council Girl Scout camp.

In addition to her work of troop visiting she will supervise the volunteer chairmen in charge of training and personnel, finance, publicity, badges and awards. The programs she will devise will not overlap school work. However, she will ask the leaders to watch out for music and literary talent. Camp life, games, and folk dancing will develop physical grace. Group work and "give and take" experiences, she says, will be planned for emotional development.

Girl Scouting, explains Miss Nelson, is becoming more democratic. Old Scout programs involved rigid discipline and the Scout leader played the part of the dictator. Now all the girls will have a part in making the program.

CHICAGO'S R.O.T.C. "ARMY" HAS 7,980 YOUTHS ON ROLLS

Enrollment in the R. O. T. C. of the 27 public high schools of Chicago now totals 7,980 cadets, 1,049 more than at the same time last year, it was revealed last week by Col. William F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics.

Of the aggregate, 5,882 are upper classmen and 2,098 are freshmen who are not issued uniforms. The increase is made up of 447 advanced cadets and 602 freshmen.

The Schurz High school regiment, with a jump of 212, scored the greatest gain among individual units. Other schools which recorded large increases are Von Steuben with 59, Fenger with 55, Crane with 50, Bowen with 46, Sullivan with 37, and Morgan Park with 34.

Although the 5,882 cadets in uniform do not equal the total of 6,650 permitted under the recent order from the war department, Col. Morrison expects that this figure will be reached the second semester.

CALL LETTERS OF NATIONS AID IN IDENTIFICATION

Table to Aid Detection Is Presented.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

In a recent article in this column attention was called to the various distinctive sounds, slogans, national anthems and other national "banners" that are used on the short waves to make identification of stations and broadcasts easier.

The article prompted inquiries as to whether there is any way of identifying origination of broadcasts by nations through the call letters. There is.

International call letters have been assigned to all countries possessing radio stations. There is a widespread misconception, however, that all calls starting with a certain letter indicate the same country.

Several nations have been assigned the letter which serves best to identify them. Thus Great Britain has G, Germany has D [for Deutschland], France has F, Japan has J, S is for Siam and so on.

A table that will make future detection of countries from call letters easy follows:

CA to CE	Chile
CF to CK	Canada
CL to CM	Cuba
CN	Morocco
CP	Bolivia
CR	Portuguese colonies
CS to CU	Portugal
CV	Rumania
W to CX	Uruguay
CZ	Morocco

While Russia is assigned from RA to RQ, Italy uses RO with a 2 placed in front. Thus 2RO, Rome, is familiar on the short waves.

GET HIM Jockey Y-FRONTS BY Coopers

● For a situation like this we recommend Coopers Y-Front Underwear. It prevents squirming by giving snug, streamlined fit everywhere — comfortable, buoyant support. No binding, no buttons. Men squirm because underwear that's fitted only at the waist "gangs up" on them.

Two-piece Y-Front underwear offers many other advantages. Wears longer because uppers or lowers can be replaced separately. Provides extra back protection, too. Will not bind or hunch. Makes outer clothes fit better. Y-Front opening convenient for every use. Gives energy-saving support.

Try one suit of this new Y-Front underwear by Coopers. If he doesn't like it, bring it back and get your money back. Such is our confidence.

Veterinarians Crusade against Hit-or-Miss Dog Feeding

CASE HISTORIES PRESENTED BY SWIFT AND COMPANY World-Famous Purveyors of Fine Foods

LISTLESSNESS LACK OF APPETITE

Condition illustrated by McKenzie

Treated by *DR. A. C. M——,

who says of this wire-haired terrier (shown in photo at right) "Listlessness and lack of appetite were merely outward evidence of very common troubles—digestive disturbances and malnutrition. The cause was clear—improper feeding." Today, like Dr. M——, leading veterinarians everywhere are crusading against hit-or-miss feeding, and particularly against nutritionally deficient rations. (Both this terrier's outward symptoms and his more serious underlying troubles have disappeared on an exclusive diet of Pard, Swift's canine-tested feeding formula.)

PARD..SWIFT'S CANINE-TESTED FEEDING FORMULA

A TIMBER WOLF must range the forest for hours, for each meal. Yet your dog, with the same digestive system and basic food needs, has his meals handed to him. This creates a dangerously delicate problem—to fit his diet to his radically changed living habits.

This problem Swift & Company has now solved. In PARD, Swift offers a formula that has been fed as an exclusive diet to 4 generations of fine dogs. It is made of fresh beef meat food products and seven other fine ingredients. Swift's famous reputation stands behind every can. Start feeding Pard today. Swift & Company, Chicago.

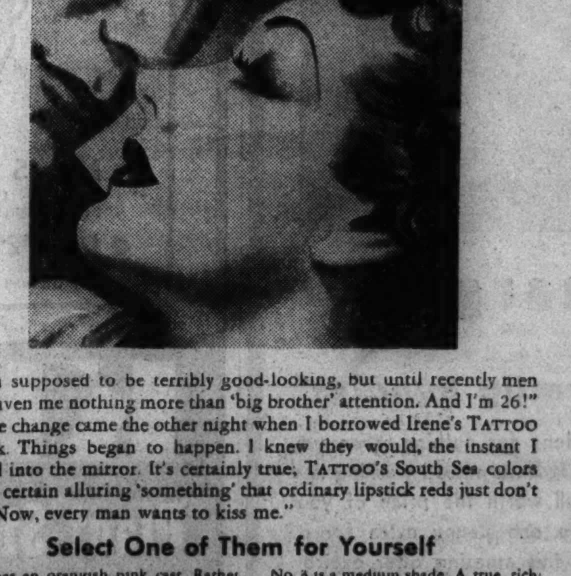
"EVERY MAN WANTS TO KISS ME"



● "I'm supposed to be terribly good-looking, but until recently men have given me nothing more than 'big brother' attention. And I'm 26!"

"The change came the other night when I borrowed Irene's TATTOO lipstick. Things began to happen. I knew they would, the instant I looked into the mirror. It's certainly true; TATTOO's South Sea colors have a certain alluring 'something' that ordinary lipstick reds just don't have. Now, every man wants to kiss me."

Select One of Them for Yourself

No. 1 has an orangish pink cast. Rather light. Ravishing on blondes and titian blondes. It is called "CORAL."

No. 2 is an exotic, new shade, brilliant yet transparent. Somehow we just cannot find the right words to describe it. Called "EXOTIC."

No. 3 is a medium shade. A true, rich blood red that will be an asset to any brunette. It is called "NATURAL."

No. 4 changes hue when applied. Gives an unusually transparent richness and warmth. It is called "PASTEL."

No. 5 has the rich intensity of Hawaii's most gorgeous flower . . the wild Hibiscus. It's vivid, very vivid, yet has a lovely softness that's thrilling. Anyone can wear it. It is called "HAWAIIAN."

MISS CAFFRAY'S MEMORY BOOK IS A MAP OF WORLD

In Ten Years Missionary Visits 52 Countries.

BY HELEN WILLARD.

These days women are going places. A slim stately woman with gray marcelled hair has ventured into 52 countries in the last ten years. She has chatted with cannibal chiefs, has feasted on monkey meat in Africa, and has sat Indian fashion on mud hut floors while she tried to eat "pilau" politely with her fingers

The Rev. D. Willia Caffray.

The Rev. D. Willia Caffray is a member of the board of directors for the Chicago Evangelistic institute, 1754 Washington boulevard, and this is her address when she stays at home. She was the first woman in the world licensed to preach by the Methodist church, and since then her voice has been heard around the world. In 1924 she was among the first few women to be ordained as a Methodist minister, four years after she was given her preaching license.

As a missionary Miss Caffray has collected souls for the Christian kingdom while she collected curios and received housekeeping hints and recipes from wives who wear grass skirts to do their housework. She has learned something of women's way the world over in her search to "right wrongs."

A Way with Women.

One day she had a long discussion with a chieftain in Sierre Leon, Africa, who had 100 wives. They live together in a "kraal" community, and life is peaceful until he suspects one of unfaithfulness. The chieftain has a way with his wives, as Miss Caffray saw that day. The unfaithful one was pulled screaming to the side of a cauldron of boiling oil. She was made to put her arm in and pull out an iron weight on the bottom of the pot. If she was burned she was guilty; if her arm was entirely unmarred she was innocent, and the chief would apologize.

Miss Caffray knows the heart of torrid Africa. She was talked to natives of the poisons of which they are master makers. They confessed to her of concoctions that would paralyze the victim or shrivel the flesh, kill, or put the enemy into a long, torturing sleep. In Nigeria she preached to the lepers. Standing on the platform were two disfigured interpreters. She has faced all types of misery, sickness, and disease, but has kept on with her preaching and teaching.

"I was terribly ill once with malaria," she explained, "but after all, people can get sick at home."

She Penetrates Liberia.

She went into parts of Liberia where no white woman had ever been before. Children ran from her screaming. Men and women dodged into mud huts and peered at her. One of the delicacies she noticed in the market place was frizzled caterpillars. Girls buy them on their way to the fields and eat them as they would candy. Bewinged, beheaded locusts make another sweetmeat. Miss Caffray thus far has avoided a feast of python meat and rats, but when she ate the monkey meat she thought it was hamburger.

When missionaries in India became overtaxed with work Miss Caffray crossed the ocean to hlep. She spent her time encouraging the widows who were blamed by neighbors because their husbands had died. Although the government has forbidden the burning of widows they often volunteer to go to the jungles so they can throw themselves on their husbands' funeral pyre unmolested.

Once when Miss Caffray was in an Indian village she saw British officers rushing into the jungle. She followed them and got there just in time to see a native woman hurl herself in the flames. Quickly they pulled her out and rushed to the river with her to drown out the fire. She died almost immediately.

None About the Knuckles.

Later on the quiet missionary went back to her mud hut where her hosts had put out a bowl of "pilau" a dish of meat, rice, and spices. She observed the rules of Indian etiquet. Eat with the right hand only and don't get your food above the knuckles, is the good behavior rule for children and grownups.

Miss Caffray has talked in five countries in South America, Peru, Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, and Chile. The tourists see such a trip as a series of balconied homes and dark eyed senoritas. They see steam heat and a country club atmosphere imposed on layers of Inca lore. Serious Indians and long necked llamas pique the curiosity of the curio seekers.

The missionary sees another picture. Of course, she marvels at the subway system of Buenos Aires which Chicago doesn't have. She is surprised at the advanced supervised playgrounds and outdoor activities, and her woman's sixth sense tells her it's a smart idea to have vacuum cleaners for the city streets.

See Plight of Peons.

She also noticed the plight of the peons working for 50 cents a day, sick and ignorant. From their fields they hear the strains of music drifting from the patios of the rich. In Angol, southern Chile, she inspected the Methodist experimental farm, where workers get good wages along with Christianity and are taught good farming standards along with standards of ethics. She ate consuela, a Chile national dish, and watched housewives put on the meat for the soup early in the morning before they came to pray.

"South America is the continent of the very rich and the very poor," says the missionary. "The United States is the only country I know of in the world that has no servant class."

Answers Ohio Call.

Miss Caffray left the Evangelical institute last week to answer a call in East Liverpool, O. She says there is wrong to right at home as well as in Africa's "kralls," when wives quarrel with each other for the chieftain's favoritism. The refined, middle aged woman, who had a dream when she was 8 years old that called her to Christian work, is ready for any call to any place. Her job in idealism will take her into all kinds of actuality. She may ride on logging trains, bush chairs, hammocks, elephants or camels. She may even fly. In fact, to date she has taken all types of transportation except the submarine. And the strong purpose for her work, she says, gives her wings and a "bon voyage."

3½ MILLION TAX SALE TO OPEN IN DU PAGE COUNTY

Annual Event to Begin at 10 A. M. Tomorrow.

Du Page county's annual tax sale will begin tomorrow morning with a total forfeiture of $3,500,000 listed on the books of County Treasurer Arthur Hellyer of Elmhurst.

When the sale commences at 10 o'clock in the county courtrooms at Wheaton, parcels in Addison township will be disposed of first. Each delinquent parcel will be offered, either to be bought or forfeited to the state. The sale will continue until all delinquent property is offered.

There has been little speculative interest in Du Page county real estate at annual sales during recent years, declared Phelix McFarland, deputy treasurer. Most of those appearing with intent to purchase have a personal interest in the parcels.

Add 12% Interest Charge.

If tax sale property is purchased, the original owner can redeem it from the county clerk during a two year period, a 12 per cent interest charge being added each successive six months. This penalty goes to the tax buyer.

If the property is forfeited to the state, a 12 per cent penalty is immediately added, the penalty remaining constant until the next forfeiture date, at the tax sale in 1938, when a similar penalty is again added. Such parcels may be redeemed at any time the owner can pay the taxes and delinquency charges. Some land, especially in subdivision areas, has been accruing penalty annually for the past five or six years.

Sees Improvement This Year.

County Treasurer Hellyer's staf is hopeful that collections this year will run better than a year ago, a possibility indicated by continued increase in the amount of payments made by taxpayers to the Wheaton office. Taxes in Du Page county are paid in two instalments, the first delinquency date being June 1, and the second Sept. 1. Delinquents face a 1 per cent penalty, added on a progressive penalty basis.

Announcement was made by the treasurer's office this week of a distribution of $82,652 in back taxes, and a current tax distribution of $82,530, to all taxing bodies including the county.

NEIGHBORHOOD COMMITTEES ON LEISURE NAMED

Fifteen men and women from the west and northwest sides were appointed last week to head committees coöperating in the Chicago recreation commission's citizens' training institutes which will be held for a month starting next Friday.

Dr. Philip L. Seman, chairman of the commission, explained that the object of the institutes is to train neighborhood leaders to supervise informal play projects in their communities. The program, he said, has the backing of recreational leaders of the city.

General chairmen for the west and northwest named by Dr. Seman are Dr. Frank Gross for Portage park, Miss Ethel Jaynes for Humboldt park, and F. J. Weitling for Garfield park.

District recreation chairmen are Ben Brandt for Irving park, W. L. Johnson for Albany park, W. L. McCambridge for Jefferson park, Peter Verschuur and C. C. Shedd for Austin, Norman Cook for Greater Lawndale, John Stanek for Southwest Central, George J. Trinkaus for Belmont-Cragin, Llewellyn Matthias for Humboldt park, Miss Jessie Binford for the near west side, and Miss Lea D. Taylor and Miss Harriet E. Vittum for West Town.

Junior Daughters of Zion to Have Membership Tea

The Midwest Junior auxiliary of the Daughters of Zion will hold its annual membership drive and tea at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the home of its former president, Mrs. Abraham Golden, 117 North Long avenue.

CELEBRATING GOLDEN DAY

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Porter, 5959 Race street, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary this afternoon at their home. The Porters moved to Chicago from Rockford in 1903, when he took a position as treasurer of the Long-Critchfield company, an advertising agency. He was president of his own agency, the Porter-Eastman company, until his retirement in 1932. Mr. Porter was president of the Advertising Company of America in 1915, when Chicago was host to the eleventh annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

TOWN CONCOCTS ANTIDOTE OF FUN FOR HALLOWEEN

Western Springs Seeks to Halt Vandalism.

Community-wide observance of Halloween, providing plenty of good fun but eliminating pranks, is planned in Western Springs. The movement for recognizing the Christian rather than the pagan tradition was started in the suburb last year by the schools, and in preparation for activities Saturday night, other groups have been invited to participate in a festival.

In a letter recently sent out by Dr. Leonard B. Wheat, superintendent of Western Springs schools, it is pointed out that Halloween has two distinct traditions.

"The early Christians named it Hallowe'en or Halloweven which means Holy eve, the evening preceding All Saints' day. All Saints' day, of course, is the Christian festival celebrated each Nov. 1 in commemoration of all the saints.

Day of Preparation.

"Tradition recognizes the day before All Saints' day as a time of cleaning up and getting ready for the festival. The handicapped and disabled are aided in getting their homes in order. The poor are helped. Public property is tidied. Parties are given and people generally are made happy.

"In many places plates of cookies, baskets of fruit, and other goodies are put on the doorstep for those who pass by. Young people and children go from place to place during the evening enjoying the food offerings and exchanging greetings.

"The pagan tradition is of a quite opposite kind. Pranks, riotousness, and wild hilarity are the prelude to a sort of fall festival of All Spirits' day. This tradition was rather widely observed in many places, especially in the middle west of the United States, but is becoming less and less evident.

Parties Are Planned.

"It is somewhat notable that in Western Springs the Christian observation is becoming increasingly widespread. Many private parties are given, and the schools and churches also give parties.

"The hope has been expressed by many that this year every child may have a chance to enter into and be a part of the better kind of Halloween."

A party for children in the elementary grades will be held in the gymnasium of the McClure school Saturday night. Younger children will have their party in their schoolrooms in the afternoon.

WEST SIDE BOY SCOUT EXECUTIVE IS GIVEN POST IN OKLAHOMA

Wiles, assistant scout executive of the west side district, Chicago Boy Scout council, left his position last week to become a Scout executive of North Oklahoma Area council with headquarters in Ponca City. He will supervise 53 Scout units with a registered membership of 1,200 boys in his new position. Mr. Wiles entered the Boy Scout movement in Portland, Ore., where he served as scoutmaster, a skipper of a Sea Scout unit, and a member of the council organization committee. He took over responsibilities in the local council following his graduation from the National Training School for Scout Executives at Mendham, N. J., in May, 1935.

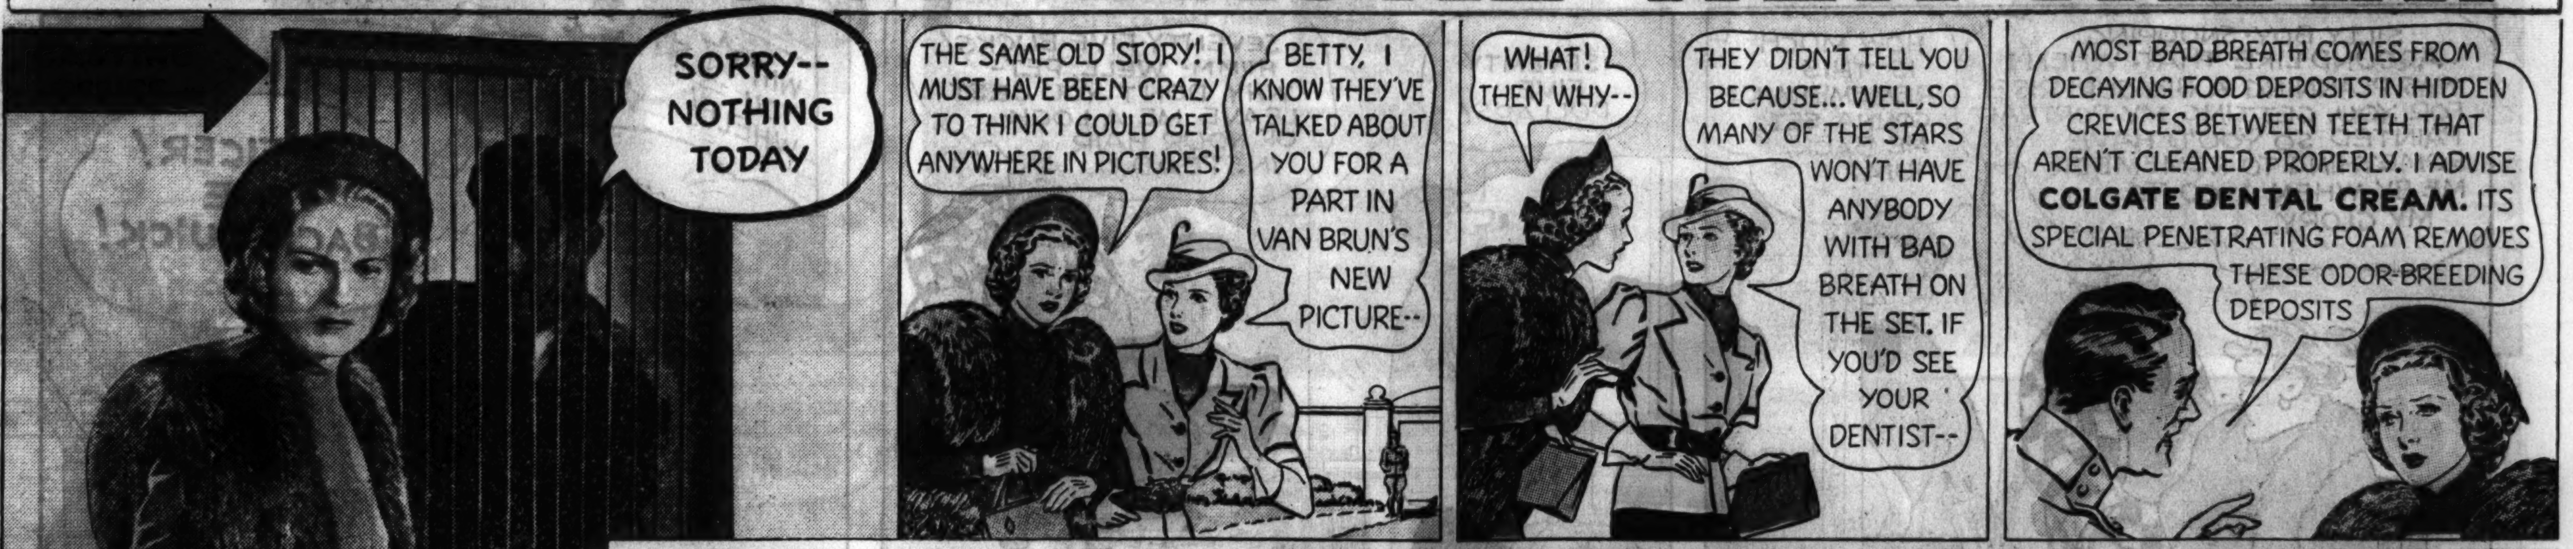
HOLLYWOOD BROKE HER HEART



76% of all people over the age of 17 have bad breath!

Read how Colgate Dental Cream protects you

Dentists warn:

MOST BAD BREATH BEGINS WITH THE TEETH!

TESTS among 2,152 men and women (of all ages and from all walks of life) indicate that 76% of all people over the age of 17 have bad breath! Tests also show that most bad breath comes from improperly cleaned teeth!

Ordinary cleansing methods, which merely polish the exposed surfaces of your teeth, fail to remove the decaying food deposits in hidden crevices between your teeth. And these deposits, tests show, are the source of most bad breath, dull, dingy teeth, and much tooth decay.

But Colgate Dental Cream has a special penetrating foam which gets into every tiny crevice—emulsifying and washing away those food and acid deposits that cause bad breath.

At the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent gently yet thoroughly cleans and brightens enamel—makes your teeth sparkle—gives new brilliance to your smile.

So brush your teeth, gums, tongue with Colgate Dental Cream at least twice daily and have cleaner, brighter teeth—sweeter, purer breath!

If your child won't eat well or gain weight ... you may find Ovaltine a great help. Thousands of mothers have reported that it has helped them "build up" their children. And when children add weight they often get over their nervousness, too.

The action of Ovaltine is explained in the following way:—(1) It contains the "appetite-renewing" Vitamin B, without which a good appetite is impossible . . . (2) It helps digest starchy foods in the stomach so the stomach can empty sooner and hunger return sooner . . . (3) It makes milk easier to digest, and more palatable.

Besides, Ovaltine itself is extremely digestible, and nourishing. It also supplies certain "protective" factors children need.

For all these reasons Ovaltine may be the very thing your child should be getting. Give it to him—and see if he doesn't gain appetite, and weight.

You can get Ovaltine at grocery and drug stores everywhere.

Special Offer!

OUR REGULAR PRICE... 50¢... WILL BE SENT FOR 10¢ AND ALUMINUM SEAL FROM UNDERNEATH THE LID OF AN OVALTINE CAN. ENCOURAGES YOUR CHILD TO DRINK MORE OVALTINE. SEND FOR ONE FOR YOUR CHILD!

JUST MAIL COUPON TO OVALTINE

Dept. 10-2-117, 360 North Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

I enclose 10¢ (to cover handling and mailing) and the aluminum seal from under lid of Ovaltine can. Please send me the Orphan Annie Mug. (Only 1 Mug sent to a person.)

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Wigwams Mark Fall

October 23, 1937.

BROWN wigwams made of sorghum cane and cornstalks are typical symbols of autumn on the farm at this time of the year. The sheep are going to enjoy the cornstalk shocks during winter. Between twelve and fifteen acres of corn has been cut for their winter feed. The boys hauled this corn from the field and stacked it near one of the farmhouses. Later the shocks will be torn down and run through a cutter to convert the corn into food for the ewes and lambs. Meantime the shocks make an attractive picture near the farm houses.

do a little corn harvesting without

The squirrels started last week to the aid of elaborate machinery. There are about thirty-five acres of standing corn on the farm, ready to be husked. We noticed a few days ago how the squirrels had been helping themselves to ears from the outside rows next to the oak woods. It's no trick for them to climb a stalk and sail into an ear of fresh corn, or even haul the food into the woods, where the animals don't have to worry about being disturbed.

Raid Fields for Mushrooms.

The raids of mushroom hunters in farm fields were more annoying than any squirrel depredations in the cornfields last week. Judging by the number of mushroom hunters who have climbed over farm fences recently without asking permission of anybody on the experimental farm, the workers on the farm are going to be kept busy during the next few weeks keeping trespassers from invading every patch of woods and every pasture. One day recently sixteen mushroom hunters—none of whom had asked permission to walk through the farm—were found in different fields. As one of the boys remarked a few days ago, the limited supply of mushrooms on the farm is utilized by the farm families. No doubt other farms in Chicagoland also are being invaded by mushroom hunters who don't bother to ask permission for gathering these delicacies.

The robins on the farm now are assembled in flocks. The other morning we saw between fifteen and twenty of them making a united attack on the red haws and wild crabs. The robins, early arrivals in the spring, are among the last to leave in the autumn.

Although there still are many robins on the farm, the blackbirds and grackles were the most conspicuous last week. One flock that we saw must have had upwards of 1,000 birds in it. After spending some time around one of the ponds, we saw the birds sweep over the farm to light in a field to feed.

Apples Stacked in Shed.

Apples from the farm orchards were stacked in a cool dry place last week. When we stepped into the tool shed after a walk over the farm we saw a line of baskets filled with many varieties of apples stacked against a wall. Here were bright red crabapples, winesaps, greenings, Ben Davis, and several other varieties which will be used for cooking and to make cider. One of the farm women picked another bushel of wild crabapples to make more jelly during the next few days. The small yellowish crabs from the trees in the woods make delicious jelly when cooked alone or in combination with peaches and other fruits.

The beautiful maroon color on the farm now is supplied by the sumac. Earlier in the season the berries of the sumac were brighter than now. As the season advanced they lost their flashy color to become a deep dark red.

But this change has not deprived them of their slightly acid flavor. We sampled some of the berries the other day. They were just as sour as we found them about two months ago when a drink was made from the berries . . . a refreshing concoction which had a decided lemon flavor.

Paris Originals Dazzle the American Fashion World

By RHEA SEEGER

WITH this season's successes in full swing, with a definite trend to opulence in clothes and accessories from hats to footgear, with new clothes distinctly and only for afternoon, with new streamlines, new waistlines, new necklines, and intricate drapery and shirring, feminine clothes are about to remake the former rather casually dressed woman into an alluring, decorative lady.

It's fun to shop these days, and more fun to unpack these provocatively fragile clothes swathed in reams of tissue, in exciting long boxes. All the excitement of fine French clothes without the bother of going after them, for in record time the pick of all the famous French showings is presented here in town. French suits, French dresses designed for American streamlines and an American woman's active life, costumes, coats, and the most fabulously fur festooned ensembles are now on display and going out into circulation in quick time.

It takes genius and exacting discrimination to pick models for a fashion-wise clientele. It takes a fine knowledge of what women will and won't wear . . . it takes years of selecting, unfailing good judgment, and a proper enthusiasm for beautiful textiles, an intuitive sense of color and color contrast or combine to pick unerringly the exciting clothes that season after season rate top, but it has been done.

One can see about town imports and adaptations, together with exclusive originals designed and executed just for the individual. In an atmosphere as decoratively French and feminine as any of the famous Paris shops you select materials from the bolts and rolls of imported fabrics; wool, lamé, tissues, thick silks, gauzy chiffons, and the stunning tweeds. Measured, and the conference begins in earnest; materials decided upon that drape to the best advantage, colors mixed, contrasted, combined, and twisted after plenty of debate; streamlines settled, trimmings advised, and appointments made for the important first and second fittings . . . thus the beginning of an inspired original just for you and you alone.

These originals demand the best in evening bags. Gay colored velvet bags in emerald, sapphire, ruby, and topaz tones can either match or contrast your evening gown. They're of the very flat type and some have casually shirred pouches with concealed frames. Decorative clasps are featured on some of the models, especially the silky black duvetyns or the dull crêpes and quilted crêpes, where simulated precious stones and bits of jade or rose quartz can be especially effective.

Or the march of mannequins, showing the thrilling beauties and daring new originals just unpacked, gay little turbans or toques, spectacular frenzies of fox that swirls on suit skirt hems or on the almost incredibly lovely fur coats. They parade in dramatic evening gowns, dinner clothes of superior distinction, and what is unquestionably the finest collection of daytime dresses to be found, deceptively simple, the kind only a super-artist can contrive. This is the perfect shopping collection.

From the numerous models we've sketched five, featuring unusual fabrics, different color combines, this year's crop of dashing new clothes, definitly feminine and most decorative. All of them dress parade . . . all of them exclusive designs.

● Above: The midriff of this dinner costume is of old lame, to match the luxuriously folded wide sleeves, while the bodice top is finished to look like a bolero.

FASHION ACCESSORIES

Gloves are tremendously important for evening fashions; such decorative ideas as thickly wrinkled white kidskin gloves that reach the elbow have cut-out designs and then are embroidered, or creamy white kidskin with glinting gold braid bows or frogs. Or you can choose such subtle colors as dusky French cerise with the traditional three pearl ball buttons at the wrist and the gloves wrinkling softly way to the elbow. Other colors are a clear canary yellow in either soft suede or supple kidskin, or the accent tone of turquoise blue or even chartreuse green.

Beautiful evening bags of unusual design are plentiful now. A square of white completely covered with dozens of twinkling tiny rhinestones has a frame of seed pearls. Another circle shape is made with the same combine, and the old fashioned draw-string pouch bags are revived with the smallest sort of seed pearls, with the draw-strings made of the pearls. Glimmering rather wickedly are the dusky black bags strewn with rhinestones and the squares, oblongs, pouches, and a dozen different shaped trifles made of sequins to match all the sequined gowns or sequin trimmed costumes.

Fur trimmed gloves for afternoon suits or ensembles are smooth, artistic new finds. Fur such as sealskin, silky Persian lamb, mink, and silver fox has been carefully applied to the fabric of the gloves. One spectacular pair of white ermine gloves are made with palms of white dull suede or velvet and the entire upper half of the gloves is of fur. They are unusually effective with black or dark colored velvet evening capes or wraps; they are the last word in the winter show of elegance. Thick black suedes and doeskins have cuffs and unusual designs of fox fur. Persian lamb is usually applied in bands or narrow panels, some of the gloves having the upper half all fur, some just featuring the cuffs, but all are most unusual and effective with all manner of dress parade outfits.

Jackets with Fur Trim Are Fashion News

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

WHAT will be any woman's recipe for daylight enticement this winter is the fur hung jacket ensemble. You can cook up your own mixture. Or you can follow any one of dozens of different blends that stem from Paris.

One that is being used daily by big time folk is the cloth jacket hung with black, blue, or silver fox, and keeping company with a sweater fitted dress of the same material, or with a skirt and glamorous satin, velvet, or silk blouse. This same mixture done in velvet goes big for afternoon and for dinner. Don't ask me what length jackets they're wearing. They are wearing all kinds from bosom length boleros down to knee length. The closely fitted wrist length jacket some find more exciting because it's newer, but it's strictly legal to wear a hip length fitted jacket or a knee length loose one.

Fur jackets in all these lengths and shapes, plus cloth or velvet or silk frocks are polling a big feminine vote in the style elections of the season.

COLOR in the jacket ensemble is a mixed bag. Plaid jackets trimmed with fur over one color dresses are still a high fashion note. A jacket in one color, dress in another, all achieved with a bland rich material like broadcloth or velvet and heavily loaded with fox makes a swanky ensemble entry. Peerless black with silver, blue, or black fox has few rivals, though many of the black jacket ensembles of this winter will flash color like vivid red or green or blue which may be shown at the neckline of the dress or elsewhere. Dark, stormy red plus fox, and duck breast green and almost purple blue will be worn a great deal for such ensembles. Screeching color combinations like the new lurid pink over a purple dress will be seen along the avenues worn by "don't care" women.

The hat that is worn with the jacket ensemble will do more than its share to give a woman that necessary different look. The shapes are so varied that no rules can be set, except to insist on a hat which is striking in form. It may match the ensemble color or it may just as well contrast in the most violent manner. Matching ensemble hats are likely to be trimmed with color which contrasts. Brimmed hats, with the brims pushed up high out of the way of fur collars, and new flamboyant berets that are high fliers will be important ensemble millinery. Fur hats will be seen everywhere.

FEET will look trimmer than ever. Pumps or sandals made of very supple lether, cut moderately low will tie on high around the ankles in the newest and smartest footwear for town. Stockings will be modestly light rather than the mournful taupe and brownish shades.

Gloves will be made of opulent antelope when they match the ensemble color, and they may be twin contrasting color notes or trimmed with fur. Muffs to match the fur on the jacket will be seen.

Alix' magnificent black cloky ensemble is an outstanding jacket costume in Paris. The long jacket has a cutaway closing and is trimmed extravagantly with silver fox. The dress is very slender and draped into the high neckline. A cord belt flashes color in red, orange, and green lether rings around the front. It ties on with a lether thong. The Alix halo beret is made of tucked black silk jersey.

A JACKET ensemble from the great Paquin has a fitted dull green velvet jacket with a supercollar of blue fox and an exaggerated left hip flare also treated with blue fox. The slim skirt is black velvet and under the jacket is a very grand blouse made of silver lamé, draped across the bosom and the throat.

Lucien Lelong signs an ensemble that consists of a black wool jacket and dress. The jacket is banded around the bottom with black fox and a very large shawl collar of the fox ends at the waistline. Scroll bands of ruby red velvet make a flash of color on the pockets. The black dress has a fox hem, at the front of which the fox rises and ruby red velvet fills in the gap. The very simple blouse has a red velvet bow tie and velvet scrolls on the pockets. The hat is made o black felt and trimmed with puffs of black ostrich placed on both sides.

IN a frenzy of creating models for slim young figures designers often are guilty of forgetting one of the most important fashion problems, that of styling models especially for the mature silhouette. Many of the frivolous and glamorous frocks are absolutely unsuited to the matronly figure, and women of ample proportions are "up against it" to find designs they may wear. With this particularly problem in mind we have created a model which is available in sizes up to 48, and one which has a wealth of fine styling.

It is created in two versions: one dressy model with tied neckline, matching belt and long sleeves; a simpler frock for everyday wear with a V neckline, soft collar, short sleeves, roomy pockets, and plenty of buttons down the front for chic.

The dress illustrated at the left is the more formal version. It is especially smart in sheer black woolen. The self-color stitching down the front emphasizes the sleek, trim lines. Other fascinating fabrics from which to choose are novelty surface silks, silk and woolen mixtures, velvet, satin, and plain crêpe. Black is the best color, but other discreet shades to suit one's complexion are fashionable and pretty.

The original of the everyday version is made of woolen with a soft tweed finish, and the collar is contrasting satin. Bone buttons were used for trimming and a tailored lether belt was selected to do duty at the waistline.

This dress is easy to sew and takes no time at all. A step-by-step chart accompanies the pattern, so no matter how inexperienced you are in dressmaking, you should have no trouble at all with this simple and distinctive model.

Style No. 3150 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 39 inch material for the long sleeved dress.

Friendliness Valuable Aid in Job Search

By Doris Blake.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

ONE of the nation's leading employment counselors, Loire Brophy, who makes it her business to find jobs for people and people for jobs, recently stressed the importance of being a good mixer as an accomplishment for students in their senior year as well as making a mark with their studies.

"It is advisable for a young man to learn how to become a good mixer and make friends easily," says Miss Brophy. "This is a natural gift with some men. Others find it difficult to overcome their innate shyness.

"In later years," Miss Brophy reminds us, "contacts assume great importance. Those who are inclined to be too reserved should work hardest to acquire that invaluable faculty for making wide friendships."

MISS BROPHY cites instance after instance in which this quality has been rewarded in after school job placement.

"The following example shows how these things actually work out in business," she says. "A young man I know arrived in New York after graduation. His burning ambition was to get into editorial work. This is, as you know, quite difficult. But he had made a host of friends during his college years. He had done some work in a newspaper office.

"The first person to whom he applied was the former editor of that paper, now on a national magazine, who remembered him as an obliging and friendly youngster. The lad got his chance. Today he is an associate editor of the magazine and going up. Another classmate, just the week before, was turned down for the same job. He had failed to make friends at school.

"While in college, a man or woman should devote thought and energy toward perfecting himself as an individual as well as in his studies. If he does a good job of this, the employment problem will take care of itself."

Passing on the advice of Miss Brophy to a young man of our acquaintance, whose neglect of friendship making surely would indicate future difficulties, according to the Brophy formula, we were asked:

"But how can you become a good mixer when it isn't in you? How can you make friends when no one extends the friendly gesture?"

Both questions are at the root of the particular young man's troubles. First, in accepting the fact blindly that he hasn't the traits that make a good mixer. Secondly, waiting for the other fellow to make the first friendly move.

BUT let us assume that becoming a good mixer can be converted into a study with assured future rewards, provided character and decency are traits of the individual. Make a study of it. Study the things that are outstanding in the young man who is generally liked. Study his approach to people. Study the way he opens a conversation. Study the way he listens to what the other person has to say, bowing deferentially to an opinion which may not be his own, but which he recognizes as the other's right.

Study his mode of life. Note that it is not all study and no play, not all work and no contacts outside of his work. Note that the good mixer takes an interest in a number of things—in sports, in travel, in current affairs. His is not a one track mind buried under the weight of the one interest he has adopted. Note that he has the time for the things that the reserved one says he has no time for and makes just as good marks in his studies.

Miss Brophy's advice may just as well be adopted by young women. Perhaps they are even more in need of it, for in them shyness is a more poignant thing than when it occurs in a man. The girl must wait to be asked to go places. The young man stands a better chance of being taken along, or of being singled out by some girl for attention and encouragement.

Aside from the economic feature of being a good mixer and making friends easily, it is the only salvation for the girl or boy without the prestige that goes with an established social background, having a famous parent, some magnificent talent, and so on. A girl or boy on her and his own has to be a good mixer or be lost in the shuffle. But such is the world's need that the young person who has mastered the art of winning people by sheer friendliness has an asset the advantages of which are incalculable. We repeat that it is an art that can be learned.

THERE'S no formula for success for the shy ones comparable to that oft-heard one of believing that the other person is in identically the same boat, eager to make friendships, eager to be thought well of, eager to be included in conversations and parties.

In other words, it's the old story, that if you want to be licked act as if you are licked. Crawl into your shell and stay there. But if you won't be victimized by the inferiority destroyer, get out and fight your way through to friendships. Say that it is in you to do it and proceed on that theory, and you'll laugh later at how simple is the trick of interesting other people and winning them over.

Every day there is presented, in the feature columns of the Chicago Tribune, a stimulating article by Miss Blake, who lends friendly counsel on a wide variety of common problems.

Clotilde Children's Fashions

NOTHING ever styled for juveniles has been quite as successful as "swing" lines. There's something about their fulness that lends substance to slender little bodies which are growing rapidly, so rapidly in fact, that silhouettes are too thin and bones too prominent. The grace and width of the swing skirt broadens the figure and makes growing girls seem chubbier than they are. The shoulders of this dress, too, conspire to lend breadth. They are puffed squarely. A demure Peter Pan collar tops the nicely fitted bodice, and a bow may be called into service as auxiliary trimming. A belt may match the tailored bow, or a ribbon sash may adorn the waistline. If belt and bow are used, why not use cire satin for the bow, and patent for the belt?

Woolens, silks, and cottons all make up well in this model. If you use a cotton it might be well to trim the collar and sleeves with binding to contrast. Both prints and plain shades are suitable and fashionable.

Nothing could be more practical for school wear than this frock, which is so delightfully easy for mother to make.

Style No. 3148 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2¼ yards of 39 inch material, with ¼ yard of 39 inch contrasting and 1 yard of ribbon.

If You Have a Roommate Be Considerate

"Planning the Church Wedding" is the title of one of the most helpful, inexpensive guides to wedding procedure ever published. Every bride-to-be should own a copy. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 3 cents. Postpaid, 5 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

NO matter what our associations and social contacts may be, if they are to run along smoothly they demand consideration, thoughtfulness, and tact on the part of all the participants. This is true of even the most casual friendship. But it is even more necessary when friends are living together in close proximity. I am thinking particularly of the problems of roommates, girls at school, or young business women who choose to share an apartment for the sake of company as well as shaving down expenses.

HAVING a roommate to get along with should not present a situation that has to be handled with kid gloves unless one of the partners is being remiss and behaving selfishly. That would make life quite unbearable and would completely ruin what might have developed into a delightful friendship. It has to be a partnership arrangement, otherwise it never will work. The successful roommate is the product of the many little extra efforts. All the problems are trifling ones, but even trifles, if they are piled up in large numbers, are enough to make enemies out of friends.

If you are one who has a roommate with whom you share duties and responsibilities, remember to keep up your share of the bargain. Be kind enough to take messages for her and see that they are delivered promptly and accurately. And don't fail to say thank you for little services that are performed in your favor. Think of your partner when dividing the cookies or cake sent from home,

RESPECT the other girl's wishes for quiet when she wants to read or study, or wants to sleep late in the morning. Do your part in keeping the room clean by picking up the papers that may be scattered about when you open the window, by hanging up your coat and hat when you return from class, and by keeping your books in order on the shelf.

The borrowing roommate probably is the biggest offender of all, whether it is a matter of dimes or frocks. There are emergencies, of course, and a good friend doesn't mind sharing her personal belongings with another if it doesn't become a habit. But don't ever expect another to supply you with little necessities day after day when you could and should provide these things for yourself. If it seems necessary to borrow a little money from your friend, be sure it is not too frequently and be sure, too, to pay up in full and on time.

Many Notables in Paris for the Exposition

By May Birkhead.

PARIS

Many notables, especially Americans, are taking in the exposition at this time when it is less crowded than it was in August and September. What with the entertainments in connection with the presence of American Legion, members, the automobile show and the exposition itself, Paris seldom has been so crowded, celebrities so numerous.

Among those taking in the Van Gogh showing at the Museums of Modern Art was J. P. Morgan, who recently has been in Scotland and London. The works of this artist are set out in a way to interest the uneducated public, but they are a remarkable show also for the connoisseur, for they include perhaps the greatest assemblage of his canvases and drawings ever brought together under one roof.

THE masses, no less than the elect, linger before the self-portrait, showing the artist without his beard, and his ear cut off and bound up. This noted painting, the sequel to Van Gogh's wild impulse to assassinate his friend and fellow artist, Gauguin, when they were together at Arles in 1888, belongs to a well known Parisian collector, Paul Rosenberg.

The present showing has been enormously enriched over that shown in New York last year by the many works owned by the artist's nephew, who lives at Laren, Holland, and has generously contributed to the striking exhibition now on here. Already there is a controversy as to whether an artist such as Van Gogh should be purveyed to the great public on such a scale, and with lavish quotations from his letters surrounding, in large type, many of the canvases. But the organizer of the exhibition retorts that the hoi polloi cannot be expected to appreciate Van Gogh unless ample means are put at their disposition for understanding him.

Be that as it may, Gen. and Mrs. Charles Dawes and Rufus Dawes were among those who took in the Van Gogh showing. They also have been the recipients of much entertaining. The general and his wife were guests at a luncheon given by Edmond Labbé, the commssioner general of the exposition, at the restaurant known as "à Bord la Normandie," with about a score of others in the party. Gen. Dawes and his wife are going to London for a week before sailing for the homeland. They, as well as Gen. Pershing and Gen. Harbord, were at a luncheon given recently by Gen. Comte and Mme. de Chambrun [Clara Longworth]. The Chambruns are sailing for New York on the Normandie on Nov. 3.

JOHN GADE, who recently came from Brussels to visit his brother, Herman Gade, still is with him, for the latter has been quite ill at his Château du Mesnil-St. Denis. Mr. Gade's country neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Moulton, who have spent recent winters at Palm Beach, are going this season to Marrakesh, to be the guests of Mr. Moulton's aunt, Mrs. Moses Taylor, and they also will take a cruise on her yacht.

While Charles Bedaux is accompanying the duke and duchess of Windsor on their trip to Germany, Mrs. Bedaux is staying in Paris, and is with her sister, Mme. Duez.

Charles Gray, formerly of Chicago, and his wife, the former Cornelia O'Connor Wallace, are sailing on the Normandie on Nov. 3, and will go to Palm Beach, where they recently bought land and are having a villa built. They were guests on the Riviera of the Fuller Feders. Also with them on their yacht was their daughter, Comtesse de Bourg de Bozas, whose divorce from her French husband, it is said, will be a fait accompli withi na few weeks.

Fad for Dieting Seems on Wane Among the Girls

BUSINESS girls are rapidly losing interest in reducing diets, according to a study of approximately 2,600 "white collar" workers sampled from twenty-two cities by a life insurance company.

Of the 1,286 feminine office and professional workers who furnished detailed reports of their health records and habits, only fifty-eight had undergone a reducing régime during the preceding twelve months, and another seventy-five planned to take such a diet.

A total of 147 were fifteen pounds overweight, 717 were within normal weight range for their height, 392 were underweight. The average height of the girls in the study was five feet four inches; their average weight was 125.6 pounds, which while conforming to insurance health standards, would rate as fairly solid compared to Worth and Patou manikins.

Almost exactly 75 per cent of the girls admitted that they would prefer marriage and home life to a business career.

The 1,282 men taking part in the study averaged five feet nine and a half inches in height, and 157.7 pounds in weight; 225 were overweight; 825 were within normal weight limits for their height, and 214 were underweight.

Five out of six of the workers, both men and women, reported that their working conditions were healthful. Among the dissatisfied remainder, poor ventilation was the principal complaint; dust was the second most frequent complaint among the male workers, while poor light was secand as a cause of dissatisfaction among the women.

Only five women and fourteen men out of the nearly 2,600 workers complained that their working hours were too long. However, 565 men and 521 women declared that they worked under pressure sufficient to cause perceptible nervous strain.

The men spent more money with doctors and hospitals than their feminine fellow employés, but took less time off from work on account of illness. Colds outnumbered all other complaints combined, with throat troubles second and stomach ailments third in importance.

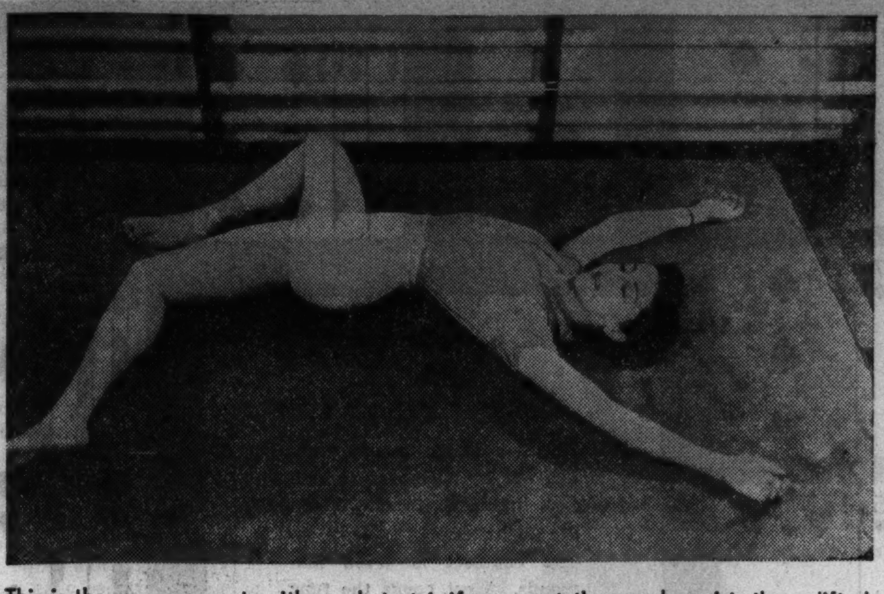
Through the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle



This is the way you must writhe and stretch if you want the supple waist, the uplifted bust and the graceful freedom of movement demanded by the new clothes. This is a stretching exercise much emphasized in a New York salon, with shoulders held flat to the floor, but waist, hips and legs free to be stretched and twisted. It does wonders.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—This town is exercise crazy. The swinging doors of the beauty and exercise salons never are still. Every smart woman, whether she's thin, plump, or just right, chatters about waist slimming and suppling. But what's more important, she does something more than just talk. She takes exercise, both at home and in the salon. And she knows about her own diet down to the last wistful calorie.

The sensation of New York is a beauty salon of many stories which is a beauty empire in itself. There is a health bar, where those on reduction bent stop in for fruit juice cocktails on the days they're following the liquid diet. There is a little jewel of a health restaurant where food more beautiful, more colorful than flowers is exquisitely served. No meat. All fruits and vegetables tenderly prepared. It is the smart place to lunch, and it's not exclusively a feminine domain.

LUNCHEON begins with fruit or a fruit goblet. The main dish always is a thing of beauty as well as the last word in scientific sustenance. The cup of warm health bouillon comes last and dessert is fruit again, plus an amusing bit of a special bread, sweet, but with hardly a calorie to a carload.

There is a dietitian in attendance to adapt the best diet for your needs to your established food habits. The salon people are not food reformers in the militant sense. They make good food and food good for you so attractive and so satisfying you reform yourself.

Every aspect of a woman's search for beauty of face and figure is coordinated in this establishment. There is a magnificent body department with an exercise room, baths, massage tables, and apparatus for heat treatments and sun baths. The exercise room is well patronized. As we said, New York women have gone exercise crazy. That "corseted look" to clothes probably is responsible. Every one wants an uplifted bust, a slim waist that can almost be spanned with one's two hands.

ON every blue mat on the cork floor [especially treated so that it never feels cold against bare feet] you will see women stretching and swinging. One must be limber and lithe and round in the right places. Exercise does it, so New York women exercise!

There is a corsetiere in attendance, who sees to it that your foundation garment makes the most of the marvelous changes in your silhouette. She fits "bra" and girdle [no one piece garments allowed here] and even slips with "bra" inset in the bias satin, that do their share to glorify your new silhouette.

What happens in the east must inevitably happen in Chicago. If you want to keep up with your eastern sisters, and you should want to because they're rapidly acquiring the best of all figures, you'd better exercise, too!

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in The Chicago Tribune.

Special Device Best for Squeezing Limes

YOU can, of course, go on squeezing limes in a lemon squeezer, but they really deserve one of their own. It's smaller. The lime fits right down in the opening to get all the juice and it costs about 50 cents with or without a strainer.

British Envoy to China Has Clever Tongue

LONDON

Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, the British ambassador to China, is regarded here as one of the most brilliant men in the British Foreign Service.

For one thing, he is a linguist of the effortless school. As British minister to the Baltic states, he mastered the diverse tongues and acquired a fluent command of Persian while at Teheran. Appointed ambassador to China in 1934, he took advantage of the few months' notice given him to master the rudiments of Chinese before going to the far east where he reportedly has polished off his command of that difficult tongue.

But, in addition, he has an "underground" reputation in the foreign office as a racy topical poet whose jealously guarded hexameters circulate secretly through the foreign office and to British embassies abroad, carried in diplomatic pouches. The soul of British discretion while on his "job," he is reputed to be audacious, irreverent, and satiric when he drops into poetry.

Presumably he is whiling away the tedium of his present confinement in a hospital by composing a tribute to the polite east where men take long philosophic views.

Richest bachelor in the house of commons, Lord Colum Crichton-Stuart, M. P., recently bought from his brother, Lord Bute, the beautiful old place of Mochrum in County-Galloway. It stands in lovely scenery overlooking Luce bay. He is redecorating the house with the aid of his niece, Lady Jean Bertie.

Lord Colum, at 51, is par excellence the aristocrat of the house of commons, tall, thin, and reserved, still adhering to the black frock coats and high collars of 1900. He is much too dyed-in-the-wool as a Tory to relish the middle-of-the-road Socialism of Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Chamberlain but by a curious and, perhaps, rather English paradox, his best personal friends in the House are among the Socialists, with whom he enjoys friendly arguments.

Apparently he feels that they, at least, are consistent in their views, whereas he reproaches the leaders of his party for wobbling on the issues of the day.

He is an ardent Roman Catholic and is reputed to be a genial host at the big parties he gives at the town house in Mansfield street which he inherited from his mother.

Stylish Winter Windows Wear Lace Curtains

What every woman should know about curtains and draperies is told in the booklet, "New Curtains and Draperies," by Claire Winslow, Tribune stylist in interior decoration. Get a copy at either of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower. Price, 3 cents. Postpaid, 5 cents.

By Claire Winslow.

THE well dressed window is wearing lace this winter. The size of the mesh, the pattern, and the length of the curtain depend on the type of window and the drapery material, but lace nets are in the forefront of popularity.

One reason for their high favor is their great variety. There is an attractive design for every taste and pocketbook. And they come either ready to hang or by the yard. Another is their clever trick of letting in the light while giving the room privacy. You can look out, but the passerby cannot see in.

One new lace net, manufactured by a famous firm, is sheer as a cobweb, with a charming six sided motif as its design. It is ideal for use in a bedroom with feminine looking ruffled overdraperies of floral chintz or taffeta.

FOR a maple bedroom or dining room or dinette there is a heavier ecru net in much the same pattern, and it is available with or without a border. If chosen with the border it may be used without overdraperies, and should come down to the lower edge of the window frame or to the floor.

The usual length of glass curtains is measured by the window sill. The curtains should be made to hang level with it. However, if a more formal effect is desired, and if the woodwork in the room is ivory or cream, the curtains may be floor length, like the draperies under which they are hung.

FOR a girl's room one of the loveliest curtains is woven in a dainty lace flower design on a background of fine rounded meshes. The flowers look like delicate little silhouettes. Another exquisite curtain has lace medallions in oval shape woven on its rounded mesh background. This design is exceptionally smart and is brand new.

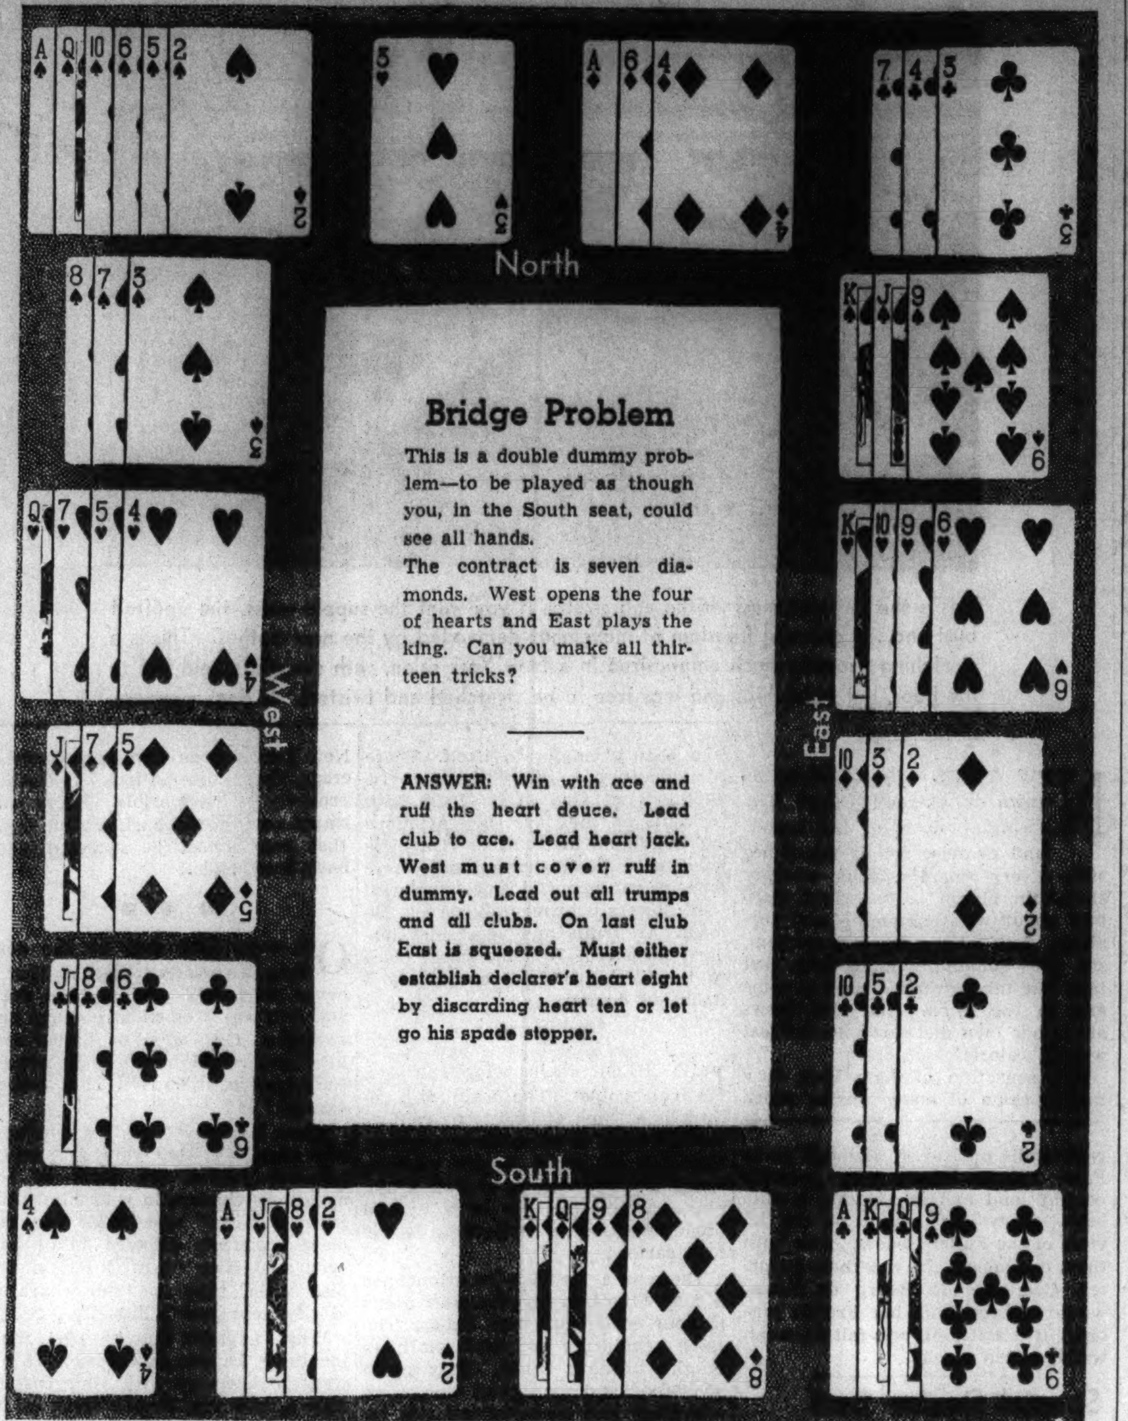
When you go shopping for the new curtains remember one important rule: Never use a single panel of net at a window. Even a center door window should have a pair of curtains if your room is to look attractive.

Most nets and gauzes are 48 or 50 inches wide, and a full width should be used in one panel. Unless the window is narrow, two widths should be used if the net is very fine. This avoids a skimpy effect, which is the one thing that is sure to ruin any window. And, as stated before, two panels, not one, are required for each window.

A unified effect is given if all the first floor windows in a house have the same glass curtains.

For further information about the lace net curtains described by Miss Winslow telephone the Tribune Public Service office, Superior 0100, or write Miss Winslow, inclosing a 3 cent stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Contract According to Culbertson



By Ely Culbertson

(Copyright: 1937: By Ely Culbertson.)

Bridge Law Vs. Ethics

THE old consanguineous conflict between law and ethics has reared its ugly head in the form of a letter received from a correspondent:

"Dear Mr Culbertson: Will you, as the chief justice of the supreme court of bridge, rule on the following extraordinary case:

"Last night in a rubber bridge game at a local club this hand was dealt:

♦ 8 5 4
♣ A K Q 10 7 3

WEST
♠ Q J 10 3
♥ K Q 2
♦ K J 10
♣ J 4 2

EAST
♠ 9 5 2
♥ J 8 4 3
♣ 9 8 6

SOUTH
♥ A 10 9 7

"Both sides were vulnerable, and North-South reached the unusual and probably quite wrong contract of four no trump, doubled and redoubled. Although no question of bidding or play is involved, I might as well give you the bidding for the record:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 no trump	Double
Pass	Pass	Redouble	Pass
Pass	Pass

"Again I say the bidding, whether good or bad, is not in debate. The only pertinent fact is that South was saddled with a vulnerable four no trump redoubled contract.

"West opened the spade queen. Declarer won and led the singleton club to the ace. Both opponents followed. The king of clubs was cashed, declarer discarding a low diamond. On this trick West, who had inadvertently arranged his cards in such a fashion that the three of spades was in with his club suit, played that card, under the impression that he was following suit. Declarer was, of course, disgusted at the bad club break, but, since there was no entry in dummy, decided that he might as well cash the club queen, this time discarding a heart from his own hand. When East followed suit, West, who naturally had expected him to show out, since he had counted himself for four clubs and dummy for six, awoke to the terrible knowledge that he must have revoked on the previous trick. To confirm this West asked and received permission to inspect the trick just quitted, and saw that he had thrown the three of spades by error. West was now confronted with this ticklish problem:

"His unintentional revoke had resulted in his being able to stop the club suit and confine the declarer to three tricks in that suit instead of the six which he would have made on normal play. Since West would have to return only two tricks for the revoke, he would be benefited to the extent of one full trick by the mistake. After some thought, West deliberately threw his jack of clubs on dummy's queen, thereby reëstablishing the club suit on its original solid basis!

"The other players, of course, noted West's action when he followed to the next club lead with his four spot. Declarer finally ended up with one overtrick. (West's inadvertent spade discard permitted declarer to establish his own fourth spade.)

"Declarer, who was the only scorekeeper, began to figure up the score, when North, the dummy, piped up as follows: 'Don't forget, partner, we have two additional overtricks coming to us for that revoke.'

"Declarer looked up as though he had been shot and snapped: 'You don't mean to say that you are calling a revoke after the sportsmanship West showed in correcting the situation, do you?'

"'The rule book says that all rules and penalties should be enforced!' North answered.

"'Well, I, for one, absolutely refuse to assess a penalty!' South yelled.

"And that is how the matter stood, Mr. Culbertson. South, the declarer, swore he would never play another game if the penalty for the revoke appeared on the score. North pointed out that he himself had been penalized on numberless occasions for inadvertent revokes that had made no difference in the play, and that his belief was that the letter of the law should be observed—that the moment individual interpretations were allowed to creep in, all law enforcement would become chaotic.

"The game broke up and the score was put aside untotaled, awaiting your reply as to what should be done.

At first sight of the above letter I was afraid I was being called upon for a real King Solomon judgment. It would not be the first time questions have sometimes been shot at me involving nice points of ethics that have made me tear my hair for precisely the right decision. This one is easy!

So long as North stands on his legal rights and demands the penalty for a revoke, he must be awarded the two tricks that the defenders won. No legal alternative is possible.

But now let me discharge a little steam over the ethics, or sportsmanship, of the matter. West proved himself a sportsman and a gentleman by attempting to repair the damage he had done. He saw that by his revoke he would stop the club suit and shut out three tricks that were rightfully the declarer's, at the expense to himself of only two tricks for the revoke. This advantage he refused to take. Under the circumstances it is inconceivable to me that a bridge player lives who would even mildly suggest, let alone insist upon, the enforcement of the revoke penalty. Perhaps I have been lucky in not having met a player of North's obvious character. Along with my prayer for aces and kings in the coming years I shall include the fervid hope that I never do meet such a player!

"'I think marriage is a dreadful risk,' sighed a friend the other day. 'If only there were some infallible method of finding out if a man will make a good husband!'

"'Play bridge with him!' retorted her cynical companion. 'If he survives that ordeal he will come safely through anything!'

"It is a strange fact that bridge reveals all the little kinks of our natures that at other times we keep jealously hidden. We pride ourselves on our evenness of temper, but a foolish lead by our partner will make us snap at him or her. We boast of our patience, but let a player hesitate for a few seconds over a call or a lead and we frown and fidget like spoilt children."—Edinburgh Evening Despatch.

While thoroughly indorsing the above sentiments, I must point out that a great deal more than a man's adaptability for marriage can be determined through playing bridge with him. The well known British restraint probably balked at enumerating other possible tests inherent in bridge. I myself have no hesitancy in stating that I believe I could pass upon a man's honesty, degree of kindness, truthfulness, and even his capacity for murder just by playing bridge with him. I must admit, however, that I would not care to apply the same tests to feminine bridge players!

Each Monday in The Daily Tribune Mr. Culbertson writes a bridge article especially for beginners. Articles for more advanced players on other days.

Today's Questions

Question: Dealer opened the bidding with one diamond. My partner doubled. Third hand redoubled. What should have been my response with:

♠ 8 7 4 ♥ 10 7 5 4 ♦ 9 4 ♣ Q 6 3 2

Answer: One heart.

Question: I opened the bidding with one heart. No bidding by opponents. Partner responded with two clubs. What is my proper rebid with the following:

♠ A ♥ A K 7 6 4 ♦ K J 10 6 ♣ K J 7

Answer: Three diamonds. There are slightly less than five honor tricks, but the support for clubs compensates for this.

Pill Box Hat Can Be Worn for Dress or for Sports

By Ellen Bruce.

HATS this fall seem to scale the heights or plumb the depths, depending upon the occasion or the individual type. One thing is certain, however, that feathers prevail. In sport hats angora embroidery accents are used both for town and country. Either feathers, fur tips, or accents of angora are effective in the pillbox silhouettes. The crocheted pill box hat illustrated today may be worn for dress when done in dark rich crêpe yarns, chenille, or fine sutach braid; in a tweed mixture or in solid colors it is good for sportwear, a scotch fingering or a synthetic fibre wool being used. Single and double crochet are the stiches, in combination with a simple unnamed trick stitch. It doesn't take any time to crochet this bonnet and three or four may be made from odds and ends of yarn in the scrap bag to match or contrast with one's various ensembles.

If you wish instructions for crocheting the pillbox hat illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

Cantor Marks 25 Years of Theater Work

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—"Hello, Rosalind," shouted a little popeyed guy.

We'd been blundering around trying to find the entrance to a studio. We'd gone up a fire escape and down a freight delivery ramp, when a metal door in a wall opened, down came a gangplank, and the aforementioned fellow greeted us with "Hello."

What a relief! It was Eddie Cantor.

He came bustling up, took us by the hand to lead us through the unaccustomed darkness of the stage wings and down a little stair to a seat, and there we were watching Eddie Cantor enjoying himself.

It was fine to find Eddie so easily, for this story is going to be about him.

There's a big splurge being put on about Cantor's twenty-fifth anniversary of his first stage job. A lot of folks organized a celebration in honor of the occasion. They wanted to accord him recognition for his public service work with the entertainment field and for benefits in which Cantor appeared for worthy causes.

What an amazing gap stretches between the present of this man, thus honored, and his underprivileged boyhood in the New York slums, where at 14, an orphan, he refused to be dependent on the meager earnings of his grandmother and started out to make his own living.

After the rehersal ten persons stop Cantor on the way out of the theater. He answers them all. In the alleyway leading to the street autograph hounds await. Eddie signs for all of them quickly, with a friendly word, and hands us into the waiting car. He asks about our family, about our work, talks about the fun it was several years back when we helped him be guest of honor at a navy ball in San Diego on his return from New York.

"How's the baby daughter that sang 'The Lone Cowboy' at dinner on the boat that night?" we ask.

"She's fine; 10 years old now." We both sigh; time passes.

Eddie is thrilled; he's going to meet a doctor who is famous for his community health work. He tells us all the things this man has done. "Have you ever heard of him?" he asked. "No," we answer. "But you know that doesn't mean anything."

"The point is," says Eddie, "that here this man is, whose good work will influence the lives of people for untold generations; we hardly know his name. Yet the names of men who are the moving spirits behind the massacres going on in Europe and the orient are on every one's tongue." That reflection is typical of Cantor, the popeyed comic.

"Yes," you may say, "that's just fine for Cantor to have big thoughts; they don't cost him anything. He's rolling in money and making more all the time. He could step into a show on Broadway tomorrow—he has just finished making a super film, with more ahead to do."

Yes, Cantor is sitting pretty today. Time was when he wasn't. How did he act then about these big ideas for his fellow men and such? Let's turn back the page to the days when Cantor had just "arrived" in show business and had hit his first big success in Ziegfeld's "Follies."

A few crazy guys that felt something should be done to stop the scandalous business of girls and boys in show business being "dumped" any place in the world when a show went broke on tour had been busy agitating for the formation of Actors' Equity association.

Cantor, who had been all through the starvation and heartbreak that go with breaking into show business, was wholeheartedly behind it. He worked so hard at this that he incurred the enmity of Flo Ziegfeld and lost his job and the chance to go into his first musical comedy. Eddie just kept plugging for Equity and got his musical comedy two years later anyway. Ziegfeld made peace, and in 1923 Eddie was back with Flo. Who could stay sore at a guy who is so sincere?

"You know," Cantor said, "one of the boys I knew as a kid from my old neighborhood was electrocuted for that Rosenthal murder. I think that it was a kink of fate; just an accident that I wasn't at some place some time; I believe that one incident will set up a chain of incidents, and fate determines that first incident that leads to the others.

"I do believe, however, that the things I learned in the training that my Orthodox grandmother gave me influenced me profoundly, and at the age of 45 I still find that her training influences me in the deeper problems of my life. I think every child should be taken into some church even if you, as a parent, have to make up a new church to suit you. But see that your child is given some contact with spiritual forces."

Eddie doesn't sound like a funny man, does he? Well, Mark Twain was only funny on the surface, too. Behind Cantor's fun is deep seriousness. We got to talking about his recently completed film, "Ali Baba Goes to Town." "They'll tell you it's magnificent, that it's colossal, and all of those words," says Eddie. "Don't let them kid you.

"I kid the New Deal in my picture—good fun, you know. We have sitdown strikes in the harem, we have all sorts of modern things in Ali Baba's town. Some of the lines are quite funny. Mr. Zanuck thought it wiser to cut out some of our kidding; I'm sorry, because I like to go the whole way with something." We thought of his five daughters. Yes, the guy is sincere.

"Eddie," we asked him, as the chauffeur spun the car around an intersection. "Do you think any of your girls are going to be career women? Have any of them any stage talent?"

"They have an amazing talent for wearing out shoes and getting runners in silk stockings. Otherwise, and seriously, no. But say—I hear people talk about some new dancer they've seen—some horse race, something—and they say, 'Gee, it was a thrill.' And I look at them and I say, inside of Cantor, 'So you think that's a thrill, do you? You've never had a child, and you talk about a thrill! You don't know what a thrill is.'"

We get downtown; Eddie goes up to meet his famous doctor while we wait in the car; then back to Hollywood, and as Eddie hands us into our own car in the parking lot he turns to his chauffeur and says, "How about us going in and hearing Al Jolson's show?"

We laugh at him, and he says, "I like Jolson; so does anybody that understands him." We remonstrate—"No, it isn't that, but don't you ever stop? Don't you get tired of shows and stuff?"

"No," he says, "I don't need the money, you know that; it's my life. When I get tired of one thing I turn to another kind of work. I flew up to San Francisco a couple of weeks ago for a benefit; and the applause that audience gave me will keep me warm all winter just to think about it." Eddie grabs the chauffeur and in they go, Eddie turning to shout "Good-by."

Cuba commemorates the fourth century of sugar cane in the new series of stamps shown through the kindness of Dorothy M. Beck of Chicago. In this novel set of stamps the designs are split diagonally, with a view of a 16th century caravel at the upper left and a sugar industry scene at the lower right.

THE principal philatelic event of the year in Chicagoland will open on Friday evening, Oct. 29, in the La Salle hotel and continue through Saturday and Sunday, with combined shows of the Third American Philatelic congress and the annual Chicago Philatelic society exhibition. The merger of these important events will make it possible for local collectors to select the form of entertainment they desire since there will be scientific and instructive treatises on various stamp subjects in addition to the regular exhibition and stamp bourse.

Papers for this year's congress are generally in the hands of Chicagoland collectors, and that of Robert B. Gear, dealing with the local street railway postoffices, promises to be of especial interest to Chicagoans.

In its noncompetitives class the exhibition will show some of the outstanding collections in the United States. Among these are rare United States covers and "inverted center" stamps of the 1869 issue, to be shown by S. Newberry of Chicago; scarce varieties of 20th century United States stamps, with original drawings of various designs, to be shown by Max G. Johl, author of the series of hand books on 20th century United States stamps; inverted center United States revenue stamps, to be shown by Dr. Von David of Texas; rare and historical covers of the local posts of Chicago from the collection of Dr. Clarence W. Henman of Chicago, and the famous collection of the stamps of Uruguay by Paul MacGuffin of Libertyville, Ill.

In the competitive class will be found other equally interesting collections submitted by local and out-of-town collectors. Medals of the show will be in the form of ribbons with gold, silver or bronze bars, and the grand award is a silver cup donated by W. R. Anderson, local stamp and gem dealer.

The bourse is for collectors who are more interested in adding to their collections than to listening to speeches or looking at rarities and it will be open throughout the three days. The exhibition and congress banquet will be held on Saturday evening.

Full details for the remaining values of the territorial series of United States commemorative stamps have been made available. Each will be issued in a three cent value and printed in purple ink, and each will be in the usual large form arranged horizontally.

The stamp for Alaska will be offered for first day sale on Nov. 12 at Juneau, Alaska. This design will show Mount McKinley in the distance with views in the foreground symbolizing the present day developments in the territory. Covers being transmitted to Alaska for this first day service must reach Seattle, Wash., not later than Oct. 30, since the only mail for Alaska is dispatched from that port each Saturday.

The Porto Rico stamp will show a view of the old governor's palace known as "La Fortaleza." This stamp will be placed on first day sale at San Juan, P. R., on Nov. 25. To facilitate service, covers for the new Porto Rican stamps should be posted in time to reach New York by Nov. 11. Mail for that territory is dispatched from New York each Thursday and Saturday, arriving there on the following Monday and Wednesday or Thursday.

The Virgin Islands stamp will show a view of the city of Charlotte Amalie with the harbor and sugar loaf islands in the distance. The stamp will be placed on first day sale on Dec. 15, at Charlotte Amalie, V. I. Covers for this first day service should be posted to reach New York by Dec. 2. Mail for the Virgin Islands is dispatched on Thursdays and Saturdays and arrives on the islands on the following Mondays and Wednesdays or Thursdays.

The usual first day service will be accorded each stamp and collectors may send not to exceed 10 covers for each. Packages of covers should be addressed to the proper postmaster and should be accompanied by cash or postal money order to cover the exact value of the stamps to be affixed. Unused stamps must not be ordered from the first day cities but may be obtained from the Philatelic agency at Washington, D. C., or from local postoffices.

There is no airmail service between Juneau and Seattle but there is from Porto Rico and from the Virgin Islands to the United States, with a rate of 10 cents for each half ounce, and collectors desiring this service will indorse "Air Mail" on their covers and leave space for a block of four stamps. Covers endorsed "Air Mail" and prepaid with 6 cents in stamps will be returned to Seattle or New York by steamer with airmail service from that point to the destination.

Alaskan covers are due to arrive in Seattle on Nov. 18, while the Porto Rican are due on Nov. 29 and the Virgin Islands covers on Dec. 20. Airmail covers from Porto Rico are due in Miami on Nov. 25, and those from Charlotte Amalie on Dec. 16.

Pencil, Paper, Yardstick Aid in Making Drapes

IF you are planning new draperies or curtains, it's a good idea to start out with paper and pencil and a yardstick. Tape measures are likely to stretch, and a half inch mismeasurement, either too short or too long, will entirely ruin the decorative effect of the window. If you make the curtains yourself, add to the measurement of your finished curtain enough inches to cover hems at the bottom and headings at the top. Also, if you use a figured material, allow extra yardage for matching the designs.

Woman Gives $1,000,000 for Fight on Diabetes

To Get the Best Cough Medicine, Mix It at Home

Saves Good Money, No Cooking.

This famous recipe is used by millions of housewives, because there is no other way to obtain such a dependable, effective remedy for coughs that start from colds. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all, and takes but a moment. No cooking needed.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough remedy, far superior to anything you could buy ready-made, and you get four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of severe coughs, giving you double-quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the inflamed membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Child Benefits When Treated as a Grown Up

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

FIFTY-TWO times 1,250 is 65,000. And 313 times 400 is 125,200. And 65,000 plus 125,200 is 190,-200. And that's only approximate—the actual total is more like 200,000.

What is all this about? I'm figuring up the number of words that I write for this column in the course of a year, excluding, naturally, the thousands of other words that go into letters and booklets.

Now in that much writing for even one year it is possible to cover a good many angles of a good many of the things that concern parents in regard to their children. I try to make that much writing cover the time from babyhood right on through adolescence—through the age that exclaims: "Darn this curl in my hair"—brush and hair lotion applied vigorously—"I'm sick of having the girls say, 'Whereja get the beeyutiful wave, Dick?'", or begs: "Mother plee-uz, can't I have a pemanent—just look at the time I have to spend on these straight strings! Marylin and Josie both had them last summer and they looked darling on the beach! Please, mother!"

What with letters, and conversations, and observation, and being with all ages of children and youth, and my own family [I'm still accused by the occasional irate anonymous reader of being a "Miss Bevans" who can know nothing whatever about children—which does make me smile], I get a pretty good idea of what things trouble parents. And I try to meet them from day to day, in these articles.

But sometimes I wish there were a magic formula, a sort of blanket article that would cover the whole subject, for all ages. And occasionally I devise one for the Sunday paper which is planned to serve that purpose. You may remember the Parents' Primer, which was one of them.

WELL, today finds me wishing to accomplish the same thing again. What can I give parents that will act as a general guide—you know, a sort of touchstone, which they themselves can use as situations arise.

So I think and think and try to plan one motto or approach a principle that I believe is easy to apply, as well as really fundamental and here's the result.

It seems to me that one of the most truly helpful slants to get on children lies in regarding and treating them on the whole as people, not as beings apart and of another race. This may sound absurd to you, or an unnecessary admonition, but as I go along I think you'll realize that it isn't.

Let's start with a shining example of not doing this. We'll find it in the grownup who always talks down to children, who drops like an express elevator a dozen levels in mind and voice when a child is spoken to and who even talks that strange jargon known as "baby talk," which no baby ever talked! Obvious examples of what I mean are things like:

"Are you a good little girl?"

"Can I cut off one of your curls?"

"Will you give me your baby brother?"

Ad infinitum.

Children of any age resent such things and react by being shy or self-conscious, or by acting up, or even being what we label impudent.

But while they resent this, children respond at once, and quite delightfully sometimes, to being treated as regular people with minds and good sense.

IT'S not to those outside the family but to those grownups within it that I want to recommend treating children as if they were people—what we think of as people, which to some readers means, I suppose, as if they were grown up.

When I say this I mean it in a sense. We can't treat children of all ages literally as if they were grown up, but we can treat them with the same sort of attitude.

And you know what that is—it's a combination, first and most important of respect for that person as a person; then with consideration for him; courtesy, a regard for his rights, a tolerance for his point of view, a readiness to give him credit for intelligence and good sense, and a willingness to make clear to him our viewpoint and our reasons for the things we do.

Do you think this is far fetched, even ridiculous and impractical? It isn't, and there are lots of mothers, and nurses and teachers, who are treating children as if they were people and being very successful with them.

But perhaps you think this idea is all right for teen age boys and girls but not for little children. No, it works all along the line, but like all principles it needs to be applied with judgment. Let's see how.

WHEN people ask you a question, you think it's worthy of an answer. Yet how many parents think children's questions are idle or silly and of no importance. "I don't know," "Don't bother me," or an offhand thoughtless reply is frequently the order of the day when a child asks anything, from "Where did I come from, mommy?" and "Why has kitty got whiskers?" to "Why do Uncle Bill's ears stick out?" or "Why do little children have to go to bed early and mothers and fathers don't?"

Questions blocked, block just that much a child's mental development too.

Again, in applying the idea to younger children, there's the matter of courtesy. Do you order grown people in your home around, do you interrupt what they're saying, do you make them conspicuous for every table mishap they may have? Yet how many parents do this with children. Children of any age deserve to be treated as people where the idea of courtesy enters in, and with consideration, as for instance in regard to being interrupted when they are absorbed in work or play.

And I've already pointed out in this column how parents can practically guarantee themselves no meal-time problems if they'll use the same approach with their child that they do with people [grownups]. Treating them as people you also expect them to act like people, and they do.

I won't try to go into this idea any further where little children are concerned but I'm sure you see now what I mean. When your baby is born a real little person has come into your home and your life and you can begin early to think of him as one and treat him as one.

ONE thing that's good about this angle is that there's a continuity about it, it runs along, working beautifully right through your lives and the children's. But when your beloved little girl becomes your rounding-out, charming, teen-age daughter and your dear small boy becomes your tall, deep voiced, fast maturing son—then's when treating your children like people is so strikingly effective, especially if you're clever enough to speed up the process to match their leaps and bounds toward independence.

But we're out of space, so some of the ways in which this attitude of treating your adolescent sons and daughters as people works out, will be talked of in tomorrow's article.

The principle talked of today is applied in our leaflet "How Not To Say Don't Touch." There is also the booklet, "Understanding The Adolescent." Each will be sent out on receipt of a large, 3-cent stamped envelope. Address Mrs. Bevans, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Bevans' column also appears in The Tribune on Monday and every other week day.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

WHEN college girls come home from school for their Thanksgiving holiday, fond and loving mothers will have a brand new frock waiting to be packed into campus bound trunks. This article today is directed to mothers and the frock illustrated is our idea of a dress every co-ed will love. So get busy with the needles and surprise your daughters.

One of the very nicest materials for this dress is a woolen plaid. It's gay, youthful, and girlishly sophisticated. The collar on my own frock is white pique, detachable, of course, for jiffy laundering. The line of the frock is unbroken except for a narrow, tailored, lether belt. I know your smart offspring will love the pocket detail, the two little flaps. The sleeves are puffed at the shoulders and gradually become snugly fitted, until they hug the wrists. The dress buttons smartly all the way down the back. You may use novelty buttons or some covered with the fabric of the dress. Either way is attractive.

That's all there is to the frock, but all of its intrinsic chic is found in its figure hugging lines. It's styled scrupulously to avoid the "dumpy" appearance and to flatter the pretty silhouettes of college age girls. If you're in business you will like this model, too, and it is simple enough to meet the censorious eyes of even the most finicky employer. If you're going to wear the model in an office, it might be wise to avoid very gay plaids. Gray, black, and subtle colors are best, although a toned down plaid might get by if you know your boss is broadminded.

Before Washing Knit Suits Test Sample of Wool

SINCE knitted suits and sweaters are so much the vogue, the fine art of washing and blocking them is an art worth mastering!

Before attempting washing, however, test a sample of the wool in lukewarm water for four minutes to see that the color doesn't run. If you have no sample, select a part of the garment which is inconspicuous and test that. Don't worry if the water is only slightly discolored. If the color runs you will have to work fast in the washing!

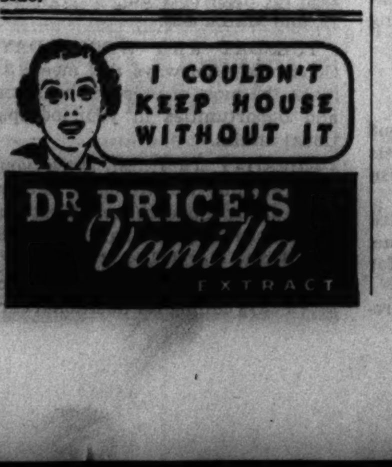
Next pin a sheet to a firm pad and lay your garment on the sheet, tracing out an accurate outline of the garment to be washed.

Launder knitted garment in soapy, lukewarm water, squeezing very gently, and then rinse in lukewarm water three or four times. Don't wring out. Squeeze out suds and water.

After this you are ready to shape garment to the outline. Do this gently, too, and then fasten securely with pins which won't rust.

To hasten the drying lay garment on a Turkish towel, put another towel on top of it, roll up, and then knead as if you were kneading bread.

To give your garment a professional look and a nice finish you can finally lay a dampened cloth on the wrong side and, with a moderately warm iron, let the steam rise by lifting iron from place to place. If your knitted garment has a strongly ribbed design, you can give it a final very light pressing with iron on the right side.



Modern Hams Are Marvels of Tenderness

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune.]

THE old way to prepare a ham in "Sunday go to meetin' style" was to soak it over night and then to boil it before it went into the oven with the spices and brown sugar. Sometimes the ham was as tender as the family liked it, and sometimes it wasn't.

The new way to prepare ham is much simpler and the results are sure, because today's ham has been scientifically cured, eliminating the necessity of soaking out excess salt. Today's ham has a superior flavor and is much more tender than grandmother ever thought it could be. Some hams come ready cooked and need only reheating. Some are canned, with bone and excess fat removed. Others have been processed to make them especially tender, and all of them, with the exception of the home cured or southern cured hams, are ready to bake with no preliminaries.

I AM very partial to the canned hams, for they may be prepared in less than an hour, and there isn't a smidgin' of waste to them. They are also very tender and sweet.

To prepare a canned ham for the oven is simple. One merely slashes the fat side in a diamond pattern, rubs the ham with brown sugar if desired, and bakes it for forty-five minutes or so in a moderate oven. No temperature above 350 degrees is suitable for any kind of ham, or for any other meat, for that matter.

A whole ham, if it is cooked, needs only to be heated through in a moderate oven. An uncooked ham will take longer, somewhere between twenty-five and thirty minutes to the pound. The rind usually is removed after the ham has baked for a while, after which the fat may be slashed and any garnish added.

There are dozens of sauces to pour over ham during the baking, and there are dozens of ways in which to decorate the meat. Now that cranberries are plentiful, a cranberry sauce may be poured over the ham during the last part of the baking period and then served as an accompaniment. Fruit juices, fruit juice combinations, cider, raisin sauce, and honey are other possibilities. Usually the ham is basted rather frequently with the sauce in the baking. Red or white wine may be used, too, if desired.

THESE are two favorite ways of treating ham. The first method is for a whole ham, the second for a slice:

FESTIVE HAM.

Place the whole ham, rind left on, upon a rack in an open roasting pan. Bake at 325 to 350 degrees, adding no water, allowing twenty-five minutes per pound. About forty-five minutes before the calculated time for the completed baking, remove the ham from the oven and cut off all the rind except a small collar around the shank. Slash the fat across the top to make a diamond pattern and cover the ham with a sauce of pineapple juice and honey, using one quart of fruit juice and two cups of honey for a ten pound ham. Return to the oven to finish baking and baste frequently with the sauce. The diamond shapes on the ham surface may be studded with halves of maraschino cherries for serving. This adds to the attractiveness of the ham.

Grape juice, orange juice, or a combination of juices may be used in this recipe in the same manner.

HAM BAKED IN CIDER.

Have ham sliced 1½ to 2 inches thick. Trim off most of the fat. Place slice in roasting pan and cover with sweet cider. Add three or four whole cloves and one cup of seedless raisins. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees] for about 1½ hours, or until the ham is tender. Remove to a hot platter and thicken cider in which ham was cooked with flour smoothed in cold water. Serve the cider sauce with the ham. Cinnamon apples may be arranged around the ham on the platter. They should be halved or sliced.

Miss Meade contributes daily to the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune, guiding housewives to the best knowledge of cookery and hostessing.

Jumper for a Six Year Old Miss Is Ideal for School

By Jean Macdonald.

IT is needless to say that children's hand-knitted garments are no longer classed as stepchildren in the knitting field. Their charm appeals as much to parent as to the child. The women love to knit them and children love to wear them. During winter school days these outfits are ideal for wear in classrooms especially for the young miss of six years of age who is just starting to school. The jumper ensemble for a six year old girl illustrated today is made of soft white wool and a lightweight blue tweed mixture with red and yellow rayon nubs. The sweater may be easily laundered and requires no pressing if washed in the right way. The skirt is knitted in a combination knit and purl, to create the effect of a plaited skirt. The band at the waist is made separately and joined to the skirt to insure a snug fit, while the jumper bands, which are crossed in the back, are made in single crochet. Care must be given to the decreases in the skirt so that they are made to balance, otherwise the flair of the plaited skirt will be lost and it will not hang properly. Fine wools are always recommended for children's garments as they are not so apt to irritate a child's tender skin.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for knitting the jumper ensemble for a six year old girl illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

A LONG handled fork is most convenient to use for "raking" foods from the hot coals of the camp fire. Fasten a long handled kitchen fork to a yard stick, broom handle or straight stout stick.

Advise Women to Take Stock of Selves Annually

REALIZATION that a good many women whom you think of as being beauties really are not should inspire you to figure out just what they have, what they do. The chances are ten to one that every woman who seems beautiful has a sparkling personality, an animated face, and a fairly nice disposition.

The surprising fact is that more women, knowing this, do not trouble to wake up and live and therefore be lovelier to look at.

If you aren't pleased with yourself or feel drab and look it, how about a bit of self-analysis? Sit alone in a room and answer a few questions out loud.

What have I done during the last six months that was really fun, made me laugh heartily? Did any books or articles I read actually stimulate my thinking, make me curious to know more about the subject? What did I do to spoil my friendly relationship with Mrs. So-and-So? Do I listen when others speak or do I want to do all the talking myself?

Solemn thought about personal appearance is in order every now and then. If you look drab you probably feel dull. Ask yourself these questions, too:

Whatever happened to my hairbrush and why don't I use it every night? Couldn't I walk half a mile and do three simple stretching and limbering exercises a day if I wanted to? Why have I worn my hair the same way for ten years? Are my hands rough because of the work I do or because I won't bother to oil or cream them regularly?

This game can go on an entire evening, and if played at least once a year will do more to improve you, mentally and physically, than you think.

Annual Check on Home May Prevent Serious Disaster

IT is more often than not a short cut from a bad house to a good house, and an annual checkup on our home may reveal some startlingly simple ways by which we can help ourselves to more comfort.

We may discover that a little paint on the cellar walls will give the children a playroom below stairs and remove the upstairs congestion. . . . that play space near a kitchen window will save a mother much worry and many steps . . . that an easy chair under a good light in some quiet corner will keep the father's disposition in its original cheerful state . . . and that an inclosed front vestibule for winter wraps and winter paraphernalia will prove a boon to the entire family.

If a kitchen is too large, that's no liability! There are numerous ways of using the extra space. You can partition part of it for a dining alcove or use it unpartitioned for a breakfast corner. You may want to enlarge the dining room, or include a pantry in your scheme of things, or again some of its space, wisely utilized, may prove valuable as an accessory room for laundry equipment, or even house a desk and chair and pose as a general utility household office.

DISCOVERED! A Vanishing Lotion that Goes to Work FASTER!

WHEN HANDS ARE RED, ROUGH OR CHAPPED

NOW! A hand lotion that goes to work faster than most lotions—on hands that are chapped and rough! A lotion that is really non-sticky and quick-drying—that VANISHES almost instantly as soon as it's applied!

This new creation—which cost Bauer & Black over $250,000 to perfect—is now sold in drug and department stores under the trade name: Velure! It is different in conception—different in formula and consistency from any lotion you've probably known heretofore.

One of its most remarkable characteristics is its self-penetrating action that takes place before your very eyes. You see it sink in automatically—penetrate the microscopic skin crevices and crannies where it goes to work at once. No hard rubbing to "work it in" as with thick lotions. No sticky residue to soil your gloves or clothes.

But that's not all. For Velure also embodies properties that help to conserve natural skin-softening oils. Thus lightening the excessive burden on skin glands that makes hands prematurely coarse and "old."

Thus, when you use Velure, you are not only combating roughness, redness and chapping. You are also helping Nature to maintain soft, smooth hands in one of the most effective ways yet developed by scientific research.

Also—Velure goes 3 times as far as old-fashioned, thick-type lotions. You use only ⅓ as much. So it's a grand money-saver, too.

TRY VELURE FREE—For a free, generous trial bottle of this new, faster-acting lotion, send your name and address to: Bauer & Black, Dept. A, 2501 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. See for yourself how surprisingly different it is.

MAJESTY'S RANCHO

Lance Sidway and Madge Clash, but the Cowboy Astounds Stewart as to the Mystery of the Missing Cattle

THE STORY TO DATE

● Lance Sidway, about to leave Hollywood with his horse, Umpqua, to look for a cowboy's job, rescues a blonde co-ed from threatened arrest. Next afternoon Lance waits to meet the girl, whom he knows only as Madge, but changes his mind when he overhears her talking to Honey Bee Uhl, a gangster, who is pressing an old flirtation on the girl. Lance rides Umpqua to Douglas, Ariz., where, short of funds, he stops to look for work. At a service station on the highway Lance is hailed by a man in a car, whom he recognizes as Uhl. Hoping to get a line on the gangster, Lance agrees to drive an empty covered truck to Tucson for Uhl. He suspects Uhl is using trucks to transport stolen cattle. His job finished, Lance continues on to New Mexico and meets Ren Starr, who owns a garage and who gives Lance a letter to Gene Stewart, owner of Majesty's Rancho. Lance doesn't dream that the Madge he met in Hollywood is Gene Stewart's daughter. He departs for the ranch just as Gene Stewart and his wife, Madeline, receive word that Madge is on her way home, having been expelled from college. Depression and cattle thieves have brought Gene Stewart to the verge of ruin. Nels, an old-time Texan, who runs a store on the ranch, suggests that Gene throw in with Danny Mains, who has also suffered cattle losses. Danny has a Mexican wife and a pretty daughter, Bonita. Lance arrives at the ranch and Gene Stewart has just hired him when Madge appears.

MADGE touched Lance's arm and turned him toward Gene, who had leaned against a post, taking it all in.

"Dad, isn't it just darling?" said Madge. "This is my hero—the young man whom I told you and Mom about—who rescued me at the campus riot. Lance Sidway—my father, Gene Stewart."

"Madge, we haven't been introduced, but we've met," replied Gene, genially, and he eyed Lance as if he had been taken in a bit.

"Of course. How silly of me! He just rode in and you . . ."

"I gave him a job," interposed Gene.

"What? To ride for you! He is a fast worker. . . . Lance Sidway, I don't know just what to make of you."

"That goes for me, too," replied Gene, with a smile which softened the doubt.

"Mr. Stewart, I am on the spot," burst out Sidway. "I told you I'd never met your daughter—never heard of her till I met Starr. How could I guess she was that co-ed? I did meet her—as she told you. . . . I'm innocent of . . ."

"Sidway, don't take it so hard," went on Gene, kindly. "I was young once. It didn't turn out just as you planned. But I'd have liked you better if you'd told me. . . ."

"I did not lie to you," declared the cowboy, with such vehemence that Gene began to feel sorry for him. Then Madge claimed Sidway's attention.

"I get you, Mr. Lance Sidway. But I've been kidded by experts," she said, with laughing eyes. She liked him. She was pleased with his subterfuge.

"Yeah? You get what?" he demanded bluntly, and it appeared that his awkwardness was vanishing.

"What is so obvious."

"Miss Stewart, it may look obvious that I knew who you were—that I deliberately rode out here because of you. But it is not true."

"O, so you are ashamed to be caught?" she taunted. "You're a pretty smooth actor, cowboy, but you can't fool little Madge."

"You may be pretty smart but you're wrong this time," he retorted, and there was plainly resentment in his tone.

"Let's scrap it," she returned, without the archness. And at that moment Nels, and the lad leading Sidway's horse, came around the corner.

"Nels, shake hands with Lance Sidway," interposed Gene, glad to relieve the growing strain between the young couple. "He hails from Oregon. And I've just given him a job."

"Howdy," drawled Nels, and shook hands with the flustered lad. Gene was of the opinion that Sidway had no conception how he was being looked over by the keenest eyes on the range. Gene's conclusion was that the cowboy showed up favorably in a most trying situation. When Madge saw the black horse again, her swift reversal of mood eased the situation. Like a true range rider she walked around the black, all eyes, placing a careful yet confident hand on him, and never saying a word until she had made a second circuit.

"Nels!" she importuned, as if wanting him to refute her judgment.

"Wal, I'm shore sorry, lass," drawled Nels. "He's a grand hawse. He's got Cedar beat all holler."

"Traitor!" she flashed, her eyes blazing purple fire at Nels. "You're teasing me. Nels darling, you don't mean that?"

"Wal, mebbe I'm exaggeratin some. But see heah, Majesty, even if you been away from the range so long you know a great hawse when you see him."

"I'm afraid I do. Mr. Sidway, will you please let me get on him?" Her query to the cowboy was tinged with slight sarcasm, yet her desire was deeply sincere.

"Of course—if you wish. The stirrups will be long."

MADGE swung gracefully up into the saddle and Nels beat the cowboy to her side. Presently the stirrups were laced up to fit Madge and she walked Umpqua across the green square, trotted him up the lane a few hundred yards, paced him a little, and loped him back. What a picture the black horse and the golden haired girl made!

Madge sat the saddle as if reluctant to get off, while she patted the arched glossy neck. She was flushed of face. Her eyes were soft, glowing. At that moment Gene experienced the old fullness of love for her in his heart. She was Madeline's daughter, but she was a western girl. Presently she sat up in the saddle, the glamorous spell vanished, and she faced the three men coolly. Gene imagined he could read her mind.

"His trot does not equal Cedar's, but his pace and lope beat that of any horse I ever rode."

"Wal, lass, thet's strong praise from you," declared Nels. "Justified I reckon."

"It seems superfluous to ask—can he run—is he fast?" asked Madge, tensely.

"He can beat your Cedar or any other nag you own."

"That remains to be seen, cowboy," returned Madge, darkly.

"What's more," went on Sidway, "he's the best cowboy horse ever bred in Oregon."

"Now yore talkin'," said Nels. "An Arab is no good to us riders, onless he's a cow-hawse."

"Nels, Umpqua can run over rocks as if they were level ground."

"I seen that from his hoofs."

Madge slipped slowly out of the saddle, facing Sidway: "No need to ask how you love Umpqua," she said, with a softness rounding the turn of her words. "You won't take it amiss if I—almost insult you?"

Sidway stared at her, and then with something of a gallant gesture he repudiated any possibility of her doing that.

"What value do you place on Umpqua?" she launched, suddenly keenly vibrant.

"Value! None, Miss Stewart."

"Every horse has a value. Tell me."

"Diamonds, rubies, gold!"

"Swell! I like you the better for that. Do you know that you could sell him for five thousand dollars?"

"Humph. A movie star offered me that," returned the cowboy, contemptuously.

"Yeah? I'll give you six thousand for Umpqua."

"No!"

"Seven thousand."

"No!"

"Eight thousand."

"No!"

"Ten thousand."

Sidway's flushed face turned pale, either with anger or some other emotion.

"Miss Stewart, don't you know that money can't buy everything?" he queried, with dignity. "Umpqua is all I own in the world. He has saved my life twice. I love him. We raised him from a colt, and all of us loved him."

"I know I'm rotten," she cried, as if forced. "But no matter. I love him, too."

"That's swell. I'm glad you do. But—yo' can't buy him."

"I always have what I want," she flashed, imperiously.

"You probably have had. But I'm sorry to disappoint you now."

"Be reasonable." Madge stamped her booted foot until her spur jingled sharply. Tears of vexation and disappointment burned out of her big eyes and they glowed and dilated like mystic balls. "You admit you're broke. I offer you a small fortune. You can get a start here on the range. Dad and Nels will help you. I will. You can still go on loving Umpqua. You may ride him—sometimes. You can make me happy. Please, Mr. Lance Sidway."

THE cowboy gazed at her, listened to her eloquent appeal as if fascinated by something beside and beyond her offer.

"Really, Miss Stewart," he said, finally, "you may be Gene Stewart's daughter, born on this wonderful range, but you don't know cowboys."

Madge betrayed that she could not gainsay that, and it seemed a struggle went on in her between realization and selfishness. The latter evidently conquered. Anger at herself for being so little or at him for frustrating her desire burned out that momentary softness.

"You won't sell him?" she queried.

"I told you—no."

"Mr. Sidway, I can't have you riding around here on a finer horse than—a horse that I want."

"That'll be just too bad," returned the cowboy, in a tone which brought a hue to her cheeks that matched the carmine on her lips.

"You appear to be rather dense. Do I have to tell you I will not have you on this ranch?"

"You don't have to tell me anything. Your father hired me and he'll have to fire me."

She looked at Gene with great luminous eyes. "Dad!"

"Madge, you're unreasonable," replied Gene, coolly, smiling upon her. "I need riders badly. Sidway has offered to ride for me at a wage I am ashamed to take advantage of. I couldn't discharge him just because he refuses to sell you his horse. Could I, Nels?"

Nels showed plainly that he was between the devil and the deep sea. Madge had been his especial joy and treasure all her life, as Gene well knew, and he had always spoiled her. Gene enjoyed his old cowman's extreme discomfiture, but knew he would extract himself somehow.

"Majesty, I shore know how you feel aboot this hawse," he began, in his slow drawl. "But, lass, you're bound to respect Sidway for his feelin's. I reckon you wouldn't be playin' the game if you fired him. Shore I never heahed of you bein' unfair. You used to give hawses to cowboys. An' I reckon, if yore happiness actooly depends on ownin' Umpqua, wal, in the nature of things on the range, you know, he'll jest naturally drift yore way."

The persuasive cool voice of the old cattleman, the significant content of his last words, spread oil upon the troubled waters.

"Very well, Mr. Sidway, you stay," said Madge, loftily. "I'm sorry if I was unfair, but I will have that horse."

"Thank you, Miss Stewart. But I do not want to remain under false pretenses. You will not have Umpqua."

"I accept your challenge. If you don't show yellow and ride off—we'll see." Then she smiled upon him without malice or resentment and wheeled up the path.

"Hey, Madge, you're forgetting your car," called Gene. "What'll we do with it?"

She turned to call back in a sweet, high-pitched voice: "Mr. Lance Sidway can use it to bed down his darling Umpqua." Then she was gone into the foliage.

"Whoopee!" sighed Gene, and Nels came back with: "Dog-gone, old pard! Seems like old times when you fust came to Majesty's Rancho, before thet lass was borned."

Sidway had been lengthening his stirrups with swift hands. Presently he turned with pale face and hazel eyes shadowed.

"I'll be on my way. Thank you, Gene Stewart," he said.

"Hold on, Sidway. You wouldn't let my daughter's taunt . . ."

"No, it's not that, altogether. I know you didn't believe me—that I didn't come here on—on Miss Stewart's account. And under the circumstances I don't want to stay."

"No, I didn't believe you," replied Gene, seriously, searching the troubled face.

"See heah, cowboy," interposed Nels, descending from the porch with clinking slow steps. "Don't ride off hot-haided. Air you on the level? You didn't know this was Majesty's Rancho an' thet the lass you done a favor for in Los Angeles was Madge Stewart?"

"Nels, I did not," replied Sidway, forcibly.

After a keen scrutiny of Sidway's face the old cowman turned to Gene: "Boss, he's tellin' the truth. Don't let him go."

"Hanged if I don't believe it myself."

"Stewart, I swear that I am on the level. I didn't know. It was just an infernal coincidence," rejoined Sidway, huskily.

"Okay then. Let's shake on it. Maybe your infernal coincidence will turn out well for me and this ranch problem. I've a hunch it will."

Sidway appeared too poignantly affected to voice his manifest relief and gladness. Gene's conviction was that the young man felt too strongly for the mere misunderstanding. There was more behind it. Gene liked this cowboy, and that Nels did also added a good deal of satisfaction.

"What'd you say yore fust name was?" drawled Nels.

"Lance. It's screwy, I know. Bad as Umpqua."

"Not so orful bad. Gene, yore supper bell has rung. I'll look after Lance. He can hev supper with me, an' the bunk room next to mine. Whar'll I hev José put his hawse?"

"Not in the pasture tonight. Better in the barn. Say, wouldn't it be funny if we could bed him down in Madge's car?"

"Not so damn funny in the mawnin'."

Dusk was settling under the pines when Gene mounted the slope to the house. A ruddy glow faded over the peaks in the west. Coyotes were wailing somewhere low down. Plodding up the slow ascent, Gene was revolving in mind the events of the day. He had to side with the cowboy against Madge. She was a spoiled girl. That came out when she could not have her own way. He recalled the tone of her voice, her imperious look, her temper, and he shook his head sadly. But what could have been expected of the girl, their only daughter, adored and petted, born with a gold spoon in her mouth, and left a million when she was 15? But Gene reflected that despite these faults she seemed to be irresistible. If only one or more of his own besetting sins did not crop up in her! The cowboy Lance was in love with her—there was no doubt about that, even if he had not found it out yet. Gene, remembering Madge's wilfulness and that she had always had what she wanted, was heartily glad that Sidway had been strong enough to brook her will. He had good stuff in him, that lad. Gene's yerning for a son, long buried, had a rebirth. If Lance Sidway turned out as fine as he promised he would come somewhere near the ideal Gene had dreamed of.

By the time Gene had washed and changed, the second supper bell rang. He found Madeline and Madge waiting. The girl wore white, some clinging soft stuff that made Gene catch his breath. He thought of what little chance he had or Sidway or Nels, or any man, to resist this lovely and bewildering creature. Not a trace of the recent mood showed on her face.

" . . . and he wouldn't part with Umpqua, the sap!" she was saying to her mother. And as Gene entered she extended a hand to him with a radiant smile. "Dad, I'm telling Mom about my hero and his wonderful horse. What a liar he is! He found out who I am and where I lived. I can't get what possessed him to deny that. He needn't. It was a clever stunt. Intrigued me. After I fell so nard for him that day he rescued me! Well, I fell for his horse a thousand times harder. O, Mom, what a beautiful horse! Has it all over Cedar and Range and Bellefontaine—all of them. I wanted Umpqua so badly that I could have murdered that cowboy. At first I had a kick out of it. Never occurred to me that I couldn't buy the black. But it turned out that I couldn't. Then I lost my temper. I'm afraid I reverted to feline type with claws out. Did Mr. Sidway jar me? I'm constrained to admit that he did. Made me feel selfish, mean, rotten. Which I was. But I'd do worse to get that horse. And all the time I was so mad I had a sneaking respect for Lance, though I hated him. He's just swell, Mom. Don't you agree, Dad?"

"Rather cottoned to him myself," replied Gene to this long monolog.

"So did Nels, the traitor," she retorted.

"I am indeed interested to meet this paragon among cowboys. And see his Umpqua," said Madeline, with a smile.

"Mom darling!" expostulated Madge, "falling for Mr. Stewart doesn't mean a thing in the world. I've done that nineteen times this last semester. But will I give that big boy a ride! It'll be a kick. And I'll have that horse if—if——"

"Well, if what, my girl?" taunted Gene.

"If I have to marry Sidway!"

Madeline neither reproved her nor showed surprise, but she remarked that cowboys must have vastly more than darling horses to be eligible for marriage.

"But I could divorce him next day," flashed this bewildering daughter, fresh from college.

NEXT morning Gene was out early enough to catch Nels and Sidway at a sunrise breakfast.

"Wal, look who's heah," drawled the old cowman. "Mawnin', Gene. You ain't got oot this early for years."

"Neither have you, old timer," returned Gene jocularly. "Shall we put it down to our lately acquired cowboy, Mr. Sidway?"

"You shore can. The son of a gun kept me up till 11 o'clock tellin' stories, an' then, by thunder, he rustled me oot before sunup."

Manifestly Nels and the newcomer had gotten along famously. Sidway appeared fresh and eager, and having donned his old outfit, he looked a lithe and striking rider.

"Don't call me Mr. Stewart," Gene replied to his greeting. "I'm Gene, or boss, or Stewart."

"Okay, boss. I sure appreciate falling in with you. And I'm asking if I may have the day on my own."

"On your own? What do you mean?" inquired Gene, puzzled.

"If you give me the day I'm pretty sure I can tell you where your cattle have been rustled lately."

"Gene, he made some such crack as thet to me," drawled Nels. "Jest young hot blood. But I don't know."

"Sidway, are you hinting that you can find out what Nels and I and Danny Mains couldn't?"

"No, I'm not hinting. I'm telling you," replied the cowboy, with an engaging smile.

"You don't lack nerve," returned Gene, shortly.

"Boss, I don't mean to be fresh. I just think you men have been hunting for rustlers in an old-fashioned way."

"Old-fashioned?" echoed Gene, while Nels ha-haed vociferously.

"Listen, young man, rustling is rustling. Cattle don't fly. They have to be driven. On their hoofs. And hoofs leave tracks."

"Only so far. I'll bet you tracked yours as far as a macadamized road, and no farther."

"Yes, that's true. Or I should say, José and Manuel tracked them."

"Then what?"

"Wal," interposed Nels, "them two riders split an' rode east an' west fer twenty odd miles, an' never found the place where them hoof tracks left thet highway."

"Swell!" ejaculated Sidway, clapping his hands. "That's exactly what I wanted to be sure of. Saves me the trouble."

"Of what?"

"Bothering with tracks on the highway. They never left the highway short of Douglas or Tucson."

"Listen, son," returned Nels, his drawl more pronounced than ever, and very patient. "Shore you're talkin' to a couple of old cowmen, oot of date, an' I reckon pretty dumb, as you youngsters say. Will you talk a language we know? These heah modern days air hell on speed, shore, but cattle cain't be drove on a cement road fer hundreds of miles."

"Sure they can. It's a cinch. Your cattle were so driven."

"Dog-gone!" complained Nels, turning to Gene, "an' I was kinda takin' to this lad."

"Nels, he's got something on us," declared Gene. "See here, Lance, just how were my cattle driven along the highway?"

"Simple as A B C—in trucks."

"Trucks!" burst out Gene, incredulously.

Nels swore, and dropped one of his galvanized utensils on the floor. "Gene, it's shore simple. But we'd never guess such two-bit rustlin' of twenty or fifty-odd haid would be done thet way."

"Well, I'll be damned. Sidway, how'd you find that out?" added Gene.

"I've seen inside one of these cattle trucks. Fact is, I drove one of them," explained the young man.

"Yes? Wal, I reckon you'll be tellin' us next you're one of these new fangled rustlers," drawled Nels, dryly.

"I might have been without knowing, if the truck had been loaded. . . . On the way over here to New Mexico I went broke at Douglas. Hung around for any kind of a job. Well, it came along, and it was to drive a big canvas covered truck to Tucson. I was paid a hundred bucks and told to expect to be held up somewhere along the road. I was held up all right, a little ways out of Tucson, by a gang who expected just what I'd figured out—that the truck was full of booze. But it wasn't—and were they burned up? These hijackers corroborated my suspicions. . . . All right now. To come short with it, by figuring, and asking questions I found out that a string of trucks go through Douglas east about once in six weeks. Presumably they go east loaded with bootleg liquor and come back west loaded with bought or stolen cattle. My hunch is that this gang used to buy cattle for a blind to their real operations, but finally turned to rustling. Just easy money! . . . On the other hand it may be that only one of the trucks is loaded with booze, and possibly it may come west, along with the cattle. We can safely gamble, however, on this—that your cattle have been stolen in this manner."

"Wal, what air we comin' to?" ejaculated Nels, scratching his white head. "Gene, shore we can look forward to be robbed by airplanes next."

"Fake rustling, likely," added Gene. "What'd the money for a few cattle mean to these bootleggers?"

"Nothing to the big shots," rejoined Sidway. "I've had a hunch that maybe the drivers of these trucks are grabbing a little money on their own hook. What I want to find out now is who drives the cattle to the highway. That'd have to be done on horses. . . . Boss, give me some idea where these last cattle tracks were made. I'll ride out and see if I can pick up some horse tracks. If I do I'll measure them, make sure I'll know them again, and then ride all over this darned range."

"Fork your horse and hit—— No, let Umpqua rest. Tell José to saddle Range for you."

"I'm on my way," replied the cowboy, and he strode out of Nels' bunkhouse. Presently he passed off the porch carrying his saddle and accessories.

NELS went on wiping his utensils. Presently Gene said, "What do you know about that?"

"Gene, that feller proves how much old time cowboys like us want to figger on new angles. Since the war, you know, we've jest been goin' back. Smart, this boy Sidway. If we only had Ren oot here now!"

"Yes. We know Ren Starr," replied Gene, ponderingly.

"Gene, did you ever know me to be fooled aboot a cowboy?"

"You mean his being straight? . . . I can't remember one, Nels."

"Wal, if this Oregon lad can ride an' shoot he'll be a gawdsend to you."

After that encomium from the old cattleman Gene felt himself convinced. He talked a while longer with Nels, went to the store with him, and presently set about an inspection tour of the barns and sheds and corrals, the reservoir, the lake, the irrigation ditches, the fences, and all pertaining to the ranch. He had divined that Madge would be coming to him presently, and he wanted to be well posted. This survey was a melancholy task. He saw now why for years he had neglected it. In some degree verdure around the water hid the rack and ruin of the wooden structures. Those built of adobe were also damaged. And, in fact, repairs were badly needed everywhere.

Upon returning to the store Gene found Madge there with Nels. She wore overalls, high top boots, and spurs, and a blue sweater with red scarf. The mere sight of her flushed and disheveled, and clad as she was, cnased away Gene's gloom.

"Mawnin,' Dad," she drawled. "I caught Nels drinking red likker."

"She did, at thet," admitted Nels, ruefully. "An' I'm darned if she didn't ask me for some."

That was a touchy point with Gene, which he passed by. "How'd you find your horses?" he asked.

"Cedar wild as a March hare. Bellefontaine as sweet as ever. Range was gone, and I learned from José that our new cowhand took him," returned Madge, and the dangerous tone of the last words were not lost upon Gene. He hastened to explain that he had told Sidway to saddle Range.

"O . . . What's the matter with your own horses?"

"Sold most of my saddle stock. Your horses are fat and lazy, Madge. They need to be worked out."

"Indeed they do. That was okay, Dad. I thought Mr. Sidway, seeing he is so fresh, might have taken Range on his own. . . . Dad, his horse Umpqua came right to me. O, I was tickled pink. He likes me. I'll have no trouble winning him from his owner. And will I do it?"

"Madge, that'd be a dirty trick."

"So it would be. But I'm crazy about the horse—and Nels said I couldn't do it. Added fuel to the flames! . . . Besides," she pouted, "Nels has fallen for that cowboy in a most unaccountable way."

"I can account for it in more ways than one. Let me tell you just one. . . . First thing this morning he told Nels and me how we had been losing stock so mysteriously, something we should have figured out long ago."

"How?" she queried, suddenly intent. Gene liked that instant response.

"Driven away in trucks. That was a new one on us. It floored Nels. Sidway . . ." Here Gene briefly told her about the cowboy's experience on the trip over, and how swiftly he had put two and two together. "He's gone off down the valley to get a line on horse tracks."

"I told you he was a regular guy," declared Madge enthusiastically.

"Yes, you did. But it turned out—you don't like him," said Gene, casually.

"Unfortunately, it did. You saw me kiss him. I was just delighted. If it had not been for him I'd have had to go to court. . . . But my feelings don't matter. If Sidway doesn't start something round here he may be a big help to you and Nels. Between the two of us we will put this ranch on its feet."

"Wal, now, lass. What you mean—start somethin'?" interposed Nels greatly interested.

"Nels, you old spoofer! You know what I mean."

"He's already started somethin with thet hawse."

"I'll say. But I meant particularly what invariably happens to fresh cowboys when I am here."

"Ahuh! An' thet poor devil will hev to go draggin' himself off without his hawse—an' his heart."

"Nels! You're the same old darling!" she cried gleefully, as she left them.

"Gosh! . . . Nels, I wouldn't be in that poor devil's boots for a lot."

"Wal, you jest bet I would," averred Nels. "If I know cowboys, this Sidway feller will give Majesty a run for her money."

"Humph! He doesn't strike me as the fortune huntin' breed."

"All cowboys air fortune hunters. You was, Gene. An' if I remember you, old El Capitan, this Oregon boy has you tied fer all 'cept drinkin' hard an' shootin' hard. I reckon no hombre ever beat you at thet."

"Nels, you're a sharp old rascal. I've relied upon you for years. But let's not get sold on this stranger so pronto."

"Wal, I'm sold now—same as Majesty is. Reckon it'd be a good idee for you to keep yore haid!"

"Madge sold on Sidway?" ejaculated Gene.

"Shore. Only she has no idea at all about it yet."

"You romantic old geezer! . . . It'd just suit you now—if Madge would take to a man of our kind, wouldn't it? . . . Well, to be honest, I'd like her to, too. But I think that's only a dream. Madge will marry some city man, tire of us and our simple life here on the open range—and go for the flesh pots of Egypt."

An Open Letter to Jack Oakie

Dear Jack: You have probably noticed that you are liable to accidents at some times somewhat more than at others. This isn't a warning of anything serious, but take reasonable precautions against hurry and risk during the coming eight months—they'll be missing you closer and you'll feel more reckless when you have a steering wheel in your hand. Also there'll be more occasions for feeling abused, with exactly the same number of occasions for not showing it. With best wishes, WYNN.

IF you can't be a beauty by day, girls, there's nothing under the stars to prevent you from blossoming out as an "evening lovely." And you'd better be the evening answer to a bachelor's prayer this winter or luck is all going to be with your rival, who knows her last minute wiles, cosmetic and otherwise.

Take it from a couple of girls who know the ropes, who'd better know them, too, for theirs is likewise a field of sharp rivalry. Says one of these maids who knows her cosmetic way around:

"The restraint imposed by day in the pursuit of a livelihood or in the pursuit of conventional good day taste, may make one's art seem artless scrutinized under the day's clear light. But that restraint may be lifted after dark, and almost anything goes, from synthetic lashes as long as pine needles, to finger nails as red as candy hearts [and lackered to look like hearts, egad!] From firework sequins to jewelry which strikes a new note in mad gayety. From beauty patches embroidered into veils to hosiery so gossamer fine the tinted toe nail gives suspicion of no stocking.

"WITH present day wizardy of makeup and fashion tricks, any girl, provided she hasn't four front teeth missing, can burgeon forth with bewildering dazzle at night, like the night blooming cereus which, by day, is merely the lowly cactus.

"But let it be written into the program that night and day shall be sharply divided. The relentless rays of morning light shall see no gilded finger nails. The plum tinted eyelids shall have disappeared as miraculously as Cinderella's coach-and-four."

From girls of stage and screen who necessarily must time their best glamor acts by the light of the evening illumination, we learn a few things.

Mary Sothern, radio and stage star, whose blonde coloring, pale skin, fair hair and blue eyes, restrict any makeup which is obvious by day, dips liberally into her makeup box for evening glamor; a silver-rose nail polish; electric blue eyeshadow with flecks of silver in it; blue mascara substituted for the daytime brown which tips her eyelashes; lipstick which has been sparingly applied by day and treated to the artful use of lipstick tissue pressed firmly between the lips, outlining a vivid pair of lips by night, extending a bit of a way beyond the natural line of mouth.

Black and the soft, dusty tones of Mary's daytime costumes are replaced by spirited colors in rich velvets and satins for her evening gowns. For a Derain green or Madeira wine gown, she chooses a pale green powder to impart a pearly cast to her skin. Her rouge is vivid, not only lending the rose tint to cheeks, but pointing up the curve of her chin and lobes of her uncovered ears.

THEN there's Mona Maris, who achieves a fine satiny sheen to arms and shoulders with a thick coating of foundation cream, which, under artificial light, with its dusting of fine mauve powder, manages something unusual in evening makeup. Markings with a dark eyebrow pencil at the corners of the eyes increase their size, and lashes touched lightly with a dark mascara and curved backward offer a certain starry softness that is intriguing. This young Latin-American newcomer to the screen uses an eye-wash lotion in her boudoir preparation for a dazzling evening event.

Genevieve Tobin begins her preparation for the evening with a warm, scented bath, giving time in the bath for complete relaxing of taut nerves. This is followed by a cold shower and vigorous rubdown. A sprinkling of ice-cold cologne from a siphon bottle freshens her skin, and an unguent applied to her cheeks whips up color to last the evening.

Miss Tobin's blonde hair lends itself to innumerable formal coiffures, a fringe of curls around the back of the head and a charming nosegay pinned atop the crown; or, a simple headdress depending for its evening chic upon a light sprinkling of phosphorescent powder to transmit a luminous glow.

Other tricks used by this screen personality are a waxy, transparent eyeshadow to give a luminous quality to lids; camellias in her corsage; an evening veil with a bewitching beauty patch just where a beauty patch should appear; and décolleté gowns that emphasize the evening rather than the tailored effect carried over from a severe little cocktail number, let's say.

From others we learn of emphasis upon the evening plan because it is evening. Above is the cue to your plan. Get away from your daytime efficiency in so far as cosmetic and dress lures will carry you. Be that fascinating, feminine other woman that really is you in spite of your surface efficiency.

Even looking a bit of the "ridiculously silly" that is in the season's air, is recommended by a certain man well versed in women's wear and lure.

"We like them different by night," he explains, clearing up any confusion on the sex of the "we" by saying: "We men like a concession, at least, to our ever present dreams of fair, feminine and fascinating women!"

Miss Donnelly's authoritative articles, counseling women in matters of beauty and charm, appear every day in the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

By Sally Joy Brown.

WE ALWAYS have found it difficult to supply all the demands made of us, but this last month has produced more frantic cries for help than we have had since the early part of the depression. Relief workers, private agencies, and clients all are struggling desperately to prepare for the coming winter, and a serious lack of funds makes the task almost impossible.

There have been numerous evictions involving families with young children, and elderly and sickly persons, and finding new quarters when landlords have no real assurance of rent money is a long and wearying search. There is little clothing being distributed, and no one seems able to provide stoves. Shelters are overcrowded, and living conditions in homes without heat and light, and without adequate bedding, undoubtedly will be conducive to much illness and suffering when the really severe weather sets in.

Phone calls and letters all tell the same story, and we are powerless to be of any real assistance without the aid of our readers.

To paint a real picture of the distressing conditions revealed to us would take far more space and talent than are ours. It takes actual experience with daily tragedies to bring home to the average comfortable individual that all the needy are not good for nothing parasites with no will to help themselves. Undoubtedly there are undeserving ones, but there also are hundreds of unfortunate individuals in real need.

A case worker for an organization interested in the care of undernourished pretuberculous girls writes in behalf of the A. family:

"There are six children from 15 to 2 years of age. Two of the girls were so undernourished they were sent to a farm, from which they were dismissed after regaining normal weight. Unfortunately, because of conditions at home, they now are losing again. The father earns $55 a month. Previously he earned much better wages, frequently $25 a week, and the family was self-supporting. Recently they were forced to move to a cheap flat, an unheated one, and they have no stove of any kind for heating purposes. The little boy, 6 years old, has just returned from a hospital after an operation. We would be extremely grateful to you if you could help us get a stove for this family, either a cook stove, a garbage burner, or a parlor stove."

The A. family lives on the west side of the city.

A medical worker from a charity hospital writes:

"We would like to help the D. family procure a heating stove, which they are unable to buy and which the relief agency cannot get for them at this time. Any ordinary one will be satisfactory if it can be used without danger and will give heat. We have had two of the children in the hospital and have been reluctant to send them home until it is possible to heat the house properly. Both of the parents in the family are semi-invalids, and the home now is being kept by a married daughter, who has children of her own."

Can some reader on the north side provide an easy chair for Mr. C.? He recently suffered the amputation of both legs and is to be dismissed from the hospital. His real need is a wheel chair, but, since such is almost impossible to obtain, a comfortable easy chair will be a great help. The family also is in need of a garbage burner. They are on relief and unable to purchase these necessities.

Mrs. A. R., on the northwest side, lives alone in a basement flat. She is unable to buy a stove, and the old laundry stove she used last winter is completely burned out. Any kind of a heater will be appreciated.

There are six in the Z. family. They are alloted $9 every two weeks and, naturally enough, find it impossible to buy any extras. The youngest child, a boy of 5, recently returned from a children's hospital, where he has been treated three times since last March. He should have a bed of his own, and the mother has appealed to me for a cot and mattress, warm underwear, and outer clothing. His illness left him with a weakness in both legs and he is unable to walk, but needs to be taken outdoors every day. All the children, including girls 6, 9, and 10 years, need clothing, but the mother particularly fears for the little invalid. She herself needs a pair of shoes, size 5 or 5½, wide.

Perfectly Simple Parisian Frock Has Sophisticated Air

No. 5211—The Paris pattern for this dress is available in sizes 14 and 16, and in 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Smart women here are in a perfect frenzy over the simplest of frocks which have sophistication and "knowingness." There's a worldly air about such frocks, but they're demurely feminine, too. "Smart modern" is a good term. One rather plain French woman who has quite a reputation for chic, notwithstanding her natural lack of endowments, was seen recently wearing a dinner frock like the one pictured today. In fact, my pattern, No. 5211, is an adaptation made directly from the original, which I had plenty of opportunity to observe one recent night at dinner.

This frock is slim and smooth, and just grazes the floor. All the new luscious colors, as well as the eternally lovely black, are perfect for this model. The original was a vivid darkish blue with a wine red belt, and the effect under the soft lights of the restaurant was arresting. You might select gray green and have the belt in black currant, amethyst or dark red. Wine red and bright blue or green also harmonize well and are dramatic. Frocks MUST be dramatic these days.

You might make the dress in black crush-resistant velvet. It does flattering things to your throat and arms. Ruggedness is out. Madame must have alabaster skin, fashion decrees!

You can have this dress in street length, if you prefer. I've designed the pattern to accommodate such a desire. Make it of lightweight wool in any of the aforementioned shades, or use silks with interesting surfaces, such as cloky. Pebbly crêpe in the new slate blue shade would be interesting.

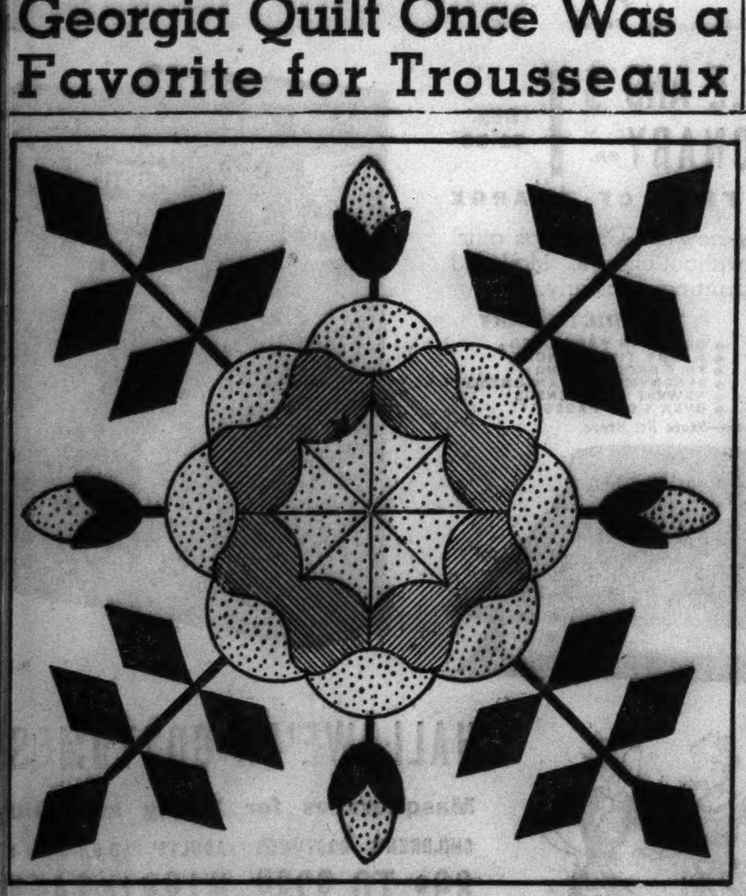
Georgia Quilt Once Was a Favorite for Trousseaux



JUNE ROSE.

By Nancy Cabot.

The birth date of this applique block is 1863. It was designed in Georgia for one of the "best" quilts in the trousseau of one of the belles of the countryside. It is an elaborate applique block done in two shades of rose and light green against a white ground. It was quilted in outline with four inch bands of white material set between each block. A running cable cord is quilted on the bands, and a double cord is done along the border. The finished blocks measured 16 inches square, while the finished spread measures 88 by 108 inches.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

Theater Guild's Production of 'Mme. Bovary' a Hit in Chicago

By Charles Collins.

THE pre-Broadway première of the Theater Guild's production of "Mme. Bovary" gives stamina and distinction to the Chicago dramatic season. It freshens the air, which has become somewhat stale with the aromas of year-old New York hits. It gives the stay-at-home playgoer something to talk about that has not already been discussed to the boring point by the migrants who study the drama largely on the eastern seaboard.

This dramatization of a classic novel may easily be the most important production on the Guild's schedule for the season of 1937-'38. Its first performance in the Grand Opera house was handicapped in the early scenes by an embarrassing incident of scene-shifting in full view of the audience, due to misbehavior of the curtain; but this was merely one of those things that experienced first-nighters quickly forget and easily forgive. The general impression at the close of Emma Bovary's strange and tragic career was that of a solid hit in the vein of serious drama with a cultural background. In its acting and its stagecraft this faithful transference of a great and difficult novel to the footlights was a complete realization of the more earnest ideals of the Theater Guild.

In discussing plays based on books the stage production's relation to its origin is a matter that cannot be overlooked. There is a tendency among reviewers to consider the work merely as a play, without reference to its source; this, they argue, is the point of view of the general public. I do not agree with this attitude, especially when it concerns a book of major importance in literary history.

The average playgoer who has not read the original text is no particular concern of mine. I have always read the book, unless it has not deserved reading; therefore I cannot approach the performance with the uninformed mind of the nonreader. In cases such as "Mme. Bovary" on the stage, or "Anna Karenina" in the movies, the novel is the reason for the production; the fact that millions have read the story in print is of major importance; and all opinion upon the dramatic version must consider its relation, good or bad, civilized or barbaric, to its source.

I find that "Mme. Bovary" is among the best dramatizations in my playgoing experience. It completely interprets the spirit of the work; it also contains most of its essential details and characters. The only major omissions are Emma Bovary's maternity, her night of social ecstasy at the aristocrat's ball; and her agonizing scene with Rodolphe, her first lover, asking for money to avoid a sherif's

Above: Agnes Doyle will be seen in the ingenue role of "Yes, My Darling Daughter" when that stage production comes to the Grand Opera house on Nov. 1 as the second play in the subscription season of the American Theater society.

Above: Fans have gone for "Prisoner of Zenda" in a big way—so it's staying over at the Chicago for another week. Before you is lovely Madeline Carroll, who bowls Ronald Colman over in the film.

Left: "The Life of Emile Zola," having finished its "road-showing," will soon be seen at the Chicago theater. Here's the star—Paul Muni. Not as he looks in the movie.

Below: Here are the three Ritz brothers as they appear in "Life Begins at College." It's having a second run at the Apollo.

You'll discover Alice Faye looking like this when "In Old Chicago" comes to town, as it soon will do. The picture, localed in our city of earlier days, is now in production at Twentieth Century-Fox.

In pensive pose Olivia De Havilland appears before you this Sunday morning. Miss Havilland, who grows increasingly popular with movie fans, makes a new bid for favor in "It's Love I'm After."

Irish Players Satisfy Gotham's Hunger for Laughter

A Revival of Old Play Is Good Comedy

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The Irish Players from Dublin got back to doing the sort of thing they do best, which is character comedy, the other night. They revived Lennox Robinson's "The Far Off Hills," and for the first time on this visit were cheered by applause that was both spontaneous and hearty, in place of being perfunctory appreciation.

There is a vast difference in applause, and in the ring of it. There is nothing more inspiring in the theater than the immediate response of a pleased audience, and nothing more depressing than the scattered, uncertain, pat-pat of an audience making an effort to appear knowing or polite.

"The Far Off Hills" was one of the minor hits of the Abbey company's visit in 1932. They repeated it for a single performance in 1934. Under different conditions it would have been passed as just another bright little comedy, pointed with humor and the brogues of the kindly superamateurs who play it.

But this has been a fairly depressing month in the theater, and there is a hunger for laughter and honest comedy. The Irish Theater is a natural supply source for both when conditions are right. Yet consider how simple and homely is the material they have to work with in this play.

Robinson's Play a Story of the Clancy Family.

The Clancys, Patrick, the father, Anna and Dorothea, the younger daughters, are completely under the thumb of Marian, an older sister, and have been since the mother died. It is Marian's idea that she should stick by the home until she sees her father's sight restored by an operation and her sisters properly educated. Then she will go into a convent and become a nun. It is the other Clancys' idea that they should hurry Marian into the convent as quickly and pleasantly as possible and thereby gain a little peace and freedom in the home. With Marian away Patrick could have his old cronies in for a visit and a drink when he wanted them. Dorothea could do what she liked about her piano lessons and Anna would not have to worry all the time about her school work.

The girls hatch a conspiracy. They'll marry their father to an old and friendly neighbor, then there'll be no excuse for Marian's staying longer at home. They do this, but it doesn't work just as they planned. Their father is successfully married, but Marian decides not to be a nun after all. She will stay home and get married herself. The young man Marian agrees to marry is a dominating sort. Together they expect to run the town, so the Clancys are free at last.

Hungry, as I say, for fun and good spirits in the theater, the town has turned to "The Far Off Hills" as a happy relief, and the Irish troupers have temporarily cut their repertory plans to continue the run.

"In Clover" Proves a Disappointment to Mantle.

As opposed to the Irish comedy we had a little something in the American farce style called "In Clover." Allen Scott wrote it, and he was the promising co-author of a much better comedy, "Good-by Again," in which the late Osgood Perkins scored a hit two years ago. "In Clover" proved pretty depressing. It was entirely artificial. No one could believe that the stage characters were anything but stuffed dummies set to tell a preposterous tale and perform an exaggerated series of stage hops.

Yet the foundations were true enough. The young Freemans go into Connecticut to buy a farm supplied with fresh air, historical associations and a proper environment for the raising of a family. They are fleeced by the natives and made the victims of unwelcome guests. When they are about to turn back to a nice, stuffy little steam heated apartment in town they turn the tables on the natives and all is rosy.

There is no particular reason why "In Clover" should have been written. Even light comedies should have some sort of inspirational background, but there was even less reason why so light and purposeless a play should come to production. Yet John and Jerrold Krimsky, two young men of family and capital who have been flirting with show business for several years, have given it a fine cast and a handsome setting.

Claudia Morgan plays one Freeman and Myron McCormick the other. They run their arches flat and shout their tonsils raw, but that doesn't help. Dennie Moore is wasted as a rich neighbor's toy wife, and half a dozen other actors of proved quality struggle ineffectively with the material handed them.

"Wise Tomorrow" Played with Success in London.

Another new play that we could as easily have done without is Stephen Powys' "Wise Tomorrow." It was played with some success in London a year ago. Over there it was accepted as the story of a domineering actress who, when she realized that her days of glory were finished, undertook to continue her power and influence in the theater by controling the career and the person of a younger actress who had recently been accepted as of promising talent. No suggestion was to be found in the reports of the London reviewers that the play touched, even suggestively, the repellent theme of lesbianism.

In America, however, during a preliminary tour, a deliberate attempt has been made to read this suggestion into the story. It is, I believe, an unwaranted assumption. It is easy enough to read abnormal implications into any revealing drama having to do with an unconventional relationship of the sexes, if that happens to be the trend of an auditor's mind.

"Wise Tomorrow," the title stemming from a quotation from Pope, "Tomorrow's wiser than today," is, on the surface, the straight story of Diana Ebury and Joan Campion. Diana is the older actress who hoped to perpetuate herself through Joan. She aids and flatters her, teaches her the Ebury methods of stage characterization, and jealously breaks up her intended marriage to a normal youth. In the end Diana dies, but preserves her hold over Joan by making the girl her heir.

It is an uninteresting play because none of the principals is worth worrying about and the story is unpleasant. The dialog is smartly written, and competently spoken, especially by a newcomer from London, a facile light comedian named Naunton Wayne. Edith Barrett is sympathetically cast, and a motion picture protégée of the Warner Brothers, Gloria Dickson, displays physical beauty and a modest talent.

Famous Novel in Stage Form Wins Applause

sale of her household goods. The play is a rich and stimulating banquet served from the Flaubertian table, in the style of an old master of the realistic novel.

The affected romanticism of Emma Bovary's imagination is illuminated by a trick of modern stagecraft which departs from Flaubert's objective manner. At certain points, when the adapter has wanted to give the audience flashes of insight into Emma's mental life, young women in ballroom costumes of the period appear in the upper boxes, three on the right, three on the left. They twitter to each other about her conduct and her illusions. They represent memories of her girlhood—companions of her convent school days whom she imagines have realized her day dreams of Parisian glamor and romantic love. They are "stream of consciousness" images.

This is a device that can easily be bungled in the theater. It is managed quite happily in "Mme. Bovary." The girls, although speaking in a low, pseudo-supernatural murmur, are clearly heard; their remarks, although rather ghostly of manner, convey an illusion of natural conversation. They seem like sublimated Emma Bovarys, talking the affected prattle of her subconscious self.

Constance Cummings Becomes Important Star.

Constance Cummings becomes a dramatic star of major rank in this admirable production. Her rôle is Hamletlike in length, and ranges from light romance to a devastating death scene. She has beauty, charm, and decided skill; and she completely refutes the general impression that movie actresses, removed from their element and faced with the exactions of a sustained dramatic performance, are brittle and fallible creatures. She is a welcome addition to the women stars of the American stage, which is in need of new blood with commanding personality.

Nine years ago Miss Cummings was a chorus girl in a musical show called "The Treasure Girl," which had Gertrude Lawrence as star, at the Alvin theater, New York. She had acted a few parts on the Pacific coast as a 16 year old—in a stock company production of "Seventh Heaven," for example, and also in a play called "Silence"—but it was as a dancing girl that she entered the Broadway adventure, with her mother as chaperon. She also appeared in "Oh, Kay," on tour; in "The Little Show," at the Music-Box, New York; and as an actress of small parts in "This Man's Town" and "June Moon."

As an understudy in "June Moon" she gave one performance of Linda Watkin's rôle which caused a newspaper man to write about her in glowing terms. Samuel Goldwyn promptly engaged her for Hollywood inspection, and she was assigned to the heroine's rôle in a picture called "The Devil to Pay," with Ronald Colman as her film wooer. But Mr. Goldwyn did not like the "tests" of his discovery, apparently because he thought that all heroines should be blondes, and her contract became null and void.

She Acted in Movies from 1931 to 1934.

Another company, however, came to her rescue. Columbia Pictures thought she might be the right vis-à-vis for Walter Huston in "The Criminal Code"; after the film was released they placed her under a long term contract. Therefore the film fans of 1931-'34 may remember her in association with the following titles:

"Lover, Come Back," "The Last Parade," "Traveling Husbands," "Guilty Generation," "Attorney for the Defense," "Washington Merry-Go-Round," "Night After Night," "Billion Dollar Scandal," "The Mind Reader," "Broadway Through a Keyhole," "Glamor," "This Man Is Mine," "Remember Last Night," "The Cat's Paw," and "Movie Crazy."

She returned to the stage in London in the summer of 1934; the play was called "Sour Grapes." In December, 1934, she scored a New York hit in "Accent on Youth." Last season she again won Broadway favor in a piece called "Young Mme. Conti." Her London debut brought her a husband—Benn W. Levy, the playwright, who served as stage director for "Sour Grapes" and who adapted Gaston Baty's dramatization of "Mme. Bovary" for her use.

Here then is a new American star, happily launched in a probably brilliant career. She is giving an attractive account of herself in a rôle that would challenge all the skill of the most gifted actress one can think of.

The Chicago engagement of "Mme. Bovary" will end next Saturday night. The play will then go to Philadelphia for two weeks, and will have its Broadway première on Nov. 15.

First Dramatization of Gustave Flaubert's Novel.

This dramatization of "Mme. Bovary" is the first that has been staged since the novel's publication eighty years ago, save one which has no importance in theatrical history. During his lifetime Flaubert refused permission to many French playwrights who wanted to adapt his story; he was adamant on the subject. Henry Monnier, a prominent actor in Paris, was particularly insistent in bidding for the stage rights, because he wanted to appear in the character of Homais, the loquacious apothecary; but the novelist always replied with a stubborn negative. After his death it became a literary tradition in France that this masterpiece was not to be hacked into dramatic form, out of respect to the memory of a great stylist.

In 1906, however, a playwright named William Busnach prepared an adaptation which had a month's performances in Rouen, which is the shrine for Flaubertian pilgrims. He was denounced in various French newspapers for desecration of a masterpiece. Whereupon he placed the word, profaneur, upon his visiting card as a humorous description of his profession and character.

The actress of the rôle of Emma Bovary in this production at Rouen was Mme. Rachel d'Escoubes, who has been a resident of Chicago for the past twenty years. In 1916 she appeared here in French performances of "Mme. Sans-Gene" and "La Rafale." She made a dressing room call upon Miss Cummings after last Wednesday's matinée.

When Gaston Baty decided to dramatize "Mme. Bovary" as a vehicle for his wife, he secured the consent of Flaubert's heirs and relatives, although the copyright on the novel had expired. Nevertheless, conservative literary journals in Paris protested. He defended himself by stating that the reasons why Flaubert objected to dramatization no longer existed; that the resourcefulness of the modern stage permitted a faithful treatment of the many episodes in the story; and that he had made every effort to preserve the spirit and the details of the original work.

HAS A FEATURED ROLE

Shirley Temple is flanked by quite an impressive supporting cast in "Heidi." (Roosevelt.) We present Pauline Moore, who has a featured role in the production.

Variety Bills

THE Palace theater has replaced its customary vaudeville program with an elaborate revue called "Hollywood Hotel." In the cast of 50 are Marty May, Robert Berry, Clark and Eaton, Wilma Horner, Mirora, Maria del Carmen, Mae McKim and male chorus, and Ray and Trent. There is a ballet of 24 girls.

The State-Lake theater has Lottie Mayer's water ballet as the principal item on this week's program of stage entertainment. Other vaudeville acts are: Jerry Lawton, cowboy entertainer; Joe Termini, comedian and musician; Dick, Don, and Dinah; Verne Buck, and the ballet.

The Chicago theater's stage show this week features "Harbor Lights," a maritime scene with Joseph Parsons, basso profundo; "Sandpaper Swing," a dance spectacle for the Evans ballet, and "Black and White Fantasy" with the cellist, Ennio Bolognini. There also are specialties by Ken Harvey, banjoist; Bob Dupont, juggler, and the comedy team of Dawn and Darrow.

Play at Goodman.

The next play to be given in the Goodman theater by the Art Institute school of acting will be Elmer Rice's "Adding Machine." It will open on Monday, Nov. 8, and continue until Nov. 17.

Opera Seeks the Embodiment of Essential Reality

Conformity to "Real" Life Is Discarded

By Edward Barry.

OPERA is not foolish. It only seems so when we compare it to real life, where people do not sing their thoughts but speak them.

This is not a just comparison if by real life we mean the outward form of everyday actions. Art has no duty toward these everyday actions except that of conforming to their essential rather than to their superficial reality.

An artist is entitled to perceive an object in his own way. ["Object" here means not only "object" in the ordinary sense of the word but also action, situation, idea, or what have you.] He eliminates what he considers its nonessential features, chooses those which he considers most important, and embodies them in an esthetic object [poem, play, vase, opera, etc.].

If his perception is good, if he has really found a hidden rather than a surface or shallow reality, then the resulting work of art is "true." This sort of truth does not depend on exact conformity with "real" life.

Here is an example which will make clear the meaning of essential as opposed to superficial reality and also demonstrate how an artist chooses what he considers the most important features of an ordinary object and embodies them in an esthetic object.

Love Offers an Example of Essential Reality.

Youthful love, if we consider its superficial features only, consists largely of desperately futile prattle of the "You're pretty sweet" variety. Below this surface level there is intense emotional activity, a sense of the poignancy of life, a dozen other features closely associated with man's spiritual nature.

Here is an object, youthful love. Shakespeare decided when he turned to the composition of "Romeo and Juliet" to make of it an esthetic object, a play. He knew as well as anybody else that a "real" life Romeo and a "real" life Juliet would simply bandy back and forth an inordinate number of "You're pretty sweet's." He ignored this crude sort of trueness to life and refused to waste any time trying to reproduce such inarticulate conversation.

Instead, he looked beneath the surface, saw the intense spiritual life of the characters and sensed the poignancy of the whole situation. These are the sort of things which an artist must choose when he sets about the creation of an esthetic object.

Shakespeare chose them. Hence the magnificent silver flecked poetry of the play, a poetry which never issued from the mouth of any lover alive. "Romeo and Juliet" is "truer" than a phonograph record of what young lovers actually say. Shakespeare's truth is a deeper truth. Embodied in an esthetic object [the play] is the reality which Shakespeare saw, not the reality to which the phonograph record would testify.

Distortion Present in Art If Norm Is "Real" Life.

Call it distortion if you must. This distortion is always present in art if we make "real life," everyday real life, the norm. An esthetic object like a work of art is not an actual copy of an ordinary object. It is that object viewed through the perceptions of the artist.

But modes of perception differ. Two painters may make two entirely different types of picture out of one and the same landscape. A present day dramatist [or even an Elizabethan one, for that matter] could take the Romeo and Juliet story and make a different sort of play out of it. Everything depends on what the artist sees as essential, what he discards as nonessential.

Following this idea to its logical conclusion, we must admit that two people can interpret the same object in such differing ways that they require not two types of the same art but two completely different forms of art.

If we accord to Shakespeare the right to express in terms of poetry the hidden content of a story which appealed to him, we cannot deny the right of another artist, a musician, for instance, to sense and to deal with that content in terms of his perceptions and his art. If the "Romeo and Juliet" fantasy of Tschaikowsky is not as "true" as the play which we have been discussing, the answer is to be found not in the fact that music cannot express the emotions underlying the story but in the truth that Tchaikowsky is not as great a musician as Shakespeare is a dramatist. But both forms of expression are esthetically "true." Neither is true to "real" life if we persist in the belief that everyday modes of action are the only "real" things.

Why Should Opera Conform to a Superficial Reality?

And if anybody thinks that opera, and opera alone, can properly emphasize the content of a story he is fully justified in writing one. This complex art [a union of drama, music, and sometimes the dance] is under no more obligation than any of its sisters to conform to a superficial reality.

"People in everyday life do not sing their thoughts," its detractors say. True, but neither do people speak their thoughts in flowing iambic pentameters. As art advances in complexity it must discard more and more of those "true-to-life" features which the artist deems nonessential. There can be no quarrel with this if the more complex art form is able, after the selection has been made, to put a greater emphasis on what the artist deems essential, on what he would call "the really real." Ideally, opera does just this.

IN BENEFIT RECITAL

Rosa Raisa, dramatic soprano of the Chicago City Opera company, will appear in Orchestra hall this coming Wednesday evening. Her co-recitalist is Patricia Ann Levit, pianist. Proceeds go to the Prothero Memorial Cancer research.

Chicago City Opera Season Opens Saturday with "Aida"

By Cecil Smith.

ON Saturday night the Civic Opera house will once more open its doors to the audience for which it was built, an audience of spangled décolleté ladies and gentlemen suavely turned out in full kit, sweeping toward their boxes; of eager and unkempt music students pushing into the gallery elevators; of school teachers and housewives and bookkeepers, Bohemians and butterflies, stenographers, politicians, and astrophysicists scattering themselves into every cranny of the big auditorium.

Quite promptly at 8, if past custom is observed, Roberto Moranzoni will enter the pit, bow to his applauding audience, and conduct the violins in an ascending chromatic melody which for 3 hours will haunt Aïda's hapless footsteps.

This performance of Verdi's "Aïda," an opera made to order for so festive an occasion, will initiate a season of seven weeks of grand opera. The destinies of the Chicago City Opera company this year, as last, are guided by Jason Whitney, president of the company, and Paul Longone, artistic director.

Frequent Performances Will Be Given.

Performances will be given every Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday evening and Saturday matinée at prices from $1.00 to $4.00, and every Thursday evening [sponsored by the board of education] at prices from 50 cents to $2.00.

Subscription tickets, giving their holders assured locations, may still be bought for every night or afternoon of the week on which operas are regularly given. Those who do not wish to commit themselves to a fixed day of the week may buy coupon books, to be used freely for any number of tickets for any number of performances, at a saving of 10 per cent.

Representatives of the opera company are heartened by a large increase in subscriptions above last year's figure. Great enthusiasm prevails in the opera house, and a season far surpassing last year's is confidently promised.

Thus far only the first eight days' répertoire has been made public. Here are some of the highlights of those eight days:

The most important social occasion is, of course, the opening night, with a brilliantly cast performance of "Aïda" and an equally brilliant display of finery in the lobby between acts.

Damrosch Will Conduct His English Opera.

The most novel feature of the week is the Chicago première on Saturday evening, Nov. 6, of Walter Damrosch's opera, "The Man Without a Country," sung in English and based upon Edward Everett Hale's famous story, the opera will be sung here by very nearly the same cast that participated in its first performance in last spring's popular season at the Metropolitan Opera in New York. The celebrated Dr. Damrosch will come here to conduct.

The significant revival of the week is Massenet's "Manon," an opera given short shrift by the various Chicago opera companies for many seasons. The Chicago history of "Manon" in our generation begins with Mary Garden's appearances in 1914, includes [here and at Ravinia] such great names as Vix, Mason, Muzio, Dux, Gall, and Bori, and concludes with a jolt at the recollection of Hope Hampton's single inadequate performance in 1934.

The most hopeful débuts are those of Elen Dosia, soprano of the Paris Opéra Comique, and Andre Burdino, tenor of the Paris Opéra, both in "Manon"; George Czaplicki, baritone of the Warsaw Opera, in "Aïda," and Erna Sack, coloratura soprano of the Dresden Opera, in "The Barber of Seville."

The most polished singer to return after a period of absence is Charles Hackett, who is second to no living tenor in "The Barber of Seville."

The opera most badly in need of recasting, and now finally recast, is "Il Trovatore," which will enjoy the presence of Elisabeth Rethberg and Giovanni Martinelli in its cast.

Opera Schedule Is Released.

The schedule follows:

Saturday, Oct. 30, at 8—"Aïda"; Elisabeth Rethberg, Gertrud Wettergren, Giovanni Martinelli, George Czaplicki [debut], Virgilio Lazzari; Robert Moranzoni, conductor.

Monday, Nov. 1, at 8—"Samson and Delilah"; Wettergren, Martinelli, Carlo Morelli, Chase Baromeo; opera ballet, Ruth Page, directress; Henry Weber, conductor.

Wednesday, Nov. 3, at 8—"Il Trovatore"; Rethberg, Eleanor La Mance, Martinelli, Morelli, Lazzari; Moranzoni, conductor.

Thursday, Nov. 4, at 8—"Madame Butterfly"; Hilda Burke, Ada Paggi, Joseph Bentonelli, Wilfred Engelman; Moranzoni, conductor.

Friday, Nov. 5, at 8—"Manon"; Elen Dosia [debut], André Burdino [debut], John Brownlee [debut], Baromeo; Jacques Samoussoud, conductor.

Saturday, Nov. 6, at 2—"The Barber of Seville"; Erna Sack [debut], Paggi, Charles Hackett, John Charles Thomas, Vittorio Trevisan; Moranzoni, conductor.

Saturday, Nov. 6, at 8—"The Man Without a Country" [Chicago première]—Helen Traubel [debut], Arthur Carron [debut], Donald Dickson [debut], George Rasely, John Gurney [debut], Mark Love; Walter Damrosch, conductor [debut].

Rosa Raisa Will Sing Here on Wednesday.

One of the most notable dramatic sopranos in all the long story of opera in Chicago, Rosa Raisa, will provide a foretaste of her operatic appearances later in the season by giving a recital in Orchestra hall Wednesday evening. She will be assisted by Patricia Ann Levit, child pianist.

Marcel Dupré, one of the foremost contemporary French organists, will play a recital in St. James Methodist church, 46th street and Ellis avenue, on Friday evening.

The Aeolian string quartet, successors to the Mischakoff quartet since Mischa Mischakoff's departure to greener fields in the east, will play at Wednesday night's Northwestern university concert in Thorne hall. Felix Borowski will deliver the commentary.

Mercado's Tipica Mexican orchestra, conducted by Angell Mercado, will present a Mexican and Latin American program in Orchestra hall today with the following soloists: Lolita Valdez, soprano; José Rubio, tenor; Sarita Mercado, salterist, and the Ojeda dancers.

Hortense Love, a young Negro soprano who sings coloratura music well and excels in the interpretation of spirituals, will make her formal downtown debut today in the Studebaker theater under the sponsorship of the Olivet Cultural guild.

Bertha Waldman, mezzo-soprano, will share this afternoon's program at the Beaux Arts salon in the Medinah club with Karl McGuire, Chicago composer-pianist.

Vivian Della Chiesa, Chicago City Opera soprano, sings at Temple Emanuel tonight, opening a series of four concerts to be given there during the coming season.

The Metropolitan prize winning and radio choir, J. Wesley Jones, conductor, and David Nyvall Jr., guest conductor, will celebrate their seventeenth annual music festival at the Metropolitan church, 4100 South Park way.

Helen Margolyne, soprano, and Herman Clebanoff, violinist, concertmaster of the Civic orchestra, will appear in join recital in Kimball hall Friday evening.

The Russian trio—Nina Mesirow-Minchin, pianist; Michael Wilkomirski, violinist, and Daniel Saidenberg, cellist—is to give a series of six morning concerts at the Fortnightly club beginning Nov. 16.

$1,000 Awards Go to U. of C. Instructors

By the Rev. John Evans.

ANNUAL awards of $1,000 each to three outstanding teachers of undergraduates at the University of Chicago have been provided for by a gift of $75,000 made by an anonymous eastern alumnus. The prize winners are to be announced at the June convocation of the university each year, and the awards are to be made by the board of trustees. Under the terms of the gift, no instructor who has won an award will be eligible for a second until the lapse of three years thereafter, and no one may receive the prize more than three times.

"The purpose of the award is to interest teachers in training not only scholars and research workers, but also young men and women for intelligent and public spirited participation and leadership in business, civic and professional life," the donor said in his letter of gift. "I hope the award will result in constantly improving the Chicago faculty who teach undergraduates."

Although the awards are intended primarily as a recognition of excellence in teaching undergraduates, yet at the discretion of the president and the trustees it may be conferred upon one who has contributed notably to the improvement of undergraduate instruction, though not primarily engaged in teaching.

DR. FREDERICK PAUL KEPPEL, president of the Carnegie corporation, will be the first speaker under the Edward Corbin Jenkins lectureship to be given at George Williams college, 5315 Drexel avenue, on Friday evening. Dr. Keppel's topic will be "Education for Leisure—Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow."

The lectureship was founded last year by the board of trustees, the Kappa Delta Pi society, an honorary professional fraternity, and the faculty of the college in recognition of former President Jenkins' leadership. Its purpose is to present notable lecturers in the professional fields in which the college is especially interested.

WAYNE UNIVERSITY on Nov. 17 will meet for the fourth time a debating team from the universities of Oxford and Cambridge. The subject will be America's international policy, and following the English custom it will be a non-decision discussion. The teams will be split so that an American and a visitor will be on each side. James A. Brown will represent Oxford and Ronald V. Gibson will be for Cambridge in the international encounter.

Miss Damaris Ames, daughter of the Rev. Edward Scribner Ames, pastor of the University church of the Disciples of Christ, 5700 University avenue, has been appointed social director of Central Y. M. C. A. college, 19 South La Salle street. This announcement was made by Edward J. Sparling, president of the college. Miss Ames received a Ph. B. degree in 1922 from the University of Chicago, majoring in social sciences. Following her graduation she became secretary to Mrs. George S. Goodspeed, director of Ida Noyes hall, and later assistant to George A. Works, dean of students.

Dr. Raymond B. Culver, president of Frances Shimer junior college, Mount Carroll, Ill., has appointed Frances H. M. Ould, formerly of the University of Wisconsin, as assistant professor of classical languages and history. Dr. Ould is a native of Fort William, Ontario, and a graduate of the University of Toronto, Canada.

Broadway Hits.

"Susan and God," which opened in New York on Oct. 7, appears to be a hit. Another recent success on Broadway is "The Star Wagon."

THEY DANCE AT THE DRAKE

The Misses Gayle and Lloyd are dancing contributors to the current floor show in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel, where Vincent Lopez is musical director.

Ballet Russe Repertoire.

New ballets in the répertoire of the De Basil Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo include "Francesca da Rimini," with music by Tschaikowsky "The Gods Go A-Begging," with music by Handel and choregraphy by Lichine; "The Amorous Lion," with music by Rathaus and choregraphy by Lichine, and "Le Coq d'Or," with music by Rimsky-Korsakoff and choregraphy by Michael Fokine.

National Orchestra

The seventh season of the National Symphony orchestra in Washington, D. C., Hans Kindler, conductor, is the most ambitious in the history of the organization. The orchestra will play twenty-seven concerts in Washington, seven in Baltimore, and five in Richmond. Rudolph Ganz and Walter Damrosch are scheduled to appear as guest conductors.

Record Run

"YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU" enters its thirty-eighth week at the Harris theater tonight, and takes the long run honors for dramatic productions since 1925. Up to now, the record was held by "Three Men on a Horse" with a run of 3[illegible] weeks in the season of 1934-'35, also at the Harris. The only play in like two decades that surpassed the "You Can't Take It With You" was "Abie's Irish Rose," which ran for 58 weeks in 1924-'25.

Only a few musical shows have topped the record of "You Can't Take It With You" in the past decade. Excepting "Three Men on a Horse," no play since "Excess Baggage," which ran for 37 weeks in 1928, has come anywhere close.

The New York company of "You Can't Take It With You" is in its twelfth month at the Booth theater; the Boston company in its third month at the Plymouth theater, and the southern company in its second month of one night stands. Early next month rehersals begin for the London production.

"Otello" in Paris.

Giovanni Martinelli and Lawrence Tibbett recently appeared in a gala performance of Verdi's "Otello" at the Paris Opera. The Desdemona was Eide Norena, formerly a member of the Chicago Civic Opera company.

GOOD Morning!

You know that old one about there being "so much bad in the best of us and so much good in the worst of us——?" Well, "Counsel For Crime" will bring it to your mind.

The hero—and he really proves a hero—is a smart criminal lawyer, "Smiling Bill Mellon," who has grown slick and rich from acting as mouthpiece for lucre laden law breakers. In fifteen years he hasn't lost a murder case. BUT ——

You remember the story about Achilles and his foot trouble? "Counsel For Crime" will recall THAT to your memory. [Looks like Old Reminiscence week.] Mellon's "heel" consists of an idealistic son who doesn't ken that Mellon's his pappy, nor that his adopted mother, now the respected wife of a prominent senator, is his real mother. [You'll see how the quote and Achilles fit in as you watch the picture.]

While the story isn't remarkable for originality it has been patly dialoged and directed. The acting is most intelligent. Every time I see Otto Kruger I get mad at Hollywood producers for not giving him more to do. He turns out a whiz of a performance as Mellon—sensitive, quick on the draw; utterly without melodramatics. It could, so easily, have been so different!

Douglas Montgomery, looking sorta funny in a mustache, is fervid youth personified. Just hatched out of college, he comes into his unknown father's office, fluffy with anticipation and chirping idealism. What he learns about law from Mellon sends him scampering in horror and alarm to the other side of the fence. As assistant district attorney, it becomes his duty to prosecute—yeah, and convict!—the man who had given him being. . . . Dear! Dear! Well, anyhow, it's a difficult rôle and Douglas handles it nicely—veins stand out in his forehead; knuckles get white—swell!

Other players are as they should be, according special mention to Gene Morgan as Friday.

All in all, "Counsel For Crime" is an attention compelling program movie.

See you tomorrow.

YOU'VE SEEN HER BEFORE?

You think you've seen her before? You probably have. Because Ruth Martin is a widely photographed model. Now she's going to be in the movies, for she drew a role in "Walter Wanger's Vogues of 1938." Now at the Oriental.

Famous Pupil of Liszt Dies in Indiana

THERE died in an Indianapolis hospital this summer a woman who constituted through a whole generation Chicago's most important link with the golden age of music. A pupil of Franz Liszt and a concert pianist of wide fame, Julie Rivé-King worked quietly here among a small circle of friends and pupils, holding a faculty position at the Bush Conservatory of Music from 1905 to 1930.

Mme. King was born in Cincinnati, O., Oct. 31, 1854, of French-German-Swiss parentage. Her unusual musical talent being early apparent, her mother began teaching her before the little girl had reached school age. Later she studied in New York and, while still very young, set out for Europe armed with a letter of introduction to Franz Liszt.

The great pianist accepted her as a pupil and the young American enjoyed the priceless benefits of intimate acquaintance with important musicians during a period when Germany was at the very height of her artistic eminence. She played in Leipzig in 1874 and returned to her own country the next year to begin a widely successful career here.

For years Mme. King was identified with the Thomas orchestra. Her name appears among the soloists of the season of 1891, the first year that the Thomas group was established as the resident orchestra of Chicago.

She traveled widely, making about 4,000 appearances in this country. Frank H. King, whom she married in 1876, acted as her manager. Mme. King's talents and charm won her the friendship of many nonmusicians as well as musicians. Among the former was the poet, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

After the death of her husband in 1905 Mme. King joined the staf of Bush conservatory, Chicago, and taught steadily for 25 years. She never really retired, for this dauntless woman was practicing daily up to within two months of her death. She taught in Warren, Pa., during the summer of 1936.

Classic Novel

"MADAME BOVARY," Flaubert's famous novel, dramatized this season, has been published in numerous editions in this country. After it was added to one publisher's series of reprints in 1918 over 100,000 copies were sold in nine years; new plates ordered in 1927.

"Men with Wings"

Three of the best known free lance aviators in California have been signed as technical aides for the movie "Men with Wings," which Paramount studio is to film in color. They are Paul Mantz, who was the late Amelia Earhart's technical adviser, who helped her prepare plans for her long flights; Frank Clark, veteran Hollywood stunt flyer, and Tex Rankin, a high point winner in the aerial acrobatics at the recent Cleveland national air races. William Wellman, who is to direct the film, was in the Lafayette escadrille in France. Wellman has had Mantz, Clark, and Rankin hopping about the country for him for several weeks trying to buy up old Spads, Fokkers, Curtis, and Jennies of wartime vintage.

Since a New York Appellate court sent back Bill Hart's $85,000 breach of contract judgment against Producer Joseph M. Schenck and United Artists, Hart has raised the sum he is suing for to $500,000. He claims the sum because of asserted manipulation in which his last starring movie, "Tumbleweeds," was deliberately rented to movie showhouses at minor sums, so that it could not return a profit to Hart. The actor had put his own money into producing the film.

Busy Actor

ERNEST THESIGER, who has the money-lender rôle in "Madame Bovary," is one of the best known actors of the London stage. The list of parts in his career fills two columns of the theatrical "Who's Who." His two previous stage appearances in this country were as the leading character in "The Sleeping Clergyman" and in "The Devil Passes," in which Diana Wynyard made her American debut.

"Victoria" Prospers.

Receipts for "Victoria Regina's four weeks engagement in Boston were about $110,500, which breaks all records for the theater.

Opening Nov. 1

"YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER," with Florence Reed as star, will come to the Grand Opera house on Nov. 1 under the auspices of the American Theater society. This comedy by Mark Reed is a New York hit recast for a tour. Besides Miss Reed the company includes Lawrence Grossmith, Agnes Doyle, Owen Davis Jr., Helen Flint, Boyd Davis, and Janice Hanford. In New York a company headed by Lucile Watson is playing its ninth month. The producer is Alfred de Liagre.

B'way's Best Bet.

"I'd Rather be Right" will open in the Alvin theater, New York, on Nov. 3. This satire on President Roosevelt, with George M. Cohan as star, is expected to be the greatest hit of the season.

Among the performers are the six Boots McKenna dancing girls; Sam Barton, bicyclist; Bob Edwards, tap dancer; Dorothy Lang, soubrette; Jay Jason, mimic; Coleman Clark and Bill Price, table tennis players; Carl Marx, strolling clown, and Donna Dae, singer and tap dancer.

● Benny Fields continues as the star of the cabaret bill at Chez Paree. Others in the troupe are Georges and Jalna, ballroom dancers; Dolly Srden, specialty dancer; Sunny Rice, Rosita Royce, and Gracie Barrie, singing girl. Henry Busse's orchestra has Maurie Stein's musicians for relief.

● Orrin Tucker's band has come to the Marine dining room of the Edgewater Beach hotel for an indefinite engagement. A male octet called the White Guards sings light opera songs. In the floor show are Bonnie Baker, prima donna; the Bailey sisters, harmony singers; Valerie Vitale, harpist, and Harriet Smith's ballet.

● Olivene Johnson, soprano with stage and radio experience, has become the prima donna of the floor shows in the Continental room of the Stevens hotel. Pierre and Temple remain as ballroom dancers. Sande Williams' orchestra plays for public dancing.

● The Empire room of the Palmer house announces the reestablishment of the "little show" 10 p. m. on its programs. Wayne King's dance orchestra continues, with Alexander Gray as singing star in the floor show. Other entertainers are Pierce and Harris, satirical dancers; Freddie Craig, in mathematical tricks, and Dolly Thon, Melba Cordes, Amy McKay, and the Abbott girls, dancers.

● Dancing classes every Tuesday night are a popular occasion on the programs at the Trianon and Aragon ballrooms. Ted Weems' band remains at the former and Freddie Martin's at the latter. Today Will Roland's band will supplement Weems', and Keith Beecher's will alternate with Martin's.

● The King's Jesters and Marjorie Whitney continue their indefinite engagement as entertainers in the Blue Fountain room of the La Salle hotel. George Howard is master of ceremonies.

● Tamara Doriva, Mexican singing girl of the Pan-American trio, is popular as an entertainer in the L'Aiglon restaurant. George Bay's orchestra plays concert programs and dance music.

● Cross examination of patrons on musical subjects before the microphone is a Monday night feature of the entertainment programs at the Blackhawk. Kay Kyser, band leader, questions the competitors and awards prizes for the best answers. Special performers in the floor show are Virginia Simms, Henry Babbitt, Sully Mason, and I. K. Bogue. Sunday afternoon dances have been resumed.

● The Royale Frolics, new revue, called "New Stars of 1938," has the following entertainers: Sid Tomack and the Reis Brothers, singers, comedians, and masters of ceremonies; Frances McCoy, blues singer; the Karre LeBaron trio, adagio dancers; Nancy Healy, soubrette; LeRoy and Sharp, ventriloquists; the Sinclair sisters, tap dancing team, and Jackie Hilliard, tenor. There are production numbers with the ballet of 28 girls. Mark Fisher's orchestra, Al Turk's swing band, and a third band play for dancing.

● The Hi-Hat club has the Mexican singing dancing girl, Armida, as its star. Her co-star is Willie Shore, dancer, comedian, and master of ceremonies.

● The Yacht club has a new show and a new band. The principals are Barnes and Steger, a comedy singing team; Nelson and Marsh, dance team; Lester and Irmajean, acrobatic dancers, and Violet Love. The band is Hugo De Paul's Radio orchestra.

● Featured at the Monte Cristo restaurant are Juan Pineda's orchestra and Don Fulton, pianist and vocalist.

● A new show opened at Colosimo's last Thursday. Featured are Marty Collins and Harry Peterson, comedians and masters of ceremonies, and Mlle. Zee Zee, a dancer held over from the last show. Others are Don, Donna and Don, dance trio; Lois Moree, solo dancer; the Costellos, singing duo; Shirley Herman, in comedy songs, and Don Enrico, tenor. Henri Gendron's dance band.

● The bill at Harry's New York cabaret includes Jack Irving, singer and master of ceremonies; Dorothy Wahl, and Margie Kelly, exotic dancers; Mildred Rock, singer of swing tunes; Florence Barlow, acrobatic dancer, and Dorothy Keith's ballet. Charles Engle's orchestra supplies the dance music.

● The Club Alabam show has Harriet Norris, singer and mistress of ceremonies; Marita Ryan, soubrette; Effie Burton, the Paramount trio, and other entertainers. Dancing to three dance bands.

● The Villa Moderne on the Skokie highway, open the year around, has Paul Meeker's dance band.

Even with a chiffon evening gown Miss Mary Frances O'Keefe, daughter of the John O'Keefes, found a bandanna useful for confining her dark curls during the season when the country clubs had their dancing parties outdoors.

Above: When this picture was taken at the Knollwood club Mrs. Robert C. Mitchell was wearing exotic earrings that not only were becoming but which fitted the oriental atmosphere cast by the colorful paper lantern near which she was standing.

(TRIBUNE PHOTOS)

Right: Miss Dorothy Clark is looking forward to a pleasant winter at home this year with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fredric R. Clark, in Hinsdale, having been graduated last June from the University of Illinois.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Barber of Greeley, Colo., was a recent guest on the north shore, where she visited Miss Gertrude Galloway in Winnetka. This picture was taken at the Sheridan Shore Yacht club, from where the girls often went sailing during Miss Barber's visit.

Social Season Once More Is Madly Awhirl

By Cousin Eve.

THIS silver-foxy world of ours already is beginning to spin in a sort of autumnal madness. It was highly agreeable that first Friday of the symphony to be one of many lunching at the Casino and an eyewitness of the parade of new high hats. For one thing they make one look taller. Mrs. Robert Dunham's hussar's shako faced with violet added inches to height already regal.

Somewhere on the premises Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank were having a small luncheon for Nicholas Roosevelt. If not at the table, it would have been fun to be under it, or a little disembodied spirit listening in. "Nick" Roosevelt is a Republican, a gentleman of the old Roosevelt school, and no longer a bachelor.

The symphony concert was an outstanding event. In years one has not seen the auditorium quite, quite full. And inasmuch as the hall was cold and women wore fluffy foxes and coats, it seemed to be overflowing.

An innovation was the little yellow silk bassinet in which Dr. Frederick Stock, our eminent conductor, now stands, and which covers him to the waist.

The program was enchanting, a superb mélange of Brahms, Glière, Debussy, with Wagner's overture to Tannhäuser. Could angels do better? The younger generation of symphony concert goers are quite a legion, and headed by Durand Smith they have at length achieved programs after their own hearts. It's a somber old world these days and who wants to have a plethora of savage, revolutionary music? The result of these more varied classical programs has been an influx of the younger set as box-holders. I find the names of Talcott Griswold and Francis and Edgar Stanton Jr. on these lists; of Mrs. Conway Olmsted, of the sisters, Mrs. Philip Miller and Mrs. Albert Madlener Jr., Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne, Durand Smith, and a score of his associates.

Among the strangers in the audience was the young and lovely Vicomtesse Jacques de Sibour, formerly Violette Selfridge, here for a day with her father, H. Gordon Selfridge. The latter has recently been forced from his cherished American citizenship by New Deal taxation. The Sibours are great travelers by air, and a book of their adventures would be absorbing and unique. Violette de Sibour is a slim pansey eyed brunette, ultrafeminine and with the most exquisite manners I know.

WHEN the gay young world and I went to tea one day last spring in Washington with Mrs. Natalie Campbell Pritchett, she was the acknowledged belle and toast of the town. This fascinating niece of Mrs. Sidney Cloman had a little upward slant to jade green eyes, a little upturn to the corners of her lips, a piquancy which had reduced the widowers of the diplomatic corps to mere pulp at her small feet.

This week she lay in the wreckage of a great airliner, at the foot of far mountains in the west, with others who liked to live dangerously. One wonders at the strange outworking of fate. Destiny leads a charming creature from a safe niche where her sole concern must have been—whose orchids should she wear that day? And she makes rendezvous with death in a bleak, snow filled valley.

Last Monday was a day that tried the stoutest hearts; that is, there was so much on, one couldn't manage it. The Casino, in fact, ran two great luncheons at once, the American operaites, led by Mrs. Ralph Winston, and the Lake Shore League of Voteresses, headed by Mrs. Carroll Sudler. I met Mrs. Archibald Freer in the foyer, [the high priestess of opera in English], and she was arrayed in a long black mantle and a smart gleaming helmet of silver sequins. So I called her Brunhilde, and to my surprise she said, "Don't tell me I look like that awful woman!" Each person in the world has his own ideas, but I always thought of Brunhilde as a noble figure, especially when she rushes up the cliff with a spear and shield and gives those gorgeous yodels.

The operatic part of this matinée was excerpts from "The Bride of Bagdad" sung by Mme. Freda Draper and Blair Stewart with ballet music by Theophil Voeks at the piano, music of excellent moments.

AN enjoyable interlude was the entertaining speech of Mme. Elaine de Sellem, program chairman. She said that Puccini was once asked why he never wrote operas around contralto heroines, and his reply was "because they have such terrible voices." And again she remarked that "The Bride of Bagdad" was real hope-to-die grand opera, because everybody died at the finish.

Personally, one has always felt the way Puccini did about contraltos, so I was ravished to hear this bit of history to back me up in one of many vagaries. Always excepting, however, Gertrud Wettergren. Jason Whitney, who was sitting near me at Miss Larned's table, said that Wettergren's lovely mezzo would be heard the first Monday in "Samson and Delilah"; and that, as I heard it last year, and saw it, too, was a supremely lovely thing. Mme. Wettergren sings the Delilah with allure and infinite style. Her costumes, I heard, were criticized at the "Met" as being other than Babylonian, but certainly they were marvelous to behold.

Jason Whitney Jr. made his debut in grand opera as the little boy who guides Samson to the temple at that performance. Mr. Whitney also referred to the first Saturday matinée, which is "The Man Without a Country," Walter Damrosch leading. That will be a great musical event of Nov. 6.

Very many leading women in musical circles lunched that day, and going in later to hear Dr. Horace Bridges I joined numbers of the set that works and prays politically, including Mrs. Augustus Carpenter, Mrs. Mitchell Follansbee, Mrs. John P. Wilson, Mrs. William Burry, Mrs. John Crerar, Mrs. Howard Phillips, Mrs. Arthur Bissell.

Horace Bridges had been scouting round in British politics, and he presented a clear picture of Great Britain's social legislation to benefit the poorer classes. He said it had covered a period of thirty years, and today had resulted in such peaceful conditions, including old age and unemployment insurance, that even the most rabid die-hards among conservatives would not go back to the old days.

But England did not form a brain trust to make these structural changes over night, said Mr. Bridges; it took thirty years and still goes peacefully on.

ON Wednesday night there was an interesting dinner at Lowden hall of Northwestern. Dr. and Mrs. Hugo Simon were hosts, and stood in a long line with President and Mrs. Walter D. Scott in honor of the twenty-five visiting German industrialists. Mrs. Simon and most of the ladies wore vivid summer prints which lightened the dark wainscoting of the handsome law department, where six long dinner tables were spread. On the walls are portraits, dusky in the candlelight, but I recognized Frank Lowden, Frank Loesch, John S. Miller, Judge Landis, and Dr. John Wigmore.

Back of my seat stood an American Indian, a Sioux in full panoply of war, eagle feathered and beaded, in wax; "a boy friend" Dr. Simon called him. At each table a leader in German circles presided. Charles Swift was a host, and never has one seen Claire Dux Swift, in vivid green satin, more radiant and full of life. She has latterly been making a cure in Germany.

MRS. JACOB BAUR'S tea at 1511 Astor street was held to promote the sale of boxes for next week's grand opera. The lovely little English house almost cracked under the pressure of patrons wanting Monday and opening night boxes. But O! what a difference from the days when liveried flunkies in maroon and gold served the "opera box" luncheons in Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick's Lake Shore drive house! Then ladies striving to popularize themselves took opera boxes for the sake of the invitation to lunch and entrée to this chic house, which had ever an air of exclusiveness.

Generosity has always paid good social dividends in Chicago, and the really unpopular people are those who have the wherewithal but don't do their bit toward the upkeep of our town. This is going to be a brilliant, busy season in Chicago, with the world's greatest singers in our city.

A CROWDED tea was that of the Drama league at the Blackstone, when the ballroom was full of new members and all would have been merry as a wedding bell. But—the president of years, Mrs. Clarence Hough, was retiring, and Mrs. Paul Steinbrecher was to reign in her stead. Mrs. Hough had a great way with her, and the Drama league luncheons of the past, replete with matinée idols and theatrical stars, were the best of fun. The program was done by two girls from the antipodes, Betty and Joan Rayner of New Zealand. Their show was a series of short folk opera á deux, in a modernistic setting original and full of art. They had been of late in Sweden, and had cunning Swedish skits, also some from old, old French days.

The fashionable artistic event of the week was at the Art institute, when Mr. and Mrs. James Ward Thorne received their friends at a showing of Mrs. Thorne's latest creations. These are enchanting architectural studies, miniature rooms reproducing interiors of famous old English and French castles. The hostess in simple black, with shoulder knot of orchids, received on the threshold of the exhibit, for inside all was dark as a pocket, and the only light came from the forty small dioramas, around which profiles, well known in our local society, could be discerned. Music was provided by the organ in the beautiful sixteenth century chapel on the right. I never did make up my mind which period or room was the loveliest, all are so fascinating. To see the black and white chambre moderne one must go again, because of the tiny spangled fan left open on the divan.

A small corridor with mirror and consoles, Adam chairs, and divine stair rail is something to study, and the bed chamber à la Henry II. is again something, with brocaded bed and armorial bearings. Numbers of men were there, among them Russell Tyson, Walter B. Smith, Leeds Mitchell, Wallace Kirk, John May, Robert Carr, Walter Kirk, and Cyrus H. Adams. In the bright lights and among the flowers of an adjoining room Mrs. J. Newton Perry was pouring tea, motto vivace as they say in the musical world.

THE St. Luke's fashion show at the Stevens had a tremendous success this year, financial and artistic. The money rolled in, patrons loved it better than ever, and the adjectives distinguished, perfect, stunning, and épatant were applied to it. Therefore why the rumor that this is the last St. Luke's fashion show? It would be like having a private gold mine in your own back garden and letting the grass grow over it.

I went twice and was struck by the loveliness of the young things

Pasadena Golf Fans Form New Select Club

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL. There's nothing old-fashioned about the "Gay Nineties," Midwick Country club's new club-within-a-club! Its membership includes some of the "best names" in southland society, most of them Pasadenans, who devote themselves every Sunday quite seriously to improving their golf.

"Gay, because some day we hope to play in the 90's," explained Mrs. Paul J. Pitner, smilingly. She is a former Chicagoan who is women's golf chairman for Midwick. Working with her on the winter project, which started last Sunday, are Mrs. Aubrey Bullock-Webster [Phyllis Campion] and Miss Abigail von Schlegell. Incidentally, Miss Von Schlegell and Capt. Bullock-Webster were runners-up for first prize at the première when Eric Pedley and Mrs. John Jewett Garland captured the trophies.

Those best known in Chicago who expect to follow through are the Pitners, the Harlan B. Eldreds, Miss Louise Hunter, Joseph Hixon, James and Rufus Spalding. Others are Mrs. Pedley, the Shannon Crandalls, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Nobles, the William W. Valentines, Gail Burcks, Mrs. Donald O'Melveny, Misses Constance Mathews and Julia McWilliams.

ONE of the most worthwhile cultural attractions in Pasadena, the World Affairs assemblies, entered its seventh season this week with an opening dinner at Hotel Vista del Arroyo. The events present prominent speakers of the day, including this time Dr. Claude A. Buss, correspondent in Nanking for the Associated Press, and Dr. Chester Rowell, publisher and state university regent.

Among those acting as hosts were Mrs. William C. Free, Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, Mrs. Willoughby Rodman, Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, Miss Soo Yong, Edwin S. Gillette, and Edwin Gillette Jr.

Patrons for the Huntington Memorial Hospital auxiliary benefit bridge Friday included several Chicago names: Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Mrs. George A. Ogle, Mrs. Thomas Winter, and Mrs. George Ellery Hale.

Mrs. John H. Hardin, formerly of Hubbard Woods, in the capacity of social chairman for Dr. Theodore G. Soares' Neighborhood church dinner Friday evening, transformed the setting into one of autumnal glory. What a perfect background the colored grape balloons piled in the center of shining gold grape leaves for Dr. Soares' reading of "Autumn in America" from the writings of Daniel Culross Peattie! Dr. Soares needs no introduction as a former member of the University of Chicago faculty.

MRS. CHARLES F. MORSE, who arrived recently from Chicago to resume her winter residence at Hotel Huntington, is happy to get in ahead of the tourist rush and snatch a bit of rest. Ahead of her were the F. H. Bartletts, who will open their home here about Dec. 1, and Mrs. Gertrude K. Andrews. Mrs. Morse missed the George Marcys, now in Chicago. She plans a trip to Hotel del Coronado this week.

The John Shaws of Chicago have arrived in La Jolla to visit his parents, the Lewis B. Shaws. They were entertained last Sunday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morris of La Jolla.

Society was interested in the debut Monday night of Ellen Wilson McAdoo as a concert singer. Her mother, Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo of Pasadena, is justly proud of her daughter's talent and of the reception given her by the crowd of music patrons who motored over to Glendale to hear her sing as guest soloist with Modest Altshuler's Pasadena Federal Symphony orchestra.

And, musically speaking, Los Angeles society is busy indeed with preparations for the coming of the San Francisco Opera company to the Shrine auditorium, Nov. 15 to 20. Mrs. Frederick Williamson is general chairman for the women's committee, which includes, among several hundred members, Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond, Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, Mrs. Carlton P. Burke, Mrs. William Jennings Bryan Jr., Mrs. Carrie Parsons Bryant, formerly of Chicago; Mrs. Charles Ackert Banks, Mrs. Pietro Cimini, Mrs. E. L. Doheny, Mrs. Melvyn Douglas [Helen Gahagan], Mrs. Cecil Frankel, Mrs. A. P. Giannini, Mrs. A. H. Giannini, Mrs. William L. Honnold, also an ex-Chicagoan; Mrs. Albert Sherman Hoyt, Mrs. Warner Janssen [Ann Harding], Mrs. George Ellery Hale, Mrs. Robert Hunter, Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, Mrs. Robert A. Millikan, once of Chicago; Mrs. William B. Munro, Mrs. Henry M. Robinson, Mrs. Willoughby Rodman, Mrs. Rufus B. von KleinSmid, and another Chicagoan, Mrs. Archibald Young.

AND from the sublime to the gay went some of the same folk when they attended the smart opening of Hollywood's new night spot, Waikiki. Don Blanding came up from San Diego by plane to attend, and Prince Lei Lani was master of ceremonies.

Dr. and Mrs. George Williamson [of the University of Chicago] have been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Williamson, in Los Angeles.

Trinity Episcopal church in Highland Park has been chosen for the wedding of Miss Caroline Bullard, daughter of the Sellar Bullards of Goleta Valley, Cal., and Richard Hubbard Howard of Providence, R. I., on Nov. 27. Bridesmaids will be Miss Adelaide Ball of Winnetka, Miss Janet Bard and Miss Margaret Smith of Highland Park; Miss Leigh Fletcher of New York, Miss Janice Sprague of Orange, N. J., and Miss Betty Ridgely of New York. Mrs. Charles A. Stoke II. of Santa Barbara will be her sister's matron of honor, and a younger sister, Jean Bullard, maid of honor.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT

Miss Florence Kennicott Rollins, whose engagement to be married to Leroy William Rugen is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orrin U. Rollins of The Grove, Glenview. Mr. Rugen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman P. Rugen, who also live in Glenview.

Educators Are to Pay Tribute to Col. Parker

By Betty Browning.

AT a meeting Wednesday evening at the Chicago Woman's club theater the untutored farm boy who became the founder of modern education will receive the tribute of the city where he made his greatest contribution. A dozen civic bodies are combining to sponsor a program in recognition of Col. Francis W. Parker's work in the public schools.

This free public meeting is planned for Chicago citizens preliminary to a conference of the Progressive Education association at the Palmer house Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, when educators from all parts of the country will observe the 100th anniversary of Col. Parker's birth.

"LET US CONSIDER THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS" will be the theme of the meeting Wednesday. The announcement of the program bears this quotation from Col. Parker's writings: "Character constantly realizing itself in practical citizenship, in community life, in complete living, is the immediate, everlasting and only purpose of the school."

Speakers will be Mrs. William S. Hefferan, member of the board of education, who studied under Col. Parker at the then Cook County Normal school; Benjamin F. Buck, retired assistant superintendent of the Chicago public schools; Mrs. Raymond S. Knapp, vice president of the Illinois League of Women Voters; and Dr. Jesse Newlon, professor of education at Teachers' college, Columbia university. Arnold Bear, president of the citizens' school committee, will preside.

The Chicago Woman's club is giving its theater for the meeting in memory of Mrs. Francis W. Parker, a leader in the club from 1885 until her death in 1898.

Other organizations coöperating in sponsoring the meeting, besides the citizens' school committee, are the Woman's City club, the Chicago Church federation, the Chicago and Northern District Association of Colored Women, the Chicago Woman's Aid, the City Club of Chicago, the Conference of Jewish Women's Organizations, the joint committee on public school affairs, the public affairs committee of the Union League club, and the Catholic Women's league.

"WHERE IS EDUCATION GOING?" is the theme of the conference opening Thursday. The Francis W. Parker school and the Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education jointly are sponsoring the three day meeting, together with the Progressive Education association.

Mrs. Emmons Blaine, whose interest in the work of Col. Parker made it possible for him to found the school which bears his name, will preside at the first general session Thursday evening. "The Social Philosophy of Col. Parker, Its Influence in the Past, and Its Implications for Today and Tomorrow" will be discussed by Mrs. Hefferan, Miss Flora J. Cooke, and William Heard Kilpatrick of the school of education of Northwestern university. Miss Cooke, who is honorary chairman of the conference, taught under Col. Parker when he was head of the Cook County Normal school, and came with him to his own school as its first principal.

An informal reception for Col. Parker's former students and faculty associates at the Cook County Normal school will precede the meeting.

SUBSEQUENT sessions will be devoted to "What Is the Outlook for Youth in America?" "The Child as a Whole," "Education and Social Problems," with "Problems Teachers Must Face" the subject of the final session Saturday. A special dinner session Friday night will be devoted to the conference theme, "Where Is Education Going?" Sectional programs on the principal subjects in the school curriculum will supplement the general sessions. Raymond W. Osborne, principal of the Francis W. Parker school, is chairman of the conference.

The symposium on congenital syphilis held Monday at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street, will be the first of a number of similar meetings in various parts of the city, if resolutions adopted by representatives of women's organizations at that gathering are followed through by those organizations.

It was decided that those present should spread the information that the Chicago board of health and the Illinois Social Hygiene league are ready and willing to be called upon as sources of information or service in obtaining Wassermann-Kahn tests or treatment.

Centers of treatment accessible and offering privacy and protection to pregnant women seeking treatment are to be sought through coöperation with the board of health. Routine blood tests for all pregnant women, regardless of whether they may have had such tests previously, were recommended.

The symposium was sponsored by the Chicago Woman's club, the woman's division of the mayor's committee on the prevention and control of syphilis and the coöperative educational project in the venereal disease campaign of the Chicago board of health and the Illinois Social Hygiene league. Dr. Rachelle S. Yarros presided.

AT Mendota Tuesday and at the Hotel Sherman Thursday will be held the last two of a series of regional institutes under the auspices of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Edward J. Lehman, president, will speak at both meetings on "Forward with a Purpose," the federation's theme for the year, and state chairmen will present the plans and accomplishments of their respective departments.

Departmental conferences will be held during the afternoon sessions at both institutes. Among the speakers Thursday afternoon will be Ferre C. Watkins, former commander of the Illinois American Legion; Lorraine L. Blair, executive director of the Woman's Finance forum; Dr. Leonard D. White, civil service authority; Philip Maxwell, promotion editor of THE TRIBUNE; State Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, and Dr. D. J. Davis, dean of the University of Illinois medical school.

A seminar for junior members will be held Thursday evening at the Hotel Sherman. State chairmen and chairmen and members of junior groups will conduct a forum, and objectives for the year will be presented by district junior chairmen.

AT a recent meeting the Illinois Federation of Music Clubs pledged its support of the Chicago Civic Opera company during the coming season. Ticket sales will be conducted and publicity given through member organizations.

The Chicago district of the federation will have Paul Longone, director of the opera company, as the principal speaker at its annual luncheon Tuesday noon at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street. Mrs. Louis E. Yager, state president, will be a guest. A musical program will be given by contest winners at the 1937 convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs in Indianapolis, Ind.

"Visual Education" will be the topic of the October meeting of the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow at the Auditorium hotel. Mrs. Alma B. Rogers, director of visual education of the St. Louis county schools; A. Lawren Brown, educational director of the Investors' syndicate, and Mrs. Charles E. Merriam will be among the speakers presented by Miss Myrtle Carpenter, education chairman.

Dr. Frank Freeman, representing the American Council of Education; Noble J. Puffer, superintendent of Cook county schools; Carl Roden, librarian of the Chicago Public library; W. J. Hamilton, superintendent of schools of Oak Park; Mrs. Edward W. Jackson, membership chairman of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers; and Mrs. Frank E. Richart, chairman of education of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, also will speak.

The Women's Finance forum will have Earl Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural association and vice president of the American farm bureau, as speaker at its monthly meeting at 6 o'clock Thursday at the Hotel Sherman.

At the morning session for homemakers at 10:30 o'clock Thursday James P. Conway, financial editor of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, will speak on "Behind the Financial News." Mrs. Lorraine L. Blair, executive director, will preside at the evening session, and Mrs. Frank P. [illegible] will conduct the morning meeting.

sweeping down the double marble steps and out upon the high walk. And also "frappée" with the ability of the women behind it all, and the ingenuity of the geniuses who create the show. This year it was Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, tall and radiant beauty, who climaxed the Chicago wedding, and the Junoesque stateliness of Barbara Borland in sheaths of satin and tulle. After the Mendelssohn march came the spilling of a magnificent parade of Chinese wedding garments to the tune of the Chinese pipes and cymbals, and the sight of lackered Chinese sedan chairs, and little toddling bride and maid.

Of new things, large muffs were borne by the fur bearing girls, and there were headdresses and veils in general, and Mrs. Kim Salisbury made such a hit in leopard velvet negligee that four patrons strove for it.

Mrs. Ford Carter's Greek floral scene with black Ionic columns holding masses of Easter lilies was a foil for the fairness of five blonde beauties—Barbara Williams, Pussy Paepcke, and three others—whose backs in snowy white Grecian draperies I failed to recognize. Fay Carter's taste is marvelous, and her chocolate colored messengers in white outfits delivering black and white boxes of flowers stole the show. Of the debbies who walked or rather floated on in white tulle ball costumes and carried their hands and arms quietly and with distinction, Kay Goodman showed her European training, as did Clarice Hamill and young Mrs. Joseph Ryerson Jr. Helen Dawes had a high sweeping black hat, and looked a dream. Mary Gardner was wrapped in a long, long mantle, and Betty Armour, fair and slim, was a true child of this branch of the Armour family.

Benefit Events Prominent in Clubs' Plans

SEVERAL benefits interesting not only in themselves but also for the activities to be fostered through them, are projected for the next three week-ends.

A Halloween frolic and dinner-dance is to be given at the Palmer house next Saturday evening under the auspices of Johanna No. 9, United Order of True Sisters.

Next Sunday evening Infants' Aid will hold a harvest dinner-dance at the Hotel Sherman.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be presented by Temple Sholom sisterhood in a lecture, "The Relationship of the Individual to the Community," on Sunday evening, Nov. 7, at the temple, 3480 Lake Shore drive.

A "Torch Light Fiesta" will be given Saturday evening, Nov. 13, at the Standard club to raise funds for the Blind Service association's work among the blind of the city.

THE dinner-dance next Saturday evening is sponsored by the ways and means committee of Johanna lodge to finance the educational work that is its prime interest. More than 40 boys and girls have received college training through the organization's scholarship fund. In 1936 Braille workers sponsored by the lodge transcribed 55,000 pages of Braille, including classics, treatises on law and music, and works in foreign languages.

The first sonotone used for the hard of hearing in Chicago was installed by the lodge in the Bell school three years ago, and at the Victory workshop in the Haven school forty young men and women, who are hard of hearing, work daily to make articles that are sold for them by members of the lodge.

The committee for adult education is interested in a class of 35 women that meets at the Healy school. A collection of pictures purchased by the lodge through the Public School Art society has been placed in six schools.

Mrs. Jesse Nathanson is chairman of the dinner-dance, with Mrs. Jack Dreyfus as vice chairman. Founded 64 years ago, Johanna No. 9 numbers more than 800 members and is one of 37 organizations affiliated with the national organization, the United Order of True Sisters. Mrs. Lawrence C. Smith is president of the lodge.

THE harvest dinner-dance given by Infants' Aid will bring additional sums to the endowment fund for the premature infant station established by the organization at the Sarah Morris hospital in memory of Hortense Shoen Joseph. This fund so far has reached $57,000 of the $65,000 required. The station is maintained at a cost of $5,000 annually. Mrs. Lawrence Du Bois is general chairman of the party.

Proceeds of Mrs. Roosevelt's lecture Nov. 7 will be used for the educational and philanthropic projects sponsored by Temple Sholom. Mrs. A. James Riffkind, general chairman of the event, will introduce Mrs. Roosevelt. Among those assisting with arrangements are Mrs. Lester L. Stern, president of the sisterhood; Mrs. Louis Binstock, Mrs. Erwin Mautner, Mrs. Henry I. Monheimer, and Mrs. Samuel Schwartz. Mrs. Jess Raban is chairman of ticket sales and Mrs. Louis B. Hoffing of reservations.

Mrs. A. James Riffkind. [Youngberg Photo.]

A Goddess of Light will be selected and crowned at the Torch Light Fiesta planned by the Blind Service association for Nov. 13. This annual frolic also will offer dancing, entertainment by stage, screen, and radio performers, games, and fortune telling.

In the 14 years since the association was founded by Mrs. Gottfried D. Bernstein, still its president, the work of the organization has been extended to from seven to several hundred blind persons. A clothes closet through which garments are distributed to the needy, an employment office, and vocational work are among the projects directed entirely by volunteers from the association's headquarters at 185 North Wabash avenue.

Mrs. Gottfried D. Bernstein. [Harry Johnson Photo.]

A sale of merchandise made by the blind, sponsored annually by the association, will be held the week of Nov. 22 at Mandel Brothers' store. During the past year 36 blind women were kept busy hemming towels that were sold for them through the organization.

A concert by 50 blind musicians is given every year under the auspices of the association. The educational department provides 55 readers to assist blind high school and university students daily from 10 until 5 o'clock. Medical care, hospitalization, milk and eggs for undernourished children, camp vacations, radio and talking books, scholarships and recreation are among other services provided by the association.

ISADOR CHERN chapter of Rest Haven will hold its annual dinner-dance next Sunday evening at the College Inn of the Hotel Sherman. Proceeds will go toward the maintenance of the Rest Haven Convalescent home at 1919 Prairie avenue. Fannie I. Chern is chairman.

A bundle of old clothes or household equipment for the Resale shop at 4552 Cottage Grove avenue will be the price of admission to a dessert bundle bridge sponsored by Sarah Greenebaum lodge, No. 16, United Order of True Sisters, at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow at the Hotel Sherry. Profits of the shop go to charity.

The Daughters of Zion Infant Home and Day nursery, California avenue and Hirsch boulevard, will receive the proceeds of several events occurring this week. The North Shore auxiliary will have a program by Eva Baille Cohen tomorrow afternoon at the Edgewater Beach hotel, and Sadie Stern Merrel will give a reading of "The Women" before the welfare auxiliary tomorrow afternoon at the home.

Finish Your Own Furniture, Save Expense

Make your bedroom one of the prettiest rooms in your home! How to do it is told in the booklet, "Beautiful Bedrooms," by Edith Weigle, Tribune furniture stylist. Get a copy today at either of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

By Edith Weigle.

THE answer to furnishing a room inexpensively, yet with charm and style, is found in unfinished furniture. You can choose from an enormous array of pieces, most of them in conservative modern design and all of a good, clear birch which has been already sanded and is simply waiting for your paint brush or wood stain.

If you haven't the time to do the finishing job, it can be done for you to your order. This means you can work out any color scheme you wish, making your room truly individual. You can, for example, have bedroom pieces done in an exquisite pale pinky-beige tone, or in white trimmed with Yale blue, or in tan with brown, or simply in one of the stunning blond finishes.

A SMART way to proceed is to choose your wall paper first, or your draperies. Then take a sample along when you go shopping for your furniture and have it painted to match one of the colors exactly. Even the highest paid decorator in the country can do nothing wiser than this.

A few years ago it was not possible to get really well styled unfinished furniture. The items looked as if they were made for the kitchen or the dinette. But that is no longer the case. Today you can find good looking groupings in unfinished woods.

An exhibit I saw recently proves the point. It was an interior called "the washable room" because practically everything in it can be tubbed. The slip cover on the comfortable armchair and the bedspreads, for example, were of printed mohair, which can be laundered with only 5 per cent shrinkage.

A round stool and the vanity bench were done in a pretty blue striped cotton which is not a bit afraid of soap and water. The attractive white net draperies were also washable, while the Venetian blinds, too, may be wiped off with a wet cloth.

THE washable walls were done in a pale pastel blue. The floor covering was a handsome beige rug figured in self tone. Pottery accessories were in light blue, and on the long wall was a series of Japanese prints in matching bamboo frames, the prints picking up the blue again.

You'll be surprised at the low prices on all this furniture, and at the varied combinations you can have.

There are even specially made pieces that go around a corner and fit under windows. There are low bookcases that can be used as seats, and a nest of tables strong enough to sit on if you need an extra parking place or two. There are open shelves that are perfect for books and that can be fitted together or used singly, as the occasion demands.

Yes, unfinished furniture is the answer to the wistful query: "How can I make my home beautiful on an emaciated budget?"

For information about where this furniture may be purchased write Miss Weigle inclosing a 3 cent stamp for your reply, or telephone the Tribune Public Service office, Superior 0100.

"I bought this bungalow for one-half its 1929 cost!"

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Ericksen

Arthur W. Ericksen, 7653 S. Seeley Ave., tells how watching Tribune want ads uncovered a bargain in a home.

"WE DIDN'T believe that it was possible to find as substantial and roomy a house as this for $5,500.

"As we have no children and both my wife and I are employed, it seemed best to live in an apartment. When we decided to move from our last apartment we looked in the Tribune want ads and found another apartment we liked.

Consider a House

"One of our friends, however, was very enthusiastic about a bungalow he had just bought through a Tribune want ad. He suggested that we would be much better off to buy while real estate was still a bargain.

"The next day we looked in the Tribune, checked several want ads and that evening inspected three or four of the houses from the outside. We called up the advertisers to learn the prices, and when we talked to Charles C. Cross & Associates, 2413 W. 79th St., we were surprised to learn that the price of a bungalow they advertised was only $5,500, with $1,250 cash.

Glad They Bought

"The next day we saw the inside of the house. It was roomy and well laid out. It had six rooms, tile bath, garage, steam heat and tile roof. We learned that the house had sold for $10,500 in 1929. We decided then and there to buy. We are very glad we did."

● Would you be interested in buying a home if you could find an attractive bungalow or house at a price which would suit your pocketbook? Whether you want a large house or a small one, whatever your requirements are as to price, location, architectural type or financing, the Tribune want ad section can help you find what you want as it has helped thousands of families.

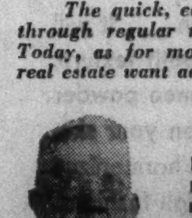
The quick, easy way to realize your desire for a home is through regular reading of the Tribune want ad section. Today, as for more than 20 years, the Tribune prints more real estate want advertising than any other Chicago newspaper.



Charles C. Cross, President, Charles C. Cross & Associates 2413 W. 79th St.

"We find the Tribune the best classified advertising medium we have used, and results we have consistently obtained have been very gratifying.

"At least 75% of our appropriation for advertising is spent in your medium."

Catholic Club "Tombola" Is to Aid Charity

"WHAT is a tombola?" is the question asked most often of members of the Illinois Club for Catholic Women as preparations go forward for the organization's charity ball next Saturday evening at the Stevens hotel. "Tombola," the name given the party, as the club is translating it, signifies dancing, games, prizes, and a floor show featuring stage, screen, and radio celebrities.

Mrs. Frank J. Lewis. [Boozer Photo.]

A milk fund for the tuberculous poor, started last spring at the suggestion of Mrs. Frank J. Lewis, president of the club, and named for her, will receive the proceeds of the party. This fund is the organization's principal charity, and is administered on a nonsectarian basis by a board of directors independent of the club.

Fifty-five families, described as those "most needy," are assisted through the fund, which provides them with food, clothing, milk, cod liver oil, and household necessities. Members of these families either are tubercular or are susceptible to the disease through unwholesome living conditions. Fifteen of the families are the special charges of the juniors of the Illinois Club for Catholic Women and of the Catholic Men's club. Both groups are coöperating in arrangements for the tombola.

IT was her husband who drew Mrs. Lewis' attention to the needs of Chicago's tubercular poor. Mr. Lewis has given a chapel to the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, and long has been interested in its work. He found that many patients, after leaving the sanitarium, were unable to afford the diets prescribed to maintain their improved health. Mrs. Lewis, who has headed the Illinois Club for Catholic Women since its founding sixteen years ago, reported the situation to her organization last spring and, as a result, the milk fund was created.

Started primarily to provide vital foods, the purposes of the fund have since expanded to meet other needs of the fifty-five families in its charge. For example, work is found for unemployed fathers, and children are given the clothing and carfare necessary to keep them in school.

The board of directors governing the fund is headed by Mrs. Lewis, and among those serving on it are State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, Walter J. Cummings, Mrs. George V. McIntyre, Mrs. Elizabeth Conkey, Bernard J. Fallon, Joseph L. Gill, Judge John P. McGoorty, Mrs. John Kellogg, Joseph J. Cavanagh, Albert W. Duggan, and Mrs. James McAlear.

Through the efforts of the league, ninety-one churches and twenty-seven motion picture theaters in Chicago have installed special hearing equipment. The league also has been instrumental in having separate classes for the hard of hearing established in eight public schools.

Organized more than twenty-one years ago, the league has some 300 active members. Headquarters are maintained at 64 East Lake street, where a welfare department and an employment bureau function. Lip reading classes are held, used clothing is accepted and reconditioned for the use of the needy, and medical attention is provided through the coöperation of physicians.

The fourth division joint Americanism committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution will depart from its customary civic preoccupations to give a donation party for the Martha Washington Home for Dependent Crippled Children at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow at the First National Bank building. Articles for children between the ages of 2 and 16 are needed.

THE annual card party of the South Side Catholic Woman's club next Friday evening at the Stevens hotel will raise money not only for Misericordia hospital, but for the scholarship recently pledged by the club to Quigley seminary in memory of its founder, the late Mrs. Charles J. Trainor. Mrs. Frank McGurk and Mrs. John J. McEncroe are chairmen of the party. Mrs. Michael J. Devaney heads the club.

Boys and girls will be helped to further their education through proceeds of a Halloween party to be given by Chicago chapter, No. 43, Women of the Moose, at 8 o'clock Saturday evening in Moose hall, 327 Plymouth court. Through the Alumni association scholarships are awarded to students who wish to attend college after leaving Mooseheart, the children's home sponsored by the Order of the Moose.

Thorne Exhibit Is Reminiscent of a Fairyland

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE beautiful miniature rooms of Mrs. James Ward Thorne which have been installed in the Children's museum [gallery I] of the Art institute, remain the most entrancing exhibition of the season and give every promise of continuing as a brilliant attraction through the winter.

You will not recognize the gallery when you go into it and the longer you stay and revel in the myriad delicacies of decoration and design that Mrs. Thorne has contrived, the further you will feel yourself from any known location. The institute vanishes; Michigan avenue becomes a bypath in another world; the very city of Chicago takes on an air of improbability, so far does Mrs. Thorne plunge you into other cities and other times.

The rooms are nearly equally divided between England and France. They are perfect reproductions of originals and should not be confused with doll house construction. Skilled craftsmen have followed Mrs. Thorne's instructions and each tiny bit of furniture or decoration is authentic as well as beautiful. She herself has arranged each piece of furniture in the various rooms. Some of the things are so tiny fingers cannot handle them and they have been set in place with the help of tweezers deftly manipulated.

IT might be of interest to describe the creation of one of the rooms, the Adam one for choice. This room was reproduced from that in a house in London which is still standing, and is occupied now by the Courtauld institute of the University of London. The house was designed by Robert Adam for the countess of Howe, who gave him the commission when she was seventy years old. It was completed in four years and the countess lived in it for some six years afterward. Adam, the architect, was in the habit of designing all the furniture and accessories of his houses, which accounts for the beauty and simplicity of his rooms. This Adam room in the exhibit is a gem.

The other rooms are equally beautiful and are fully as authentic. Mrs. Thorne's taste never falters. Be sure to look carefully through any windows and every open door. Some of the most delightful parts of the rooms are the glimpses into the outside corners, now a landscape, now a garden, or a boudoir or hall. And note carefully the accessories. Do not overlook the wolf hound asleep on the rug in the baronial hall, or the cat curled on the bench in the friendly English kitchen. Look at the wallpapers [many of the patterns are lovely] and the drapes and the floors. Many of the exquisitely made carpets and rugs are the work of members of the Needlework guild of the Art institute.

THE final model, as you make the round, is a cathedral interior. From the magnificent building the music of an organ flows. There is a simple mechanical device to insure the music, but, take my word for it, the impression one gets is much greater in one's ignorance than when one knows the secret. The lapping red flames that lick and fondle the logs in the open fireplaces also have a mechanical device to keep them in motion, but here again it is much more fun not to inquire too closely into how the miracle is achieved. Knowing too much about a lovely thing detracts from its glamor.

Mrs. Thorne will give a series of lectures on her models in Fullerton hall every Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, through November 22. Tomorrow she is speaking on the Queen Anne room, the Chippendale [Chinese influence] and the Adam room.

This group of rooms has never been shown before. The cost of installation was so great that it was found necessary to make an entrance charge. There is a fee of 25 cents for an adult, 10 cents for children under fifteen.

The exhibition will remain for six months and it is well worth seeing. The rooms are perfectly delightful.

ANOTHER delightful exhibition, whose only fault is that it closes October 30, is that of paintings by C. Curry Bohm in the Hoosier gallery, 211 West Wacker drive. If one were asked to name the man who can paint poems, Mr. Bohm would be he. These lovely landscapes are as wistful, as delicate, as charming and as intriguing as a verse from the Song of Solomon. When the fruit trees [in a painting] are in bloom Mr. Bohm conveys the impression that dreams have been caught for a moment on earth; when the world is running with water in the spring or frozen in silence in the winter, Mr. Bohm makes one feel the innate beauty in mist and damp, in frost and in snow.

Against the titles of his paintings on my catalog is nothing but a series of exclamation points banking the word "lovely." It seems almost stupid to try to convey anything by that much used word and yet these paintings are lovely, lovely, lovely. They weave a spell whose magic is impossible to resist.

Mattie Lietz shares the gallery with Mr. Bohm. Her work is entirely different, suggesting John Nolf on occasions and other painters of more sober, realistic inclination than is Mr. Bohm. Yet Miss Lietz paints well and has a definite message. Her young "Dean" is a vigorous lad and her "Morning Mail" and "Grand Detour" one would hate to miss. Her painting is decidedy interesting.

The All-Illinois Society of Fine Arts is sponsoring an exhibit of paintings by Louise H. Jamieson in the Mezzanine gallery, Drake hotel, during October. There are several attractive canvases here, particularly "At Dawn," "By the Waters of Minnetonka," "Nosegay," and "Glow of Spring."

The second annual Lithuanian art exhibit closed recently at Mandel brothers, in the Club Woman's bureau. There was a stunning group of water colors in the show and some interesting examples of handicraft. Oskar Gross, Chicago portrait painter, was a jury of one to award honors and he chose a water color by Edward Smotelis [a sound choice in that medium] and the landscape, "Autumn," by Mikas Sileikis, in oil. This last selection may be questioned. The outstanding painting in oil was the delightful portrait "Onyte," by Estelle Pralle. The landscape looks like student work beside it. Although it was planned to send only the two winning works back to Lithuania for exhibit, it is greatly to be hoped that it will be found possible to include Miss Pralle's beautiful canvas. It seems a pity this should not be seen as an illustration of the most sympathetic Lithuanian painting Chicago can produce.

Glen Sheffer, a member of the Palette and Chisel club and a painter of perfectly stunning figure studies, draped and nude, against brilliant backgrounds, is opening his studio at 815 Rush street to students. His classes are Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights from 7 to 10 o'clock, Saturdays from 1 to 4 o'clock, and Sundays from 10 o'clock in the morning to 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Sudduth Goff is holding a successful exhibit of his portraits through October in Louisville, Ky., at the J. B. Speed Memorial museum.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Dec. 20, 1888.

DEAR JULIA: Almost Christmas! The holiday time has brought many parties. Many fashionable homes have debutante daughters and this winter society mothers are following the New York mode and are giving receptions at which their daughters "come out."

Will laughs at that expression, asking whether they ever "go in," after coming out. He thinks the young ladies are put through a good deal too much social drudgery, when a sort of ritual is made of the presentation to society, and he wonders why any girl wants all this fuss. But the girls this winter are so lovely and they look very well. I don't believe it is hurting them.

Another grievance Will has against society is the late hours. I admit they are hard on men who must go downtown next morning, but I fear there's nothing to be done about it.

My poor husband unburdened himself to me last evening, as we sat at home in our wraps, long after the hour indicated on an invitation we had accepted.

"Look here," Will began, heatedly. I obediently "looked here" and he orated: "I'm tired of this society business. I don't mind dinners, because we go at a proper time, six o'clock. We'd be thought impolite if we didn't arrive till six-thirty. But when I'm invited to an evening reception, I'm told that, though my host has set the time as eight, he'll be surprised if I get there before eight-thirty, will think I'm from the country and don't know the rules of society."

"O, now Will," I said. "Don't get excited."

"Who's getting excited? All right; I wait until eight-thirty to reach the place where the reception is being held. I find I'm the first guest. I feel funny. I dash upstairs to the dressing room, hang around as long as possible waiting for the masculine half of another couple to arrive and keep me in countenance as I join you and greet my host and hostess. By nine there are a good many guests in the parlors, but some people even wait until ten to arrive . . . very elegant, of course, much more fashionable than a poor old farmer like me. [Will tries hard to sneer, but makes poor work of it.]

"Dreading to be first, guests come later and later and the hour of departure is thus thrust far into the night. I get home and into bed by one o'clock, if I'm lucky. But, of course, I must arise at six-thirty as usual, in order to get to my office at eight. It's taking the bloom from my cheek," he ended whimsically, "and religion from my soul."

Poor dear! He's right, I know, but society is a hard mistress.

One of the handsomest parties of the week was that given by Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McKay at Kinsley's to introduce their daughter, Marian, and their niece, Miss Slade, to society. Both are attractive girls and will have a gay season, I know.

Another reception [this one took place in the afternoon, so Will didn't go] was that given by Mrs. John T. Lester, to present her lovely daughter May. A charming figure this debutante was, in her white embroidered mull gown. Mrs. Lester wore a white gown, the front embroidered in color, exquisite.

An afternoon reception lately which I enjoyed especially was that of Mrs. C. R. Corbin, who entertained a group of literary women in her beautiful new home, 597 Dearborn avenue. Among those I saw there were Miss Frances E. Willard, Miss Eliza Allen Starr, Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, Dr. Mary Thompson, Dr. Leila Bedell, Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, Mrs. E. W. Blatchford, and Mrs. J. W. Doane.

And now, Merry Christmas, dear friend. We shall look for you in Chicago soon. Lovingly,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Marian McKay is now Mrs. Marian McKay LeRoy, of the Ambassador hotel. May Lester first married P. D. Armour Jr., and, her husband dying early, she married P. A. Valentine.

OLD CHICAGO HARTHSTONES.

5049 Northwest Highway.

Mrs. Charles E. Jennings sends us the story of an old house, built in the fifties by an English couple, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Turnbull. Still standing on the Northwest highway, the house is in good condition, for its age, but it does not look as it did when the original careful owners occupied it. This locality was known as the Town of Jefferson. Mr. and Mrs. Turnbull, the builders, after living in the house for some time, erected a large barn and, in celebration of the event, gave a dance to which friends and neighbors were invited, many coming from as far south as Maplewood.

The Turnbulls having prospered, they decided to make a trip to England to visit their family. Returning, they took passage on the ill-fated steamer Atlantic, which foundered off the coast of Nova Scotia in March, 1873. They were both drowned. As they had no family here and were not naturalized citizens, the settling of their estate was a complicated matter, everything being sold at auction.

"Every time I pass this house, writes Mrs. Jennings, "it is with a feeling of sorrow, and I half expect to see Mrs. Turnbull suddenly appear in the doorway, with her pet poodle dogs loudly greeting me with joyous yelps."

Mrs. J. M. Van Valkenburgh writes regarding the old building at 131st street and Indiana avenue that it was an inn, originally half the present size. When built, instead of being off the road, as it now is, the place was directly on what was then the main highway to Chicago.

Send stories of old houses now standing to Herma Clark, care Chicago Tribune.

NEW GLOVES

By Eleanor Jewett.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Five little houses, warm inside
For somebody's fingers to cuddle and hide;
Five little houses and five again
Make, if you follow me, 'xactly ten.
Ten little houses where everyday
Somebody's fingers can stretch and play.
For whom do you think these gloves were planned?
They look as if they might fit my hand.
Mother says:—"Darling, they're meant for you!
Stop dreaming and put them on, please do."

Cheerful Danes Eat Earnestly, Drink Sincerely

By Mason Warner.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark.—Too much of the tropics is not good for a man born and reared in the temperate zone. So, having spent a good portion of every year since 1932 in the South Seas and on equatorial mainlands, I decided an interesting 1937 tour could be made in the Scandinavian countries and the new democracies that were formerly Baltic provinces under the rule of Russian czars.

On a blustering day in spring I sailed from New York on the Scanstates of the American Scantic Line. We followed the North Atlantic sea lane, and the first land sighted was the island of Hebrides. We sailed through Pentland Firth, with the bleak hills of northern Scotland on our starboard and the Orkney Islands on our port side; then on, until we skirted the southwesterly coast of Norway. Our first port was Gothenburg, Sweden.

Our ship stopped in Gothenburg only a few hours, but all passengers took advantage of the opportunity to motor around the old city, to compare the medieval buildings with the modern, and to visit the parks with their displays of beautiful northern flowers and shrubbery.

Then on to Copenhagen—one of the merriest, brightest spots in all Europe. The Danes are the cheerlest people I ever saw, and at the same time the most earnest eaters and most sincere drinkers. Sidewalk cafés are the rule in summer; the tables are filled from dawn to dusk, and on till midnight.

Copenhagen streets average well in width—half of them are too wide, half of them too narrow. You know that this city swarms with bicycles like flights of bees from and to a hive. Copenhagen boasts 850,000 population and 400,000 bicycles—all in the streets between 6:30 and 7:30 a. m. and 5:20 and 6:30 p. m. Many of the boulevards have bicycle roadways between sidewalks and pavements.

Street crowds are overflowing with local color. They surge forward with calm and dignity, but irresistibly. Here and there is a flash of lightning-like movement. When a Danish gentleman tips his hat in greeting to a friend, man or woman, he certainly does re-e-move it from his head. He grabs it as if his hair was on fire and thrusts it out in front of him as far as he can reach—and it looks as if he had rubber forearms.

Men's neckties are pathetic: drab, dull, dismal in color and pattern, noticeably so. If all were solid blacks or blues, the color effect would be brighter.

Danish women carry purses as large as week-end bags, so big they are subject to comment by women tourists. The number of platinum blondes is amazing, and they are genuine, too, because you can see them growing up all around you—girls 8 to 12 years of age with lustrous, shining hair. But, alas, so many blue-eyed, fair-haired Danish women smoke real man's size cigars that one's esthetic inclinations are disturbed.

The high spot in Copenhagen is Tivoli Gardens, where from 25,000 to 100,000 Danes gather nightly to eat, drink, and be merry. They succeed, too, and in a pleasingly decent and decorous way. There is an abundance of good music at the Tivoli, all free—a concert orchestra of 60 pieces, playing classic and popular airs; three excellent military bands, and too many dance orchestras to count.

Seven or eight tremendously big dining pavilions seat 300 to 1,000 persons each, and from 1 p. m. to midnight they were well patronized. Admission to Tivoli is only about 7½ cents to 5 p. m., after 5 p. m., 15 cents, and there is several dollars' worth of free entertainment in addition to the music.

First class circus and aerial acts gathered crowds of 5,000 to 10,000 spectators. On an open air theater stage was presented a pantomime and ballet that lasted more than an hour, with a cast of more than 50 performers. Those on the outskirts of the great crowd of spectators were provide with periscopes to enable them to see over the heads of those in front. The periscope glasses were in black boxes, about two feet long, five inches wide and two inches thick, and mounted on poles about 6 feet tall. The forest of these slender black boxes projecting over the heads of the spectators presented a curious sight.

Automatic sales robots reach a high degree of development in Copenhagen. A coin dropped in a slot will produce any kind of food or beverage, including coffee, milk, or beer. [No alcoholic drinks.] There is no 15 öre coin, and that is the price of a program at the Tivoli. So you drop a 25 öre coin in the slot and out come a program and 10 öre change.

In the Tivoli Gardens are ponds, lakes, miniature rivers, and man-made waterfalls. Of fountains aplenty, and the illumination at night is gorgeous in coloring. There are playhouses, swings, and other apparatus for the youngsters—for the entire family goes to the Tivoli.

There is a lot of petit larceny gambling, too, in the many wheels of fortune that entice children as well as adults. The wheels are bandits worse than American slot machines. The chances are 25 or 36 to 1 against the player, but the best odds paid are 5 to 1—all 25 öre bets [about 6 cents]. I watched one for twenty spins of the whirling arrow point, and the croupier did not pay off a single bet in all that time, but swept the board of eight to ten bets at every turn of the wheel. Then the young boys and girls who had lost their coins would go and gaze longingly at the ice cream stands with the same expression seen on the faces of adults in Wall street in 1929.

Denmark supports an army and navy sufficiently large for its soldiers' and sailors' uniforms to add bits of color to the scene. Danish sailors and their platinum blonde sweethearts with worshipful blue eyes are truly a joy to look at.

I was in Copenhagen six days, and spent a few hours each day or night at the Tivoli. There's such variety in the gardens that I never passed a dull moment there.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

FOREIGN TRAVEL

DETOUR

By Frederic Babcock.

IT wasn't Columbus who discovered America; neither was it Leif Ericson. . . . It was an Irishman named St. Brendan the navigator. . . . So say the Irish. . . . And they don't care who knows it.

A movement has been started in Tralee, Ireland, to establish the age-old claim that Irishmen under Brendan were the first known and recorded white men to land in America; that they were here 400 years before Ericson and 900 years before Columbus. . . . Going back that far in history, it may be a bit difficult to prove the claim, but if you think that difficulty is insurmountable you don't know the Irish.

● Brendan was born at Fenit, on Tralee bay, in the sixth century. . . . Recorded and legendary accounts of his travels say he discovered a great island far across the western ocean. . . . Some people believe he explored the coast of North America from Nova Scotia to Florida. . . . He called the country Ireland the Great.

On the peninsula west of Tralee bay there is ample evidence that the navigator lived there. . . . There are found Brandon bay, Brandon Head, Brandon Point, and Brandon mountain, all closely associated with Brendan and all appearing to have taken their names from his. . . . This peninsula is the nearest mainland to America. . . . It would be quite natural to wonder what might lie beyond the islands off shore to the west. . . . Brendan not only wondered, but set forth to find out.

● In the old maps of the "Voyages of St. Brendan" America is called Ireland-it-Mikla, which means "Ireland the Great." . . . Prof. Rafn has offered the opinion that Ireland the Great was the country situated to the south of Chesapeake bay, including North and South Carolina and eastern Florida. . . . In his "American Antiquities" he says persons speaking the Irish language were found in Florida as far back as the eighth century. . . . Vikings who reached the American continent in and before the eleventh century reported, it is said, that the country was known as White Man's Land, and also Great Ireland.

Iceland was visited by Irish Christians as early as 795. . . . Their records call it Thule. . . . The Tralee men contend that an Icelander named Ari Marson, great-grandson of O'Carroll, king of Dublin, sailed for Great Ireland and was shipwrecked on the coast of Florida in 983, more than 500 years before Columbus landed in the West Indies.

● It was from Irish traditions of the discovery of Great Ireland—early current in Scandinavian countries—that Eric the Red and later his son Leif were inspired to explore the western seas, resulting in Leif's discovery of Vinland, the present New England, about the year 1000.

It was in Iceland that Columbus learned of the existence of Great Ireland, and that knowledge was behind his words: "Sail on!" . . . He knew there was a country to the west. . . . At least, that's what the Irish now intend to prove.

Tramp Steamers Bring Big Money

LONDON.—(AP)—Profits of from 50 to more than 200 per cent on original purchase prices are being made through the sale of tramp steamers.

The rise in freight rates caused by developments in the Mediterranean and far east and the seasonal demand for tonnage to move grain have created a great demand for tramps.

Some owners are selling newly built steamers at prices far in excess of their original cost.

3 Lecturers to Depict World's Travel Wonders

FOUR travelogs are on this week's calendar in Chicago. . . . On Wednesday evening Richard Halliburton, author of "The Royal Road to Romance," "The Glorious Adventure," "New Worlds to Conquer," and "The Flying Carpet," will give a lecture before the Town Hall of Albany Park, meeting at the Roosevelt High school, Wilson and Kimball avenues. His subject is "Seven League Boots—a World at Your Feet." . . . At 3:30 p. m. Thursday Frederic Babcock, travel editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will attempt to answer the vacationist's question, "Where Shall I Go This Winter?", at Eitel's Old Heidelberg inn, near Randolph and State streets. His talk is one of a series being held there this season. . . . At 11 a. m. Friday a movie of South America is to be shown in the bridge salon at the Fair store, with the Grace Line as sponsor. In the course of the talkie the travel commentator will take his audience to Arequipa, Lake Titicaca, Lima, and the land of the Incas. . . . The Lake Shore Athletic club will open its 1937-'38 season of weekly travel and adventure programs Tuesday evening with a movie on the South Sea islands.

Animals Gone Wild Problem in Hawaii

HONOLULU.—[U. P.]—Territorial authorities are considering the advisability of asking the United States army command here for the use of planes equipped with machine guns to aid in exterminating the wild sheep and goats that prey on Hawaii's forest and pasture lands.

The animals are descendants of those that were once domesticated but later escaped and went back to nature. Recent estimates place their number at 50,000. Their damage to the land is immense.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

ALL the steamship lines and travel agencies having world cruises this winter have now announced changes of itinerary, with the antipodes and the South Sea Islands taking the place of China and Japan. The list was completed last week, when the Canadian Pacific let it be known that the Empress of Britain, scheduled to sail Jan. 8 for the journey by way of the Mediterranean, would leave the usual trail at Bali and head for Australia, New Zealand, and Fiji before proceeding to Hawaii. Similar routes have been arranged for the Cunard-White Star Line's Franconia, the Hamburg American Line-North German Lloyd's Reliance, and Raymond-Whitcomb's Bremen.

On a "flying Scotsman's" trip through the middle west, William F. McGrath, passenger trafic manager of the Anchor Line, arrived in Chicago Wednesday, and that evening was guest of honor at a dinner at the Normandy house. Introduced at the dinner by Leslie C. Atkins, the line's general agent here, Mr. McGrath related that the Transylvania will start a series of West Indies cruises Dec. 24 and keep going until April. He predicted that the Scottish Empire exhibition, opening in Glasgow next May, will be one of the 1938 major travel attractions in Europe.

The Hollywood Beach hotel and golf club, Hollywood-by-the-Sea, Fla., last week opened a Chicago booking office at the Palmer house.

The Milwaukee, hitherto engaged in the pleasure cruise service out of European ports, this winter will go on a Mediterranean voyage from New York. Word received by Ludwig Plate, Chicago manager, says the 16,624 ton motorship will sail Feb. 16 for Funchal, Gibraltar, Tangier, Villefranche, Genoa, Naples, Palermo, Sousse, Tripoli, Alexandria, Beirut, Haifa, Athens, Cattaro, Dubrovnik, and Venice.

Just as an indication of how many midwesterners are taking vacations this fall, Manager G. E. R. Flynn of the French Lick Springs hotel's Chicago office says the spa has been filled to capacity a large part of the time for the last two weeks.

Honors in the muskellunge competition in Ontario's French river this season went to a Pittsburgh man, who caught a 31 pounder, but second place was awarded Mathias Concannon of Oak Park for his 29 pound catch. In the competition at Devil's Gap, Ont., Dr. F. E. Addenbrooke of Chicago carried off the first prize with a 32 pounder.

From Jan. 1 to Oct. 1 of this year the French Line carried more than 35,000 passengers from New York to Havre, and a like number from Havre to New York, says word received by James F. Nolan, district manager. The gains over the figures for 1936 were 35 per cent eastbound and 26 per cent westbound.

Mrs. Laura B. Ehrlich, tour conductor for Journeys, Inc., returned last week after having taken a large group of Chicagoans through seven countries of Europe. She plans to make a similar trip next summer.

News comes from Hungary that, so far as United States passport holders are concerned, the visa requirement and charge have been permanently abolished in that middle European kingdom. Although for the last year and a half American tourists have entered Hungary visa free, the arrangement was experimental. Now the pesky little surcharge has been orderd out forever. The order will affect the 15,000 Americans making a pilgrimage to Budapest for the Eucharistic congress next May.

America in Germany.

If you want to see New America you can take a car from Berlin, Germany, via Kustrin on the Oder till you see the words "New America" on the signpost. It is a village of fewer than a dozen houses.

Parks Not Parks.

Famous English parks are Sandown, Hurst, Kempton, and Alexandra, but they are not parks. They are race courses.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

VENI, VIDI, SED NON VICI.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—To the Travel Editor: I feel like saying of South America: "I went, I saw, I was overwhelmingly conquered." I feel, too, that I should explain why I had no chance; why, unlike Pizarro the conquistador, I was surrounded by and forced to accept such picturesqueness, such charm of native personality, and such God-made beauty of mountains and plains and oceans that, having been held prisoner for almost three months, I surrendered completely.

I say I had no chance. On my recent trip I was entirely alone and did not speak the language of the people. That certainly makes one defenseless and open to attack, doesn't it? I could not stiffen myself to their warm hospitality, their friendliness, their fun, which included me, and their kindly concern over my physical discomfort—for there was one occasion when an English speaking doctor would have been a blessing.

South America is beautiful and unspoiled. It would take a letter the size of a mail order catalog to tell you of my glorious summer-winter there.

My journey was down the east coast first. Then, with Rio, Santos, Montevideo, and Buenos Aires in my pocket, I went by rail diagonally across the continent—across the great Argentine pampas, climbing up onto the altiplano, "the roof of the world." What a delightful thrill it would have been if I could have stepped off the edge of this roof-top and glided down by parachute into La Paz, Bolivia, the little city nestling in the huge canyon below.

This was the "height" of my trip. Here you are even with the highest peaks of the Andes. Here the air is so thin that you cannot talk and breathe at the same time [at least not until you have become acclimated, which may take three or four days]. Here is where every hour of daylight changes the tone of color in the countryside, and the sight of the Indian woman shepherding her flock of llamas on the slope gives you an impression you'll never forget. Here is where you needn't be an archæologist to realize the amazing ingenuity of that vanished race, the sun-worshiping Incas. The remains of their mountain top cities speak for themselves.

Here the process of acclimation does more than adapt you to this high altitude. It puts you in tune with a soft speaking, adagio tempoed way of living that few in this country have time to profess.

One of THE TRIBUNE's staf photographers must shoulder his camera some day and cross enchanting Lake Titicaca.

From there my journey wriggled through Peru to the coast, then northward to Ecuador, Colombia, and home through the canal.

It has been my privilege to realize what a wonderful and friendly neighbor we have to the south of us. So you can realize how much I treasure my summer's experiences. ADAH-LOUISE VOSS.

THE PROGRESS OF ARNOLD MORAN.

Berwyn, Ill., Oct. 18.—To the Travel Editor: I thought you might like to know that, as a result of the appeal you published for letters and cards to Arnold Moran, he has received so much mail that he can scarcely contain himself. He looks forward to the flood of correspondence each day, and that is one of the things keeping him going. He is the boy, you may recall, who was run over by a truck, whose leg was torn open from foot to knee, and who has been suffering terribly as a result. In spite of it all, a little smile is now almost continually lighting up his face.

This evening Mrs. Moran said Arnold felt a lot better; in fact, he asked for a hamburger sandwich. She said most of the skin grafting "took." Tonight he is having a surprise party at the Oak Park hospital. All the children from his room are calling on him and presenting him with a fountain pen and pencil set. You see, he was their "mayor" at Lincoln school, and all they say is: "We want our mayor back!"

All of us are deeply grateful to your readers for giving him encouragement and thus helping him start on his long road to recovery. LOUISE C. MAAS.

MAIL FOR SHUT-INS.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—To the Travel Editor: My wife, an invalid, hasn't seen the outdoors in the last four years. I have been in bed since Oct. 9, 1936. Will you be so kind as to put her name on your list to receive mail from travelers? The address: Mary Carmek, 6148 Champlain avenue, Chicago. We have a four tube radio which is out of order, and, as we are on relief, I can't have it repaired. So the letters or postcards would be doubly welcomed. FRANK CARMEK.

Peru, Ill., Oct. 18.—To the Travel Editor: Kindly place the name of Miss Mabel Gallagher, room 207, People's hospital, Peru, on your list to receive mail from travelers. She will greatly appreciate it. A FRIEND.

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 17.—To the Travel Editor: This is about a lad of 19 who has had a serious operation recently and who will be in bed for a long time. I know it would bring him a lot of cheer if he were to receive cards and letters from different places. His name and address: Delmer Douglas, R. R. 2, Mansfield, Ill. A. F.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—To the Travel Editor: I know a lady who has been in a wheel chair for almost twenty years and is terribly crippled and past 80 years old. I also know that she will deeply appreciate any mail that travelers may send her. Her name and address: Mrs. J. Guldan, 841 Water street, Chippewa Falls, Wis. ROYAL McKIBBON.

No Traffic Problem There.

In Venice there are no highways, no subways, no automobiles, no street cars. Hundreds of Venetians have never seen a horse. Yet beside its silent canals a pedestrian could walk for days without retracing his steps.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address queries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Just what is the meaning of the word "carioca"?—G. M.

It comes from the Brazilian Indian language and originally signified "houses of white men." It was applied by the aborigines to the huts of the French invaders who occupied the harbor of Rio de Janeiro in 1555. Nowadays it means a person born in Rio, or anything typical of that city.

Is it true that Gabrielle d'Annunzio's estate has been turned over to Italy?—W. H.

The gift of the poet's "Vittoriale degli Italiani" has been recently legalized by royal decree. Everything connected with it will be kept as it is and in full working order. The estate includes an open air theater and workshops for blowing glass, engraving jewels, and carving wood. But D'Annunzio has reserved it for his own use until his death; then it will be thrown open to the public.

What and where is the legendary Mount of Temptation?—R. K.

It is Tibadabo, the height overlooking Barcelona, Spain.

To train geisha girls in modern ways, schools have been opened in all large Japanese cities. They learn western dance steps; have lessons in English and French.

The Life of the Party in Japan

By KIMPEI SHEBA

Tokio, Japan.

A PARTY in Japan without geisha girls is like whisky and soda without whisky. You get no kick out of it. There is no counterpart anywhere of these vivacious entertainers who are so often confused by visitors with inmates of the Yoshiwara, the notorious nightless city of Tokio.

Between the geisha girls and the inmates of the Yoshiwara there is a world of difference. You will find geisha girls galore at garden parties given by Japanese prime ministers, statesmen, and other leaders, and this will be perfectly proper, but it would be a national scandal for a Yoshiwara girl to attend such a function.

Practically everybody who comes to Japan is invited to a geisha party, or, if he is not invited, he goes to one anyway, with the idea of observing the singing and dancing girls who have done probably the most to advertise the charms of Japan. A large number of giggling, gaudily dressed girls with long pins of varicolored decorations sticking out of their picturesque coiffures, and whose likenesses appear in tourist advertisments, greet the visitors, who jump to the conclusion that these are the famous geisha girls.

Would you call an egg a chicken? Then you cannot properly call these frivolous young things geisha, for they are what the Japanese call "unhatched eggs." Another name for them is oshaku, or wine pourers, and that is their main duty at parties.

A full-fledged geisha is usually neither beautiful, according to western standards, nor as delightfully (Continued on page four.)

More charming, according to western standards, than the full-fledged geisha girl is the typical oshaku, or apprentice. Her main duty at a party is to pour wine.

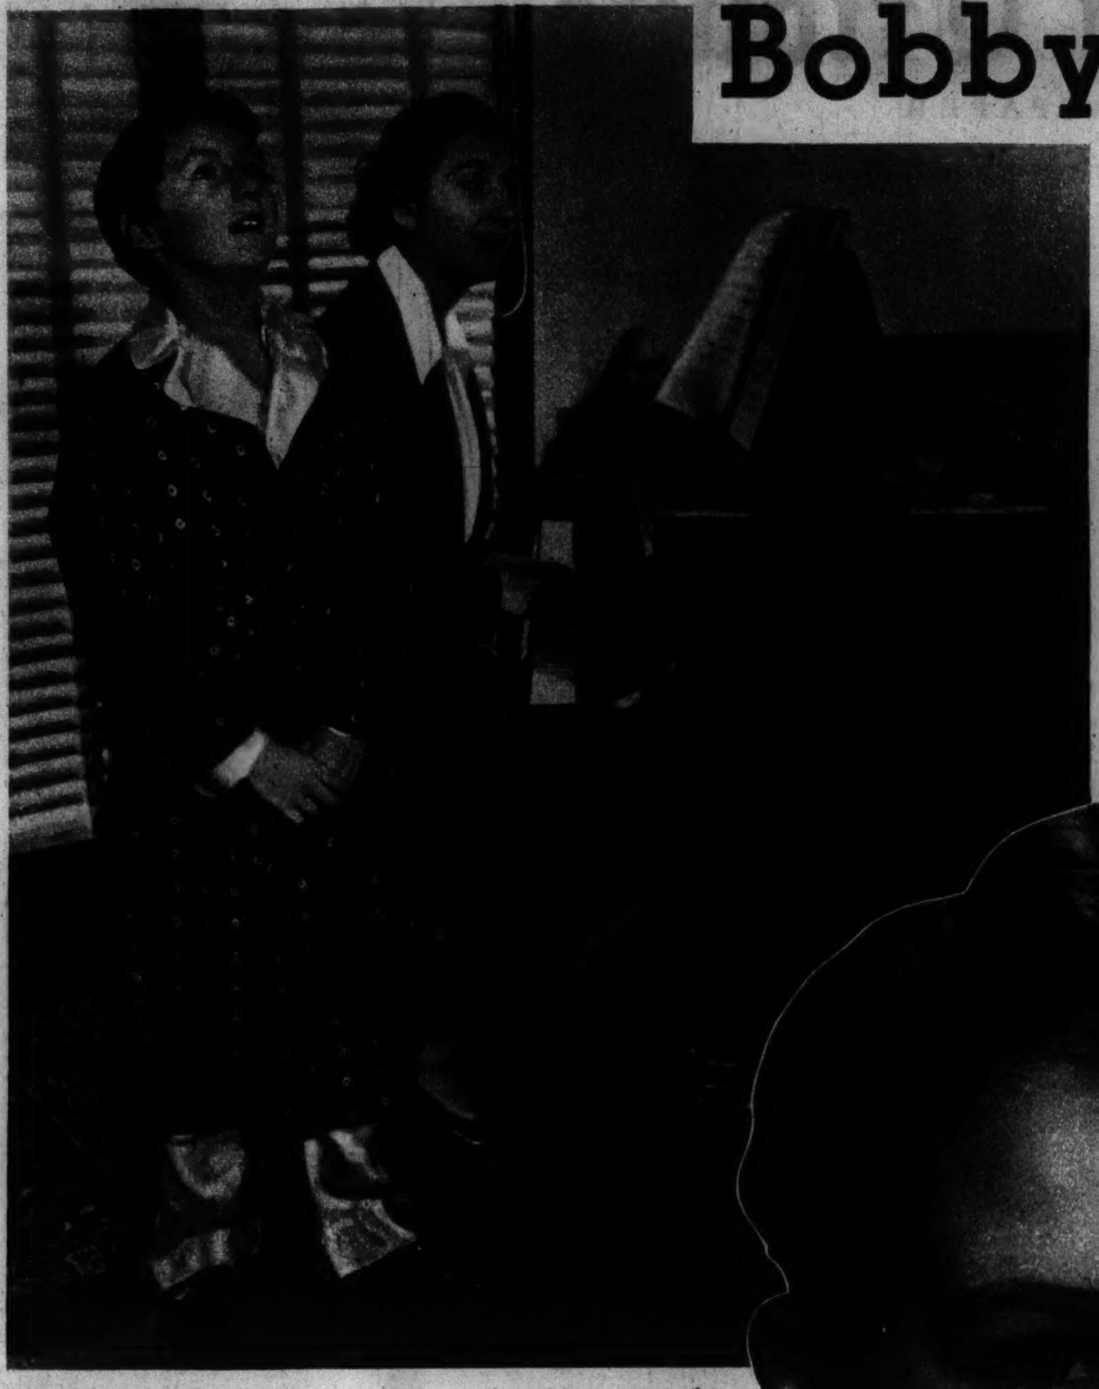
At right: At elaborate parties music is furnished by orchestras made up entirely of geisha girls who play curious oriental instruments. Other geishas sing, dance, and tell stories to entertain guests.

Bobby Breen's Success Story

Its Heroine Is Sally, an Unselfish Sister



Rehersing: Bobby Breen, child singer of the movies, tries a song to the accompaniment of his sister Sally at the piano. It was sister's perseverance that made him a success.

By GEORGE SHAFFER

Hollywood, Cal.

BOBBY BREEN has a golden voice, a golden smile, and the golden personality that is possessed by the born great of the show business. Nevertheless Bobby Breen's success story is not the story of Bobby Breen's success. It is the success of Bobby's sister Sally.

Sally, now 20 and married to Lewis Roth of Milwaukee, wanted to be a singer herself.

The gift of music that was part of the heritage from a maternal grandfather, who was a violoncellist killed in Russia in the early bolshevik gun fighting, made Sally an ambitious schoolgirl singer in Toronto, Ont., when she was 13 years of age.

That was after her father and mother, Hyman and Rebeccah Borsuch (or Borsuk—they didn't spell very well in English in those days), had fled from the terror and pillage in Kiev and arrived, penniless but thankful to be alive, in western Canada. Living some years in Regina, Sask., the family moved on to Montreal and later to Toronto. Little Bobby was born in Montreal. His sister Sally, with a yerning for music throbbing within her, clerked in the little candy store behind whose thin-partitioned wall the six members of the family lived.

"I wanted to sing," says Sally. "But there was no time or opportunity for me to study singing. No one encouraged me. No one in our family had time or energy to attempt anything beyond the monotonous and all-important matter of keeping the family together and alive. I would have liked to strive for a career. When I couldn't do it I determined that Bobby would get somewhere."

Bobby Breen was 3½ years old when his grown-up sister (grown up at 13½ years) thus made up her mind. Bobby as a tot had mimicked his sister in the tunes she sang. Waiting on customers in papa's little shop at lunch time, Sally taught Bobby a few tunes, and after that the words that went with the tunes.

"I decided to take him to the Saturday amateur show at the nearby theater," Sally continued. "No one in the family knew we were going."

On this first appearance at the neighborhood theater, Bobby, who then had light yellow curls, raised a clear, lyrical treble that rippled so effectively through the sentimental words he did not comprehend that the kid won first prize. First prize was $5. "I won second prize," says Sally proudly.

"The theater manager asked me to bring Bobby around every week on amateur day," Sally says. "He said that if Bobby didn't win the first prize the theater would pay him $5. But Bobby always won the prize. The kids in the audience always whistled and clapped and yelled for him."

Sister and brother continued the weekly amateur shows for months. Their weekly $5 proved a continual boon to the family. When Sally was 14 she was ready for her next shrewdly calculated whack at the world. She telephoned the Silver Slipper, a Toronto restaurant, and asked for a job for herself. "I didn't want to ask for a job for Bobby at first, because they would have turned us both down," she explains. "After I had worked there a while I asked if they would mind if I brought my little brother for their Wednesday night radio amateur program. They said they guessed it would be all right. I took Bobby, and he won the prize."

Next day the restaurant manager told Sally to fetch her little brother every Wednesday.

"Bobby packed them in at the Silver Slipper every week for nearly two years," Sally tells.

By that time Sally had changed her portion of the family name to Borene for professional purposes, and this gradually merged into Breen.

The $25 a week from the Silver Slipper proved almost providential for the family. Sally began taking Bobby to summer places outside of Toronto where well-to-do owners of estates would ask the brother and sister to come and act at entertainers at parties.

Bobby Breen himself.

The Canadian National exposition came along about that time and provided other opportunities. Bobby sang. Sally modeled. One day Sally said to herself: "The next money I make I take Bobby away. He is going to get his chance. If I stay home we may all starve."

That was when Sally was 16. She doubled up on jobs and earned $35 a week for a month. Then she took the money she had laid by and bought two bus tickets for Chicago. Sally asked who was the "biggest man" in the show business in Chicago. Some one told her the description fitted Louis Lipstone.

The boy and his determined sister sat around in Lipstone's office for days. Finally Lipstone agreed to listen to the boy sing if the little boy's sister would agree to leave his office afterward.

Bobby sang, and Lipstone picked up his telephone. He called Milton Berle. "I've got something great for your show," he said. Berle was in the midst of an engagement at a Chicago loop theater.

Berle was cagy. He asked what Lipstone had. "No kids, that's flat," said Berle after Lipstone explained. "But," Sally says, "Mr. Lipstone made Mr. Berle come over to his office just the same." Berle listened to Bobby sing and grew enthusiastic in turn. "He put Bobby on with his Chicago show and billed him as his little nephew."

Bobby stayed in Chicago with Paul Ash shows and neighborhood theater programs. For a short time he was on a program with Gloria Swanson. "For six months he did four shows a day around Chicago," Sally explains. Sally at 16 was her brother's tutor, governess, companion, singing instructor, and business agent. Bobby was 6 years old.

Much of their money was mailed home to Toronto, as always. Sally kept on speculating about the chances for Bobby's "big break." Her way to work toward this end was indirect, but thoughtfully figured out, as you shall see. "Do you know any one in New York who can help me get Bobby started?" she asked Lipstone. He gave Sally a letter to Boris Morros, then in New York, but now music chief at Paramount's Hollywood studio.

The girl and boy finally located Morros' office and sat outside his door two or three days before he let Bobby sing. "The first thing we knew," Sally says, "Bobby had Mr. Morros' secretary crying. When Bobby stopped singing Morros said: 'We ought to put this child on Friday's show. But how can we do it? The law forbids children.'" Sally's reply to Morros was, "Take the little boy to see the man who handles that law."

"That's what we did," Sally explains. "They let Bobby sing in a theater for two weeks on a special permit. I had thought that would be all that would be necessary for some one to give him a contract and take him to Hollywood."

But Sally was wrong. The two weeks ended without a hint of interest from the movies. Sally then put Bobby in the New York Professional Children's school and herself became a cigaret girl at the Edison hotel. One day the professional school received a call for Harry Richman's show, "Say When." A child performer was needed. Seventy-five mothers showed up with their youngsters, and Sally and Bobby made combination No. 76. Bobby got the job.

Bobby had a singing role in the film "Make a Wish," in which Marion Claire (shown here with the youngster) had the leading feminine part.

The rôle called for him to play the newsboy son of Bob Hope, a drunken father. Hope stole his little boy's pennies. On one of the first nights Bobby, who always drinks a couple of glasses of warm milk with butter in it in order to smooth his throat before any public appearance, drank too much milk, or too fast, and got the hiccups. The audience grew hysterical with mirth as Bobby, playing it solemn, hiccupped and grew red-faced, while it was the older actor who was supposed to be intoxicated. Finally Hope broke under the strain and gave way to laughter. This incident stands out in the memory of persons who saw the Richman show, which was no great success and soon closed, leaving Sally without a cigaret girl job and Bobby unable to do any personal-appearance work on account of the child labor law.

About this time Sally took her little brother to Ben Holtzman, Eddie Cantor's manager, but Cantor was so busy he couldn't listen to child singers. Sally got the chance to say only one sentence to Cantor. That sentence was prophetic: "Some day, Mr. Cantor, you will ask this little boy to sing with you." Times grew harsh for the couple. They lived on $7 a week. "But it kept Bobby very healthy," his sister explains, "because we lived on nothing but milk and vegetables."

They moved to another boarding house. A woman in a room next their new quarters took them to the home of Arthur Levy, who called in William Shapiro. After a few conferences Shapiro signed the boy singer for a three-month trial. If after the third month nothing happened in Hollywood, Shapiro was to pay the brother and sister's fares back home from California.

The three months were drawing to a pathetic close when Mike Hoffman of Pathé asked Shapiro to let him take Bobby to see Producer Sol Lesser. In the old days of silents Lesser had built up a fortune by backing and exploiting two famous child personages, Jackie Coogan and Baby Peggy Montgomery. "If Lesser won't take Bobby, maybe I will," Hoffman said to Shapiro. Lesser listened to Bobby. Then he had Voice Coach Mario Marafioti listen to the lad. Marafioti beamed. Lesser signed Bobby to a probationary contract.

Lesser took the boy to an outdoor program at the Uplifters club estates in a glade off Santa Monica canyon. The kid was rousingly applauded. Among those who rushed up to give congratulations was Eddie Cantor. Cantor said he thought he could use the boy on his radio program. Sally thought of her prophecy, but said nothing at the time. Cantor needed a boy to put pathos and sentiment into his radio program for Christmas, 1935, with the song "Santa, Bring My Mummy Back to Me."

Bobby was 7 years of age, just going on 8. He sang the song with Cantor and was tested for his first screen rôle. He was on his way. Since then the lad has been featured in three movies, "Rainbow on the River," "Let's Sing Again," and "Make a Wish," and will in the near future star in a new film to be adapted from Don Blanding's novel, "Stowaways in Paradise," which probably will be produced in the Hawaiian Islands.

Bobby's earnings have been impressive since his break came. Beside his salary and royalties from pictures the lad earned nearly $50,000 in testimonials last year. Bobby also receives percentages and salaries from his radio broadcasts, from personal appearances (for some of which he has drawn $500 a week), and from phonograph recordings. His income, according to his publicity spokesman, reaches about $1,000 a week.

Bobby himself gets along on an allowance of 60 cents a week.

Sally Breen draws $75 a week on contract from Producer Sol Lesser for acting as Bobby's manager and guardian. The Breen family lived largely on this $75 until Sally's marriage, having decided at a family conclave to allow most of Bobby's income to accumulate for the boy's own future.

Between pictures Bobby, who will be 10 years old next Nov. 4, attends Black-Foxe Military academy in Hollywood. His attendance at this school is the idea of Bobby's producer, Sol Lesser, who started him there as a birthday gift last November. Part of the advantage to the lad of attending military school, no doubt, is Bobby's detachment from compressing family influences and from a dialect that was the older folks' heritage from their own youth and from which their years in Canada and American cities never wholly liberated them. At his military school Bobby shoulders arms with Charlie Chaplin's two boys, Paul Whiteman's son, and the sons and little brothers of other producers and actors.

Sally, of course, launched it all. So you see how Bobby Breen's success is the success of Bobby's sister Sally.

Voice of the Movie Fan

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: I read your column every Sunday and enjoy it very much.

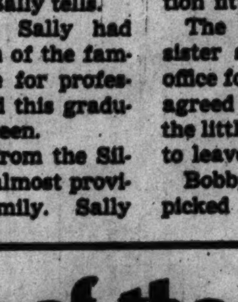
I saw "The Singing Marine" and "Varsity Show," with Dick Powell.

Could you tell me something about him, and if you have room please squeeze in a small picture of him. Thanks!

Sincerely yours,

B. J. M.

Editor's note: Dick Powell was born in Mount View, Ark., Nov. 24, 1904. He's 6 feet tall, has blue eyes and red hair, and weighs 178 pounds. He sang for radio programs and was master of ceremonies in the Stanley theater for more than three years before going into pictures. He's married to Joan Blondell. You're welcome!



DICK POWELL
Born in Arkansas in 1904.

Dear Miss Tinée: Will you please tell me the title of the song Cliff Edwards sang in the film "They Gave Him a Gun"?

Sincerely, A FAN.

Editor's note: The song sung by Cliff Edwards in the above picture is "A Love Song of Long Ago," by Sigmund Romberg.

Dear Mae Tinée: In "The Voice of the Movie Fan" would you please print a short biography of that fine actor, Humphrey Bogart. So little has been said about him I feel it my duty to arouse some interest about an actor whose name I fear has never before entered your column on Sunday.

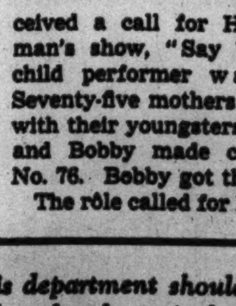
Remaining a firm fan of Mr. Bogart's and yours, I am, JOAN FITZGERALD.

Editor's note: Delighted to oblige! Humphrey Bogart was born in New York City, Jan. 23, 1899. He's 5 feet 10½ inches tall, weight 150 pounds, and has dark hair and brown eyes. Educated Trinity school in New York and Andover academy in Massachusetts. Left school to join the navy and enter the World war. His hobbies are bridge and golf.

Dear Mae Tinée: This is my first chance of entering a letter for your Sunday column in The Tribune.

Not sure if a soldier is welcomed as a critic or not.

Have been reading your movie criticisms every chance I've had. I feel I have found a picture worthy of a good deal of praise, but I do not feel justice was done to it. The title of the picture was "Wings of the Morning."



ANNABELLA
Praised for work in "Wings of the Morning."

Besides its splendor in technicolor, Henry Fonda gave a fine performance, as did the new actress who played opposite him—Annabella. High praise should be given the color scenes of Ireland and to seeing and hearing John McCormack.

I hope my say-so will not be in vain, but my hat is off to Twentieth Century-Fox for giving the movie audience such a picture. Hoping to see your column again and again if my first letter is accepted.

Always an ardent movie fan,

PRIVATE WALTER R. HOGAN.

Editor's note: Your first letter is welcomed, and here it is in print.

Dear Miss Tinée: Many people have their favorite romantic team. There are two stars I'm sure every one would like to see co-starred in a picture. They are Joan Crawford and Paul Muni. With Crawford's talent and beauty and Muni's acting, a picture starring them would certainly be a success.

I'm hoping M-G-M will read this letter and co-star two great stars—Paul Muni and Joan Crawford.

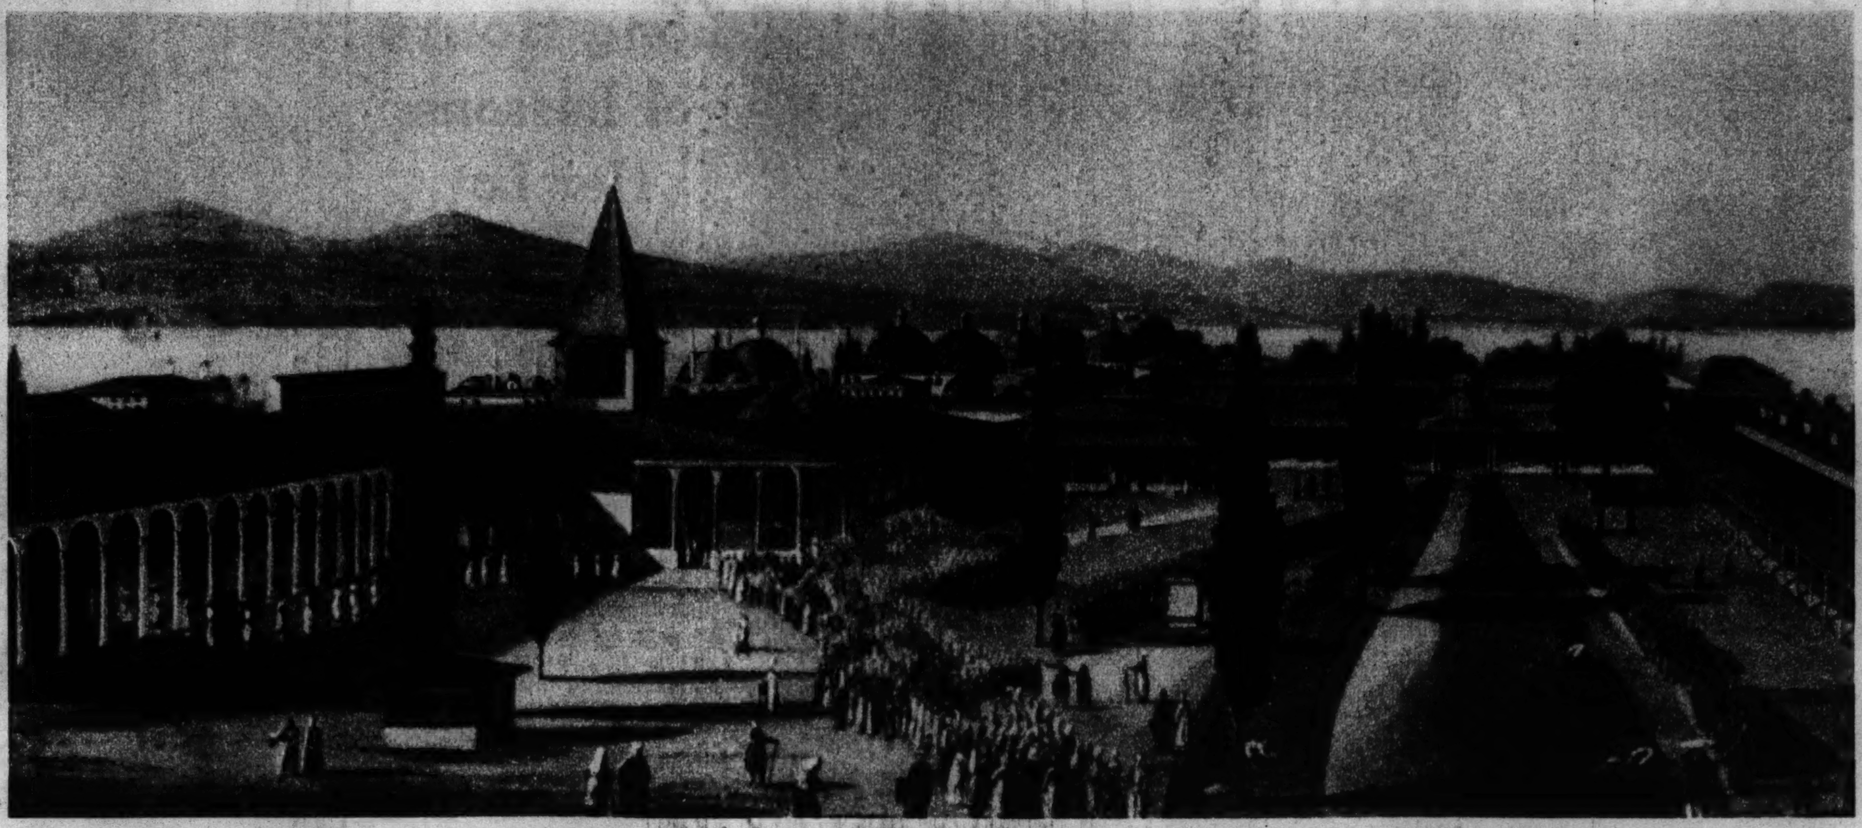
B. M., Lafayette, Ind.

Editor's note: Here's your letter in print, B. M., and maybe M-G-M will take note of your suggestion.

The Inside Story of the Turkish Harem

The Eunuch Role in the Seraglio

Employed to Guard the Women



The second court of the seraglio, from an early nineteenth century engraving by A.-I. Melling. Generally called the court of the divan, it was for many years the scene of impressive ceremonials, military, religious, and civil. Note the servants filing out of the sultan's kitchen on the left with trays of food upon their heads.

Foreword

● Sultan Mohammed II. of Turkey had a problem. In 1453 he had captured the coveted city of Constantinople for his people and later had established in his new-built capitol and palace a luxurious harem of the most lovely girls his agents could find.

● This was his treasure. But how was he going to guard it? Strange as it may seem, this problem was a new one to the sultans of Turkey in the fifteenth century. A vigorous Asiatic tribe which had recently come into great wealth and power in Europe, the Turks were then relaxing the sword for the first time. They had just begun to learn the ways of leisure and luxury. And so Sultan Mohammed naturally turned to the sophisticated Byzantine Greeks, the former masters of historic Constantinople, for the answer.

● The answer was "eunuchs." "Let eunuchs guard your women," said the subject Greeks.

● And so it was done.

● Only the eunuch, the man who is not a man, could be trusted to guard the harem without defiling it.

● In today's instalment of Mr. Penzer's story of the harem we meet the eunuchs and see what these strange beings really were and really did.

By N. M. PENZER

(Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate.)

INSTALMENT IV.

HE LOOKED like a fat and rather formidable middle-aged colored woman who had long since abandoned all hopes of appearing attractive. He wore a long coat of scarlet silk trimmed with sable and other rare furs which reached to within an inch of the ground. His hat was a huge sugar-loaf affair, worn at a slant on the back of the head.

Thus appeared the kislar agha, or chief black eunuch of the imperial seraglio palace in Constantinople. Curiously enough, his was a position of high responsibility and power. He was considered in the later days of the sultans to rank second only to the sultan himself, and considerably higher than any of the white eunuchs.

Until about the beginning of the seventeenth century the status of the white eunuchs had been much more important than that of the black, but so great had been their greed and graft and thievery that they were little by little divested of their authority. This was transferred to the black eunuchs, who were to a certain extent their rivals.

Especially in the case of the chief eunuch the loss was very considerable, for it included not only the high position of captain of the girls but also the lucrative post of nazir, or inspector of the religious endowments of the imperial mosques, including those of the holy cities of Mecca and Medina. With time the power of the kislar agha grew. He became commander of the corps of halberdiers, held the rank of "pasha with three tails," was confidential messenger between the sultan and the grand vizier, and alone was entitled to have both eunuchs and girls as slaves.

He was allotted the surprising number of 300 horses for his personal use, and he alone could approach the sultan at all times of day and night. In fact, he was currently described as "the most illustrious of the officers who approach his august person, and worthy of the confidence of monarchs and of sovereigns." Certainly he was the most feared, and consequently the most bribed, official in the whole of the Ottoman empire.

As a member of the privy council, and in consultation with the sultan's mother, he made appointments to vacant posts both in the seraglio and outside. Anybody wishing to gain a favor from the sultan, even with the help of the sultan's mother, would only be able to do it through the kislar agha.

Naturally the kislar agha was an enormously rich man and rarely relinquished his post of his own accord. But when such occasion did arise he was sent to Egypt. Several kislar aghas, in fact bought property in Egypt solely with a view to retiring there later and spending their last days in oriental splendor. No objection was made by the sultan to these acquisitions, since he himself was the heir of the kislar agha and knew that everything would come back to the crown in time. A handsome pension was given the honored black on retirement.

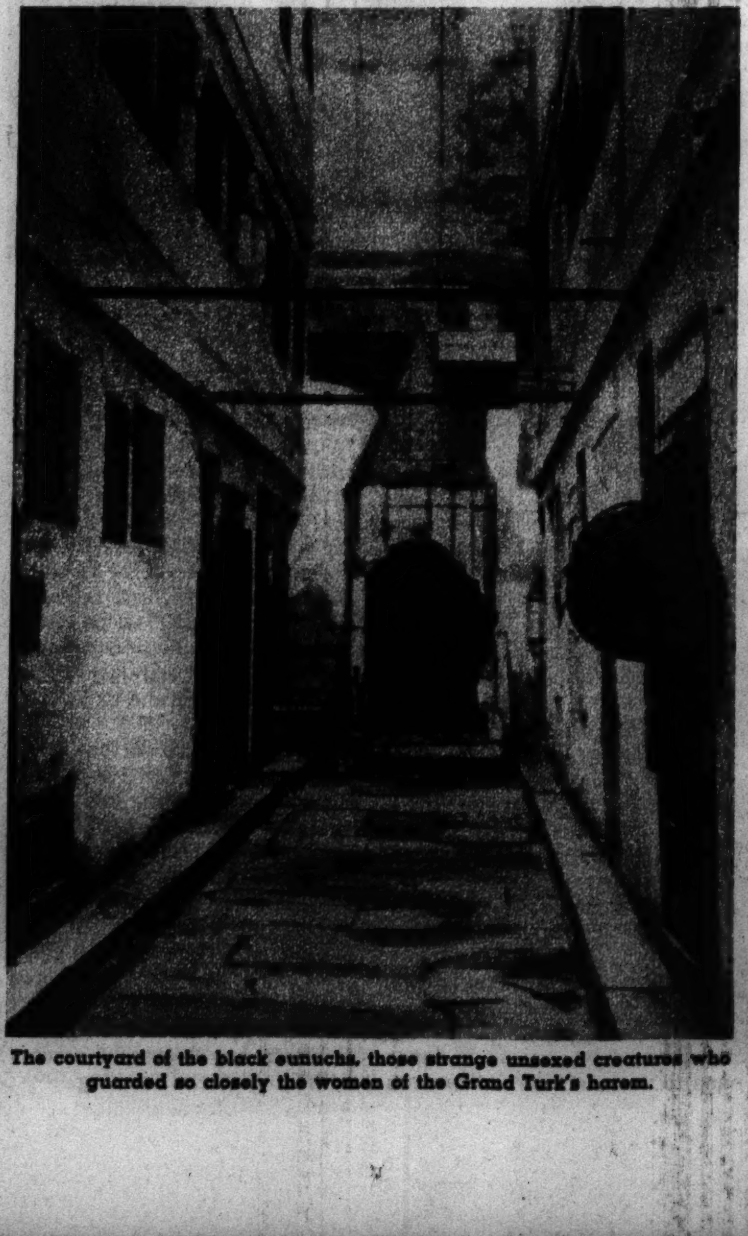
When one thinks of all this dignity and importance it is hard to keep in mind that the chief black eunuch was really just a crude, ignorant, and corrupted colored man—and that the thrusting of such power into his hands actually played a large part in the decline of the Ottoman empire.

Next in importance to the kislar agha came the hazinedar agha, or grand treasurer, who generally succeeded him in office. To him was entrusted the financial side of the harem, as well as that of the halberdiers (porters).

Next was the bash-mussahib, a liaison officer between the sultan and the kislar agha, and who had eight or ten eunuchs under him who were on duty in pairs for the purpose of carrying orders from the sultan to the mistress of the harem. Other officers were the master of the chamber, the chief gatekeeper of the apartments, his assistant, and a whole set of officers in the service of the sultan's mother if she were alive. Thus the total number of black eunuchs employed in the harem at the time of its greatest development must have been between 600 and 800.

Women in the sultan's harem at the time of its greatest development numbered 1,200. Many lands adjacent to Turkey were combed for beautiful female slaves. Gerome's painting shows the sale of a slave, the prospective purchaser testing the soundness of her teeth.



The courtyard of the black eunuchs, those strange unsexed creatures who guarded so closely the women of the Grand Turk's harem.

The women in the harem at this time (around the year A. D. 1600) numbered 1,200. One estimate of the number of eunuchs assigned to guard the gate of the sultan's favorite was 500, though fifty would probably be nearer the truth.

As to the training of eunuchs, it was just as long and careful as the training of the janizaries (the sultan's military guards). Here is what a keen observer wrote of the black eunuchs' apprenticeship in 1604:

"The boys are watched and disciplined by the other youths of the seraglio till at a certain age they are ready for service. They are then removed thence and sent to the women and placed under others in the service of the sultana (the number one favorite), being under the command of their chief, the kislar agha. They have a considerable allowance, two robes of finest silk, clothes, and other things for their needs throughout the year, besides what is plentifully bestowed on them from other quarters. They bear names of flowers, such as Hyacinth, Narcissus, Rose, and Carnation; since, as they are in the service of women, they have names suitable to virginity, whiteness, and fragrance."

The young eunuchs were also entrusted with taking and receiving messages between the sultan and his women, transacting business, visiting the men's apartments, and many other duties. But from the moment they entered it they could never leave the seraglio without special permission from the sultana, even though bidden to do something by one of the lesser wives. No white eunuchs were allowed to visit their black brethren under any circumstances. And even the chief physician had to walk, when in the harem, between a double file of black eunuchs without seeing the sight of a woman—and the extended hand of the patient was the most he was customarily permitted to inspect.

An appreciation of the physical and mental condition of eunuchs and their varieties will unquestionably lead to the greater understanding of the harem system and of its gradual decay and fall, so largely caused by the introduction and increasing influence of this unproductive, sterile, unnatural, and altogether unwholesome member of society—the eunuch.

Everybody knows that the condition of eunuchs is not natural, but is a terrible mutilation imposed by one male upon another. The effect is seen and heard, and the reason is generally appreciated; but the methods by which the mutilation is carried out and the different degrees to which this can be done appear to be hardly known at all. This general ignorance is certainly not due to lack of interest in the subject, but to several distinct factors—the scarcity of published information, the gradual discontinuance of the custom, the secrecy which has always surrounded the infamous trade of making eunuchs, and the consequent disinclination of those connected in any way with it to discuss the subject at all.

Most of the writers on the subject wrote under noms de plume, while, with the single exception of a book by a French doctor, there appears to be no modern work on the subject whatsoever. As is often the case, the history of the words connected with the subject affords a certain amount of information. There is, however, difference of opinion among scholars about the derivation and meaning of the best known word of all—"eunuch." It would seem that the old derivation, from the Greek words for "bed" and "keep"—the word thus meaning "he who has charge of the bed"—should still be adhered to.

The only Assyrian connection appears to be through the Hebrew saris, "eunuch," which is a word borrowed from the Assyrian sa resi, meaning "he who does not beget." There are several other words connected with emasculation that are informative, as they show that the condition was brought about by a form of barbaric surgery.

Methods seem to have been similar in all countries, the only differences being in the local means employed to approximate aseptic treatment. The mortality is not great, although exaggerated figures have been given. It is obvious, however, that the number of fatal cases among young Negroes at the mercy of unskilled "knifers" would be considerable. In fact, a large discount for "losses en route" was always allowed in the delivered price of a eunuch.

The physical and mental effects of emasculation naturally vary according to the age at which the operation is performed. If the subject is a child not yet arrived at the age of puberty, and if proper precautions are taken, the operation was found to be not dangerous. But after puberty both physical and mental effects become a very important factor. The mind has begun to realize the promptings of nature, and consequently the full realization of the irreparable loss brings an agony of mind that is hard for us to realize. The constant attendance upon women would create in the minds of the victims a feeling of terrible resentment, coupled with a mingled feeling of revenge and despair. No wonder, then, that eunuchs have been described as ill-tempered, morose, childish, petulant, revengeful, cruel, and arrogant; and, on the other hand, as simple, credulous, harmless, fawning, fond of pleasure, and very generous in their dealings.

The kislar agha, or chief black eunuch, of the imperial seraglio, considered in later days to rank second in power to the Turkish sultan himself.

This apparent contradiction of characteristics would seem to arise from the widely varying effects the operation has on different subjects. It is not only the age of the victim that has to be considered in the forming of his mental makeup, but the circumstances that led to his operation. A boy captured in a raid and sold later would never bear the terrible grudge against humanity in general, and his parents in particular, harbored by a boy who had been sold by his parents for the mere lust of gain.

The physical effects of emasculation are well known—complete lack of bodily hair, the feminine voice (deeper, however, in the black race), the gradual flabbiness of the body, often accompanied by obesity and ugly wrinkling of the skin in later life. Among other effects may be mentioned loss of memory, insomnia, and bad eyesight.

Eunuchs have no liking for alcohol, of which the smallest amount is sufficient to make them ill. They prefer cakes and sweetmeats to meat. Their favorite color is red. They like music, especially the rhythmic beat of the drum or tambourine and all central African instruments. They are neat in their habits, but are miserly and fond of accumulating wealth. They unite the small brain of the Negro with the childish imagination of the ignorant oriental. Consequently they believe the wildest stories, and once an idea has entered their minds, nothing can change it.

They adore what we call fairy stories and can listen to recitations of "The Thousand Nights and a Night" and similar collections for an indefinite period. They love children and animals, including chickens, sheep, cows, and monkeys, but most of all cats, which they keep as pets and treat with the utmost care and attention.

As regards normal feelings, it is quite incorrect to imagine that the operation removes all desires immediately. Not only is the new eunuch often attracted strongly to women, but, strange as it may seem, evokes affection in return, and in the history of the harem many marriages of eunuchs have taken place. In such cases, however, the eunuch "lives out" and is usually drafted to one of the lesser palaces in the town.

That eunuchs often nurse their grievances for years and take their revenge if opportunity offers is well known from the history of Hermotimus the Pedasian, "the most favored of all the eunuchs of Xerxes." According to Herodotus, he was captured by an enemy and sold to one Panionius, whose business was to buy good looking boys, operate on them, and sell them as eunuchs at Sardis and Ephesus for large sums.

Hermotimus was one of these unfortunates. Long afterward he chanced upon Panionius once more and persuaded him to move to Sardis with his wife and children. Having thus got his old enemy into his power, Hermotimus upbraided him for his horrible doings and forced him to perform the same operation on his own four sons. Not being yet satisfied, he then persuaded the sons to wreak vengeance in kind on their father. Thus did Hermotimus overtake Panionius.

Of course, the sultans of Turkey generally were very careful in picking their eunuchs—especially those who were to guard their harems. White eunuchs—Georgians and Circassians—were given jobs that would never bring them into close touch with the women. But as regards the Negroes, the highest prices were paid for those who, besides being 100 per cent eunuchs, possessed the ugliest and most revolting faces, it being imagined (correctly or not) that this was a further guard against any profligacy on the part of the women.

The seraglio doctors not only inspected the eunuchs on admission but examined them every few years just to see that everything was in order.

But the days of the eunuch are over. With the passing of the harem in the Mohammedan world (save in Mecca itself) the necessity for the eunuch has disappeared, and despite all my efforts in Turkey I met only two, or possibly three, of these strange beings. I was told that these were the last of them. They had been a necessary evil where despotism and polygamy held sway, but now they are a thing of the past and already have returned in our minds to the pages of the Arabian Nights, where alone they seem rightly to belong.

Geisha – Always Life of Party

Play Girl of Japan Must Be Clever

charming, again according to western standards, as are the younger girls who are so fond of laughter and gayety. There are usually only a few full-fledged geisha girls at any except the most elaborate geisha parties given to visitors.

The proper place to hold a geisha party is not at the Maple club or some other large restaurant where most visitors to Tokio are initiated into the mysteries of the night life, but at a machiai, or tiny "waiting house." There are hundreds upon hundreds of such houses in all large cities in Japan. They are convenient little two-storied wooden houses to which a man may bring a geisha girl, where the two may have dinner together and spend a few hours or the entire night without any questions being asked.

After making their famous flight from Tokio to London and return, the Japanese aviators, Masaaki Iinuma and Kenji Tsukakoshi, discarded their flying togs, donned native kimonos, and tackled a hearty meal, with a geisha girl seeing to it that they had plenty of sake, or rice wine.

But only one tourist in a hundred ever gets to visit a machiai. Not that there is any rule against bringing tourists to such places, but rather because, like full-fledged geisha girls, these houses are not, according to western standards, glamorous or in any way in keeping with the visitors' preconceived notions of what a geisha house should be.

One of the first questions most visitors ask about the geisha is whether they are artists pure and simple or otherwise. The answer depends a great deal (1) on what type of girls happen to be entertaining you and (2) on what sort of person you happen to be.

Roughly speaking, geisha may be divided into the following categories:

1. Osha-ku, or wine pourers, whom most visitors mistake for full-fledged geisha. They are virtuous creatures whose virginity is usually most carefully guarded.

2. Geisha girls of the lower-class gay quarters. They engage, with few exceptions, in the oldest profession as a side line.

3. Geisha girls of highest-class gay quarters. They can no more be called prostitutes than can actresses, concert singers, chorus girls, or other types of entertainers in the United States. But it must be said that they have a greater latitude in morals than American entertainers. If you are diplomatic you can usually arrange a date with almost any girl—provided you are liberal with your money.

4. The highest type of geisha girls. They usually are mistresses of leaders in politics and business. Even a millionaire would be ignored by one of these.

This, however, gives one only a very incomplete idea of what a geisha girl is supposed to be. The geisha institution is actually extremely complicated, and, as it has no counterpart anywhere, a brief excursion into its history is necessary to enable American readers to arrive at a fair estimate of this profession.

From time immemorial society in Japan has been based on the theory that the family transcends the individual. Therefore marriages are conducted almost solely with the idea of furthering the cause of the family and with little thought as to whether the principals love each other. Most marriages are arranged by go-betweens, and couples frequently become betrothed after seeing each other only once.

While such ties are great for the family system, they often do not seem so to the principals. Human nature, after all, is about the same everywhere. An excellent example of how the family system operates in Japan when love interferes recently has been given the world by the duke of Windsor. As in the case of the British royal family, every Japanese household has a family council, and what the council decides is law. Many young Japanese men who fall in love with the wrong women seek eternal peace in shinju, or love suicide, rather than be disinherited.

But the Japanese know full well that people cannot live without love. So they have set up a sort of safety valve in the geisha system, not by intent but subconsciously.

"If you cannot love the wife who has been chosen to be your life mate, then play with the geisha." This seems to be the advice tendered to the men of Japan. Surprisingly few men in proportion to the number who marry find it necessary to follow this advice.

Another Japanese idea which has contributed to make the geisha girls suppliers of synthetic love is that love between a married couple, in the western sense of the word, is not considered essential to the happiness of a household.

Still another peculiar circumstance which has caused the geisha institution to thrive is to be found in the psychology of the Japanese race. It is a strong inborn characteristic of the Japanese people to be wary and secretive and to discourage frankness. Personal affairs, matters of state, and business dealings seldom are discussed candidly. There is always a mask of disguise when two Japanese get together to talk of anything over which there is likely to be the slightest embarrassment on either side.

The only way you can loosen the tongue of most Japanese is to fill them up with intoxicants. Then you will find an entirely different person. Actually you may not have to get him inebriated, particularly when important affairs are to be discussed. Placed in the proper surroundings, he often feigns intoxication. But you must have the right atmosphere for such a situation, and what could be more suitable than a restaurant or machiai, and who would be more fitted to persuade an unwilling guest to sip a few drops of sake or white wine than a comely geisha girl?

Whenever there is a political

crisis the newspapers daily report the holding of meetings of leaders of the various factions at such-and-such a restaurant or teahouse. From the prime minister down, every political chieftain attends one or another of these meetings, sometimes as often as ten times a week. The politicians and statesmen gather at such functions and discuss their plans and problems. This applies to business men as well.

The only persons present at such functions besides the men are geisha girls. Often a trusted girl is familiar with what is going on, and this includes numerous deep political secrets and important confidential business conversations. When liquor flows freely people are liable to let their tongues slip. But seldom has a geisha been known to divulge these mysterious conversations to any one.

Practically every man of importance in Japan today has his favorite geisha girl. As often as not this started out as a purely business arrangement, much in the manner of an important executive in the United States hiring an efficient secretary. But it ought not to take any one long to see what the consequences of such an arrangement are likely to be. The atmosphere in which the political and business leader in Japan works with his geisha lends itself very well to romance, and inasmuch as, in the first place, the men select girls with charm, beauty, and sex appeal, is it any wonder that many geisha girls become the mistresses of the nation's big men?

Most famous of all Japan's geisha girls is Katsutaro, a marvelous singer whose income is several times that of the Japanese prime minister.

Another peculiar circumstance which has helped to make the geisha institution unique is the severity of restrictions placed on the social activities of girls and women of proper upbringing. A majority of Japanese still adhere literally to the rule that the woman's place is at home.

So to any and all kinds of gatherings where the presence of members of the fair sex is required you will find the geisha playing an active part. You will find them at wedding banquets, garden parties, charity bazars, concerts, and house warmings.

Geisha—the word comes from gei, which means art, and sha, or person, and is pronounced "gay-sha"—are a product of the Yeddo or Tokio civilization, and first mention of the word was made in 1762. Although the word geisha was not used until that time, there were entertainers of this type as early as the reign of Emperor Toba in 1115.

The girls are recruited from all parts of the country and are apprenticed frequently from childhood. Girls from 8 to 12 years old are generally selected by agents of the leading geisha houses from among the children of the poorer classes and are "bought" for a period of years depending on the amount paid. This sum ranges from a hundred to more than a thousand dollars.

The child geisha is placed under the most severe discipline, her duties being many and tedious. First of all she is expected to wait upon older girls, the real geisha, and for hours every day she goes through exacting lessons in etiquet.

She learns polite speech and repartee; she is taught to dance and to make all her movements graceful. She spends an endless number of hours under an ex-geisha singing teacher. She learns innumerable songs and how to compose her own ditties on lively topics. It is a hard life, cruel in many ways, and scarcely to be compared with the training of chorus girls and cabaret entertainers in the United States.

The girls must rise early every morning and, rubbing their sleepy eyes, dust and sweep all the rooms of the house. Toward evening they again clean the rooms and light the lanterns at the door. No sooner have they finished supper than they are taken by senior girls to the bath and painted in preparation for engagement. Little girls being trained by certain hostesses are said to be whipped almost daily with a long bamboo tobacco pipe.

On the termination of the period of hardest study and severest training, and when the girl has reached the age of 17 or 18, she "comes out" and is taken by a manservant to be introduced to the numerous machiai restaurants and teahouses in the district in which she expects to appear.

From that time on the geisha leads a much easier life. If she is at all popular she can afford to become temperamental, and those about her do everything to satisfy her every whim. But no geisha can expect to amount to anything unless she "catches" a good patron—a leading business man, politician, or some other person of consequence. It is extremely difficult for a geisha to attain any degree of success without financial backing.

It is in picking out a liberal patron that a geisha is able to display her greatest talents. For it is not so much the patron who seeks the geisha as it is the geisha who seeks the patron, and for a dozen men who pose as though they had money but one actually has.

Not always, however, does a geisha seek out a man with money. Many a great geisha stakes an ambitious young man in whom she has faith. For years all of her savings and whatever she can borrow is "invested" in him. If he rises to fame and fortune (as he often does, for geisha girls are noted for their ability to pick out winners), the man will either marry her or make her his mistress. If he fails to climb the ladder of success there is one more sad and broken-hearted geisha girl.

Many successful geisha retire when they reach the age of about 35 and open their own houses. These are invariably tiny affairs hiring from two to half a dozen girls. These houses do not do business direct with their customers or even with the restaurants and machiai, but through a central exchange.

Geisha are divided into several classifications. There is the marugakae, whose parents have borrowed a sum of money in advance. Whatever she earns is taken from her for a stipulated period of years. Then there is the wake, or one-half, and shichisan, or three-sevenths, who, as these words imply, receive one-half and three-sevenths of what they earn respectively. They pay their debts or those of their parents from this. Finally there are the mise-gari, or title renters, who are independent girls having their own homes. They pursue their business in the name of some reputable geisha house, to which they pay about $10 a month for the rental of the house title.

A full-fledged geisha girl earns anywhere from 2 yen, or about 60 cents, to $5 an hour; an oshaku, or wine pourer, about 30 cents. The machiai takes a commission, then the central exchange takes its commission, and finally the geisha house where the girl is employed subtracts its share. Often the girl

When Temperature Drops and Snow Flies—Enjoy the Outdoors

Do you fear cold weather—or enjoy it? The world is alive to the health and fun of winter sports. But dress warmly! It's a basic principle of health . . your greatest protection against colds.

Child Health Begins with Warm Bodies

Duofold is made for every member of the family. Be sure your active boys and girls don't get hot—then cold . . then COLDS. Give them the protection of Duofold.

Note how patented Duofold fabric is utterly different from any other underwear material. Two ultra thin layers interlocked with an air space between.

Who said you had to wear heavy underwear to keep warm in cold-weather . . ?

Another fallacy passes into the limbo of the outmoded. No longer is it necessary to wear old-fashioned winter underwear in order to keep warm and ward off colds. No longer is it style to wear "summer underwear the year 'round." Modern lightweight Duofold Health Underwear is as warm as the former . . . as comfortable as the latter. And gives you far more health protection than either. See it at leading men's wear and department stores.

Be a Sleeping Beauty

Bothered by Insomnia? Relax!

By ELEANOR NANGLE

THERE are people who just love their insomnia; who take it to bed with them as a small child clutches his teddy bear. Their insomnia, you see, is good material for martyrdom. Their idea of snappy conversation is telling you how they heard each stroke of the clock all the long night through. A psychiatrist is what they need.

But even the least neurotic of us have bouts of sleeplessness on occasion. And no wonder. Being city bred and city wise, we're inevitably victims of a twentieth-century ailment. We don't know how to relax. Our brains get overtired, our nerves are punch drunk. But our muscles don't know an honest day's work. The result: jitters. Grandma and grandpa respectively scrubbed floors and chopped wood. They knew what it was to be physically tired. We don't—much as we scream about weariness.

When muscles are inactive there is tension. The only solution is to learn how to relax. We have to induce relaxation, whereas they were so tired it was automatic. It's all a little odd, but what phase of our modern city life isn't? We can only make the best of what we find confronting us.

You might be asking at this point why insomnia is a beauty doctor's business. Well, it is. Lack of the necessary amount of sleep robs women of their looks and their vitality. There is no more potent poison than fatigue. No diabolical artist could draw such ageing lines, such eye smudges, as does insomnia.

To worry about insomnia is to court it. If you find yourself so wrought up that you can't sleep, exercise mental discipline. Just think, "O, what the heck!" and lie in your little bed reflecting on pleasant things. Think of everything but your sleeplessness. Lend the full force of your mind to everything but your own immediate problems.

Failing this, turn to outside means of sleep inducement. The deep breath trick is wonderful. All professional people of wisdom take deep breaths when they feel the jitters coming on. And they do have the jitters, even the most experienced of them. Take six or seven long breathers right from the diaphragm, with ribs lifting as you inhale. Don't gasp. Just breathe, slowly, rhythmically. It's marvelous for regaining your lost composure.

When you have the jitters that you know presage sleeplessness—and you're just a dummy if you don't know overfatigue when you suffer from it—the best thing to do is to take steps to circumvent it. There is always the warm bath trick. Fill the tub with water at no more than 98 degrees and loll in it. Read if you like. You'll find tension disappearing.

An hour in a tepid tub is worth two tossing in bed. When you feel exhausted, fall in.

Then there is exercise. It's the best, the soundest method of overcoming the tension that produces insomnia. Not physical jerks, not the old army set-ups, but exercises that are relaxers. These are the stretching variety.

Stand before your open window and stretch—up, up, UP! Slither the arms upward until you feel the pull even in your finger tips! Take a deep breath and stretch high. Then, quite suddenly, stop stretching, stop reaching, and let yourself flop forward! Let your arms fall toward the floor, your head flopping downward—like a puppet whose strings have suddenly been completely loosened. Do this half a dozen times, and if you've a tense nerve, a tight muscle, in your spine, you're just holding out on all the experts.

Incidentally, those exercise machines are not to be sniffed at. An inexpensive one, provided it makes you stretch, is a good investment. You mustn't overdo. And you mustn't go at it too vigorously. A mild workout, no matter how tired you think you are (if you're a brain worker rather than a muscle worker), will relax muscle tension and in its way induce sleep.

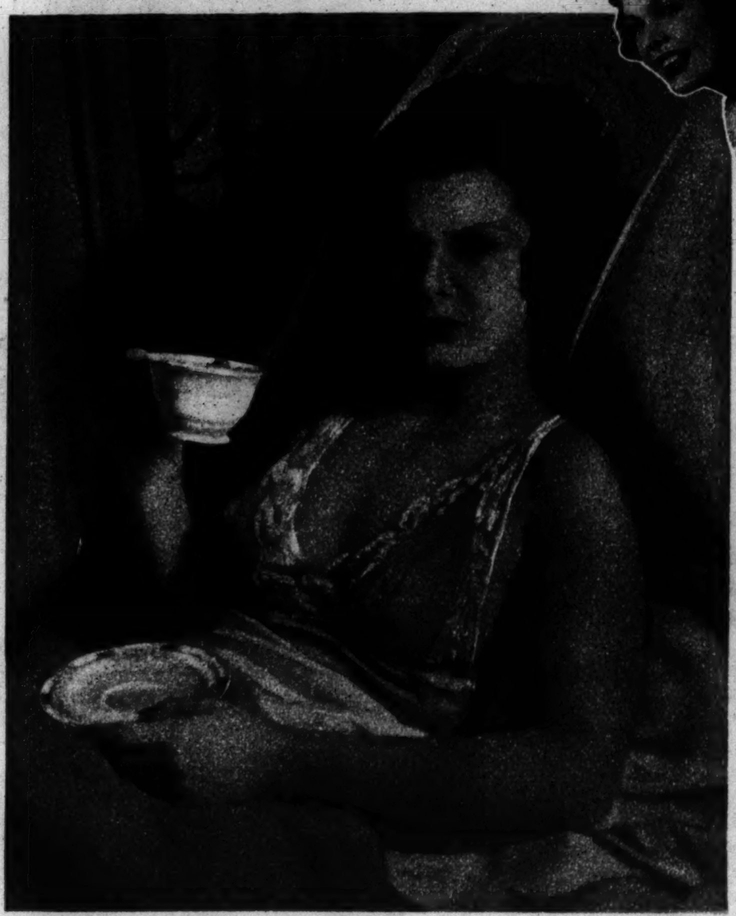
It sounds awfully silly and feels even sillier, but when you're too jittery to sleep you can really induce drowsiness if you elevate your feet. Put pillows under your heels so your feet are higher than your head. We've even heard of people who put blocks under the foot of the bed. This is a good trick for very thin, very nervous people prone to indigestion.

And, speaking of indigestion, don't eat before you go to bed if you're an uneasy sleeper. Let other, sturdier folk gorge on heavier foods while you relax. But a cup of warm milk, sipped in bed just before you turn off the light, is soothing to some people.

Then there is always reading. If you're one who is fascinated when you read it's probably not the cure for you unless you choose something dull. We've been told there's nothing better than a poor detective story to put people to sleep.

But the big trick, really, if insomnia torments you occasionally, is to turn off your mind when you turn off the light and to rout nerve tension!

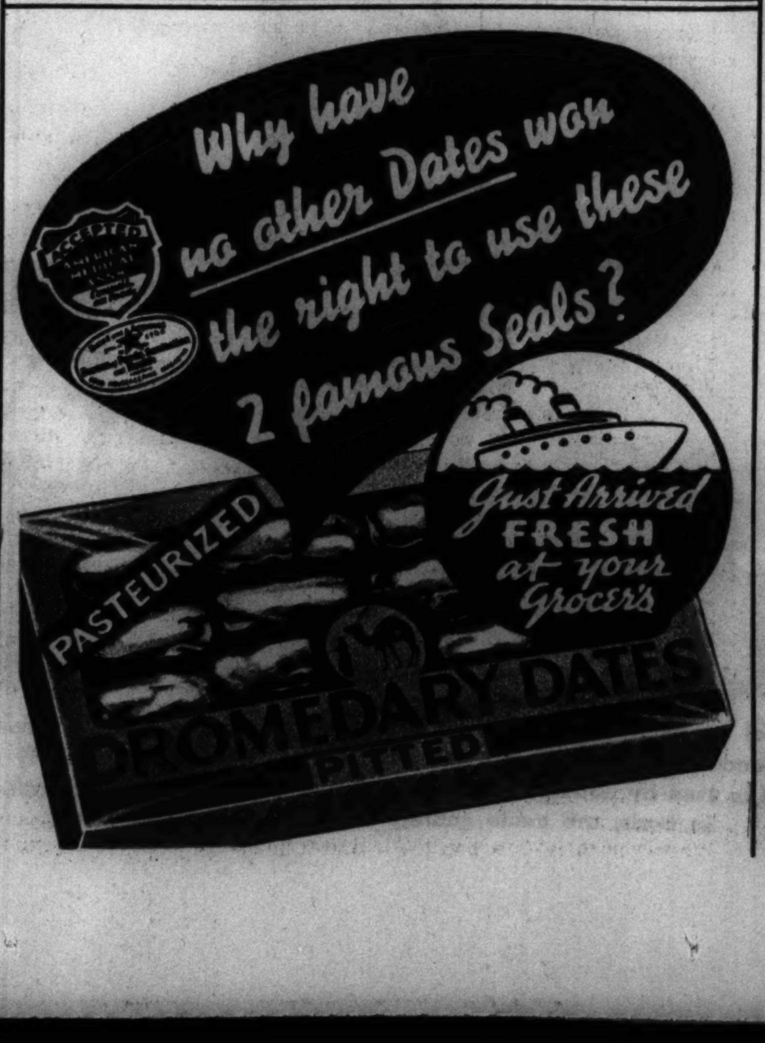
There are few women who are beautiful when they sleep—but getting plenty of sleep is one of the best of all beautifiers.



A cup of hot milk, sipped in bed just before you turn off the light, is soothing to a great many insomniacs. It encourages the relaxed drowsiness which precedes sound sleep. (Tribune Studio photos.)

Taut muscles are one of the principal causes of the jitteriness that induces sleeplessness. A short workout with an exercise machine will make you relax.

There's no cure for insomnia like deep breaths and simple stretching exercises, with windows flung wide open. All the tension along the spine is immediately relieved.



Inexpensive Cuts Make These Lamb Dishes

This lamb and vegetable pie was made from an inexpensive cut of meat and is a delicious one-dish meal.

Cushion style shoulder of lamb is boned at the market and roasted with a savory bread stuffing.

By MARY MEADE

ECONOMICAL cuts of lamb were used to prepare these two handsome meat dinners. For a lamb pie like the one pictured, shank, breast, or shoulder, all inexpensive cuts, may be used. Shoulder is the choice also for the other dish shown here.

To make a pie like this, cut the meat into small pieces, dredge in flour, and brown in hot fat. Place in a greased casserole with diced vegetables (such as potatoes, carrots, onions, celery, peas, cauliflower) and pour over the mixture a gravy made from the fat left from browning the meat. Bake at 350 degrees for about 1½ hours, or until the meat is tender, placing tiny baking powder biscuits around the edge of the casserole fifteen minutes before serving time. Increase oven heat to brown the biscuits.

To prepare cushion lamb shoulder, have the shoulder bone removed and one side of the piece of meat sewed at the market. Fill the cavity thus left with a bread dressing and skewer the edges together. Roast uncovered, fat side up, at 350 degrees for about 30 to 35 minutes a pound.

During the cooking the stuffing expands, giving the meat a "cushion" shape. Any preferred stuffing may be used. I have a recipe for a pineapple stuffing which is particularly nice with this meat and which lack of space prohibits printing. A self-addressed, stamped envelope (sent to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune) will bring it to you.

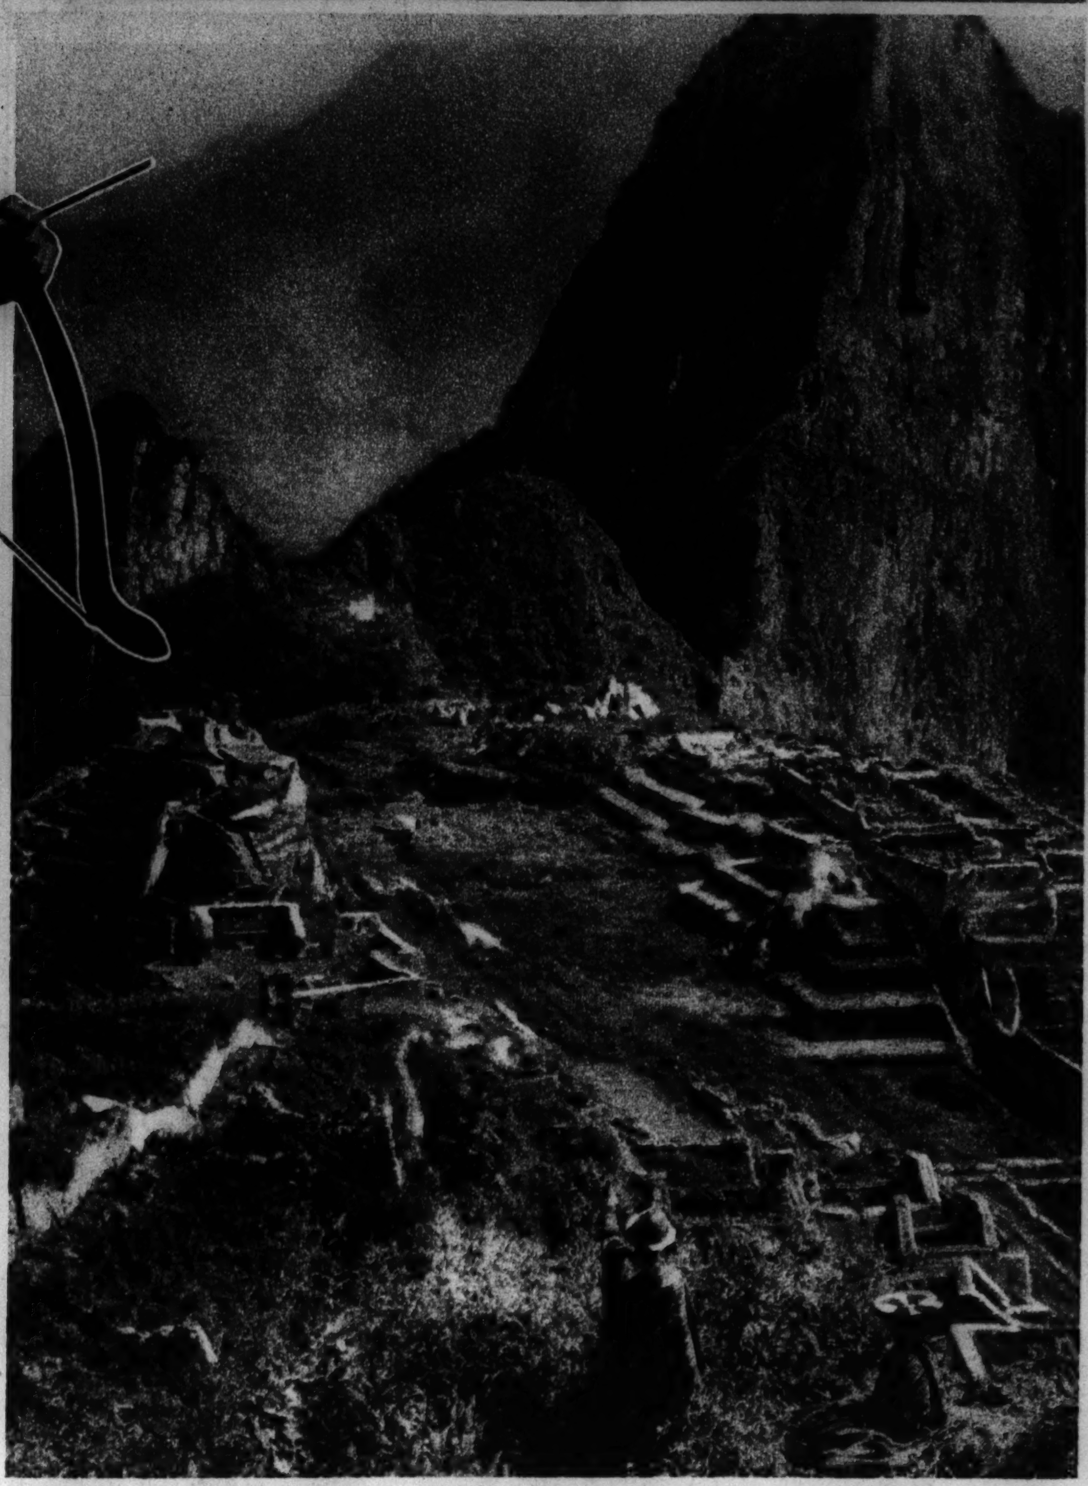
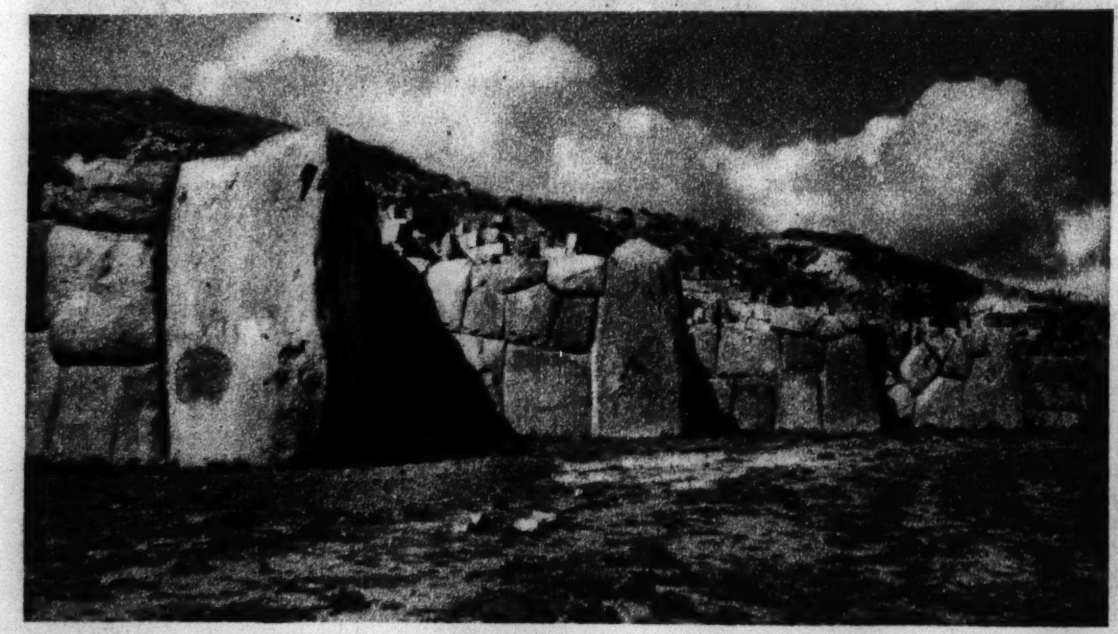
1 Etched with traditions that derive from mythology and physically perpetuated in ruins that are often ranked with the seven wonders of the world, the Maya-Inca-Aztec period stands today as the western hemisphere's most famous contribution to archaeology and ethnology. Mexico, homeland of the Aztecs, commemorates its history with a ceremonial pageant near Mexico City. The archer represents a pre-Aztec era warrior.

Land of the Sun God



2 Predating the Aztec culture of Mexico, the Inca civilization left remarkable evidence of its development in the great stone ruins of Peru. Up the Urubamba valley from Cuzco, ancient Inca capital, is this rampart, a maze of bastions, towers, and cliffside farms sprawled over the pinnacles and cliffs.



3 In the same region is the Sacsahuaman fortress, architectural wonder of the ancient world. Built from gigantic stones and fitted so closely that in many cases a knife blade cannot enter the crack, the structure is puzzling in that the Incas knew nothing of iron and left no evidence of other tools capable of such large-scale sculpture.

4 Another view of the Urubamba valley fortress (photo No. 2), giving a clear picture of the stair step farms built more than a thousand years ago and still worked successfully by natives such as those in the picture.

5 The sun god worship of the ancient Inca finds an almost literal following today among tourists who view the sunsets over Lake Titicaca, called the world's highest navigable lake. More nearly an inland sea, it extends from Peru into Bolivia and is used by natives for transportation of produce and handicraft. Boats such as this, used in trade, are made entirely of reeds, even to the sails.

The pick-a-back combination during takeoff. An artist's conception of the release of the smaller ship far above the clouds. The pylon arrangement atop the larger plane has been altered since this was drawn.

A Plane That Has to Reduce to Land

Pick-a-Back Must Use or Dump All Fuel

By WAYNE THOMIS

A NUMBER of additional details concerning Imperial Airways' composite or "pick-a-back" airplane, which is to consist of a flying boat and a smaller seaplane designed to carry a 1,000-pound mail load across the Atlantic against a 60-mile-an-hour head wind, have come to this department recently.

This machine was suggested and engineered by Maj. R. H. Mayo, an official of Imperial Airways to take advantage of the known fact that an airplane will fly with a far heavier load than it is able to pull into the air from land or water. It is a variation of the catapult idea with which aeronautical engineers are toying the world over.

In this particular instance the seaplane will be loaded onto a special carrying rack on the back of the large flying boat. The axes of the ships will be lined up and then the two machines will be locked together.

The small plane will carry its full load of fuel, crew, and revenue cargo—a total weight beyond its capacity to lift with its own engines. The larger machine will carry only enough fuel for a flight of an hour or more and thus will be very lightly loaded.

At takeoff the engines of both machines will be opened up together. The theory is that the two airplanes will be able to get into the air with a load which would be too much for the single smaller plane. The composite airplane will then climb to a predetermined altitude.

Once at this height, the locking mechanism is to be released and the two planes are to part. The little seaplane will carry on to its goal—presumably some port in Canada or the United States—alone. The mother ship will turn back to its moorings.

This sounds at first rather like a wild dream, but Major Mayo's engineering reputation in Great Britain is such that when he put the matter before the board of directors of Imperial Airways, a notably conservative body, they ordered the composite machine built by Short Bros. of Rochester, England.

The lower half of the composite, named Maia, or "mother," was completed first. This machine was quite similar to the 40,000-pound Short flying boats, of which a large number now have been delivered to Imperial. Then the Mercury, the smaller machine, was completed and only recently passed its individual flying tests.

The more interesting of the two planes undoubtedly is the Mercury, and it is of this machine that this article will deal chiefly.

Mercury is a high-wing monoplane of extraordinarily clean lines. The fuselage is an oval, carefully carried out to the tail in the best possible streamlined form. The wings are tapered in thickness and width from the root to a razor-sharp tip. The only parasite drag on this machine will be the floats and the struts which attach them to the wings and fuselage.

It is constructed entirely of metal, duralumin being used for spars, ribs, longerons, and skin of both wings and fuselage. The only fabric on the machine is used to cover the ailerons and the rudder and flipper surfaces.

Like the Maia, the Mercury is a four-motored machine, the engines being Napier Rapier V's, a 16-cylinder air-cooled engine of H type. That is, the cylinders are arranged in rows of four and placed so that when viewed head on the lines of the engine resemble the letter H.

These engines are of a new type which has been thoroughly tested in slightly higher horsepower brackets by the flying corps. They are eminently reliable, economical in fuel consumption, and have an unusually low frontal area for their power. All these qualities fit them ideally for their job.

The engines are slightly supercharged and will deliver sea level power up to 3,000 feet. The Mercury, however, is intended to cruise at 11,000 feet. There, with throttles wide open, the Rapiers will deliver 250 horsepower each, so that the plane will cruise on 1,000 horsepower.

The engines are not fitted with controlable-pitch air screws, as in other modern planes, because the engines are not to be used as the only means of takeoff. Instead, two-bladed wooden air screws with a pitch which will give an optimum cruising speed at the 11,000-foot level have been fitted. These, of course, are not very efficient on the ground.

The dimensions of the Mercury are as follows: Span, 73 feet; length, 51 feet; height to top of vertical fin, 20 feet 3 inches; track between the floats, 14 feet 6 inches; wing area, 611 square feet.

All the fuel which the plane will carry will be stored in one enormous 1,200-gallon tank, integral with the main spar of the wing. The surging of so much weight in taxiing, takeoff, landing, or even in maneuvers in the air might well cause accidents, and so the Short Bros. engineers fitted the tank with an ingenious system of subdivisions and flap valves to limit that surge.

At present the floats will permit it to carry 12,500 pounds on water. This is only slightly over half its weight for trans-Atlantic crossings, which will be about 20,000 pounds. Thus it becomes apparent that, fully loaded, the plane could not be put down on water, because it would sink.

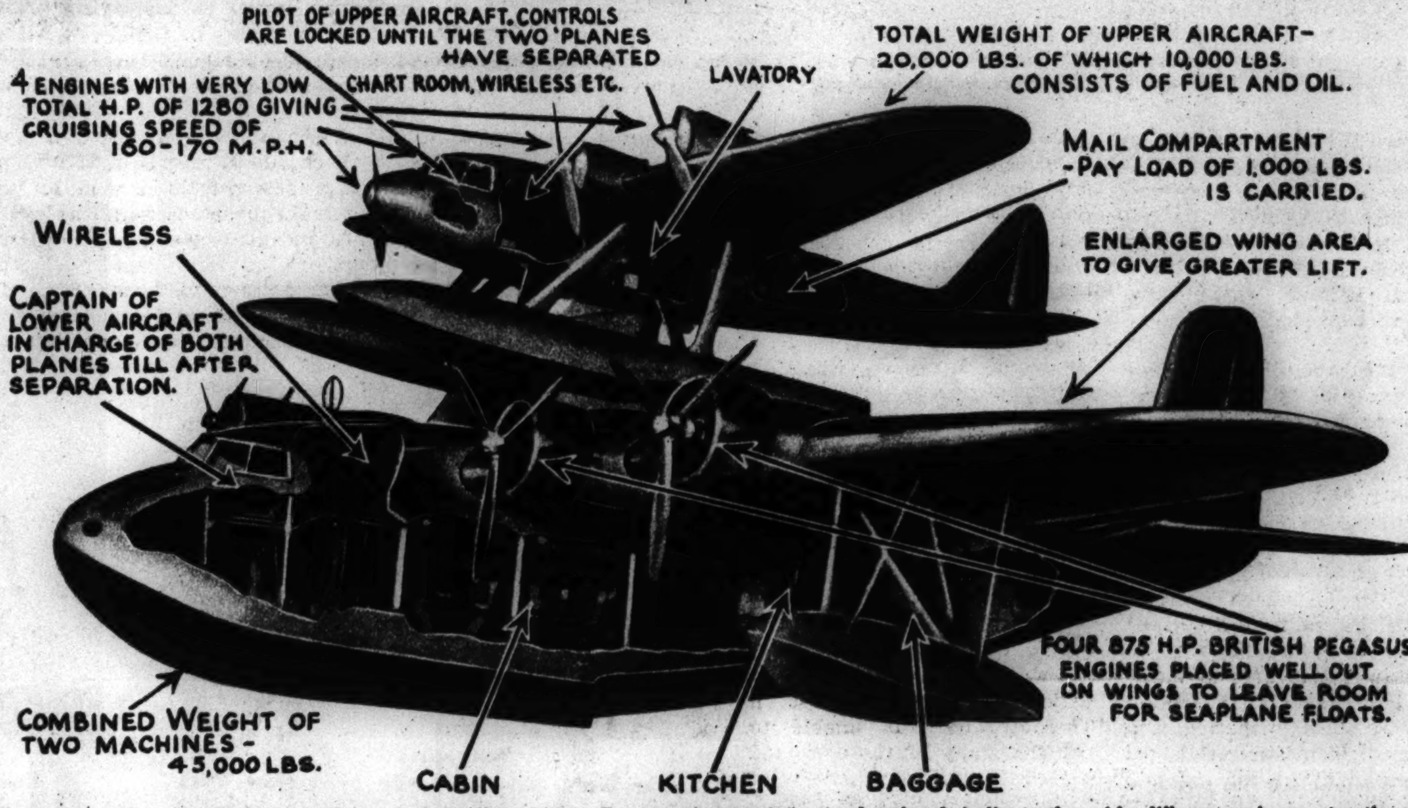
The engineers point out that, once launched, the Mercury must be flown until the engines drink up enough fuel to reduce the weight to 12,000 pounds or less, or the fuel must be dumped if a forced landing becomes necessary.

The Mercury is not fitted with flaps, with the result that, since it is an unusually clean, fast machine, its landing speed is very high and it has a very flat angle of glide. Pilots say that such machines "float." This is a distinct disadvantage in getting a plane into a restricted area, particularly if there are obstructions around the area.

The Mercury's landing speed at the 12,500 pounds weight at which it was first tested is about 80 miles an hour. This is the absolute minimum, because the highly tapered wings of the machine stall viciously and suddenly at a mile or so an hour below this speed. This condition is one of the penalties of an unflapped machine.

When the plane was demonstrated recently by Lankester Parker, test pilot and engineer for Short Bros., it was brought in at about 100 miles an hour. He leveled off at about 20 feet above the water and, with engines completely throttled, sailed for more than a mile before losing the 20 miles an hour and 20 feet of height necessary for landing.

It is calculated that fully loaded the machine would have a landing speed of 124 miles an hour. There probably will never be an attempt to land it at full load, however, even though larger floats or even landing wheels are fitted in the future.



A cut-away drawing of the two planes in takeoff position. Comparative statistics in the sketch indicate the wide differences in construction of the two machines.

Parker said after the first public demonstration that while the Mercury was designed to cruise at 160 miles an hour, the air speed indicator shows that it cruises at nearly 20 miles an hour faster. He said this could not be attributed to an error in the instrument, because the pilot tubes through which the indicator is operated are placed in exactly the same way on the Mercury as on the large Imperial boats, and actual operations with these craft show that the error in their air speed indicators is less than three miles an hour.

Parker also estimated that with the cruising speed about 180 miles an hour, the top speed at levels where the engines could deliver full power must be about 211 miles an hour. This extra speed delights the designers considerably, as can be imagined.

In its fully loaded condition the Mercury will have a wing loading of 33 pounds a square foot. This is only slightly higher than that of a large number of American flying boats of the Sikorsky S-42 clipper type, and of several American land planes such as the Douglas DC-3, which has a loading of about seven pounds less.

Any number of racing planes have had higher loadings, with higher top speeds and lower landing speeds. Racing planes with wing loadings as high as 50 pounds a square foot have been successfully flown.

The reason for the Mercury's ultra-high landing speeds is that the machine was designed before the use of flaps for large planes had become general in England. When Short Bros. developed their own flaps for the Imperial boats it was decided that a flap for the Mercury would increase its weight too much to be worth while.

Predictions of disaster for the composite craft the first time an attempt would be made to separate it in the air into its two component parts have been made the world over among flying men who have heard about the project.

Major Mayo and the pilots of Short Bros. who actually will do the flying of the machines say they do not believe the separation will be difficult.

The company reports the separation will be made thus:

When operating as a single unit the pilot of the Maia is the only one who operates the controls. Those of the Mercury are locked. The two pilots are in constant communication by telephone, and neither can release his own craft without the other's assistance.

When the pilot of the upper ship is ready to cut loose he passes the word to the Maia pilot. If he, too, is ready, he agrees. The Mercury pilot first releases the clamps which are holding the ships together from his end. Then the Maia pilot releases the clamps which are holding from below.

Separation then follows immediately, the theory being that aerodynamic pressure will force the two apart. Furthermore, the unlocking of the planes cannot be accomplished until this pressure is sufficient for the job.

Careful in everything they attempt, the Short Bros. engineers now point out that the Mercury is merely an experimental plane and that the ultimate small, fast mail carrier to be catapulted from the back of a larger ship possibly will be a land plane, thus eliminating the enormous drag of the floats and float struts. The land plane version would, of course, have a retracting undercart.

Head-on view of the smaller Mercury, graphically revealing the oval compactness of its fuselage. The ship is designed for distance flights and must use up or dump its fuel load in order to land safely.

Geishas—The Life of the Party

receives less than a tenth of what she collects.

The geisha exchange, being the most powerful, usually takes the lion's share of the profits. For years the geisha houses and the girls suffered in silence, but recently they staged a sit-down strike in a Buddhist temple in the city of Osaka. They demanded the right to deal direct with their customers. The girls won the strike, but are not faring so well, because most of the restaurants are in debt to the exchange and the exchange will not permit girls not members to appear in restaurants and machiai under their control.

Like everything else in Japan, the geisha institution is changing. Visitors from western countries are usually dumfounded at geisha parties to see the girls clear the things in the center of the large mat-floored room as the night advances and begin dancing the fox trot.

You do not have to look far for the reason for this transition. The circumstances which caused the geisha institution to develop are disappearing. The girls are finding it necessary to adjust themselves to the new situation.

The people of Japan, as a result of their contacts with the west, particularly with America, are changing their inborn characteristics. Today the Japanese have adopted American business methods. As a result of this the people are becoming far more frank than they used to be.

Influenced by American customs, more opportunity is given members of opposite sexes to mix and for women and girls to appear in public places where formerly the only women present were geisha girls. When Mr. Sato goes out to dine nowadays he may bring along his wife and daughters, something unheard of in the olden days.

It is also true that love is beginning to play an important part in Japanese marriages. Although most couples are betrothed after seeing each other once or twice, a period of courtship is permitted nowadays between the engagement and the marriage. If the couple find that they do not love each other during this period, the marriage is often called off.

So the main reasons which caused the geisha institution to be without counterpart are vanishing.

But this does not mean that the geisha girl is passing. She is adjusting herself to the changes. Several years ago the country was swept by a craze for western dancing, particularly American jaz. The young men began to flock to the newly opened dance halls rather than to geisha parties, and it appeared at first that the geisha profession was doomed. But the girls soon took lessons in western dancing, and today nine out of ten Tokio geisha girls are able to dance the latest American steps.

To train the geisha in modern ways, schools have been opened in all large cities. Here the girls are taught the latest dance steps and how to paint their faces like Hollywood motion picture stars. They also receive lessons on world problems and other outstanding events. Recently, in preparation for the large number of visitors from all parts of the world who are expected in Japan during the Olympic games in 1940, lessons in English and French are being given the girls.

Indicating the trend of the times, the most famous geisha girl today, Katsutaro, did not win her fame as the favorite of one of the nation's leaders, as was the case with every one of her predecessors, but because of her lovely voice. She earns most of her money from radio appearances, concerts, and large Japanese-style banquets. Her income is several times that of the prime minister.

But not all geisha have deserted their former calling. Hundreds are the favorites of political, business, industrial, and financial leaders.

Queen Victoria's Remarkable John Brown

Ruler Upset by Death of Servant

One of the cairns erected by Queen Victoria, who had almost a passion for having such monuments built to mark occasions of great rejoicing or sorrow. In the erection of the one pictured here the queen laid the first stone, the prince consort the second, and after them their sons and daughters according to their ages.

By E. E. P. TISDALL

(Reprinted by arrangement with the London Express.)

THE extraordinary case of Lady Florence Dixie caused an enormous stir in March of 1883.

Lady Florence was by way of being a celebrity. She had traveled very extensively, and in those more sheltered days a woman who had journeyed through almost unknown Patagonia (then one of the wildest corners of the world) and had tales to tell that rivaled those of the best known male explorers, naturally gathered some renown. She was a fearless hunter, noted capital shot, and her health and strength were remarkable.

Yet one night she returned to her house, "The Fishery," near Windsor, tottering, and more shaken than after a bad fall in the hunting field, her clothes plastered with mud. Before she fainted away she managed to tell that she had been attacked in the plantation by two enormous women dressed in dark clothes who were so tall and strong that she felt sure they were men disguised. She was certain she would have been killed had not her St. Bernard dog driven her attackers away.

Lady Florence's brother was sent for and both he and her husband were so seriously alarmed by her condition that the police were called in.

The authorities put the outrage down to the Fenians, who seemed to have been the scapegoats for every crime and outrage for which the police were unable to find a perpetrator.

The affair, which became the talk of the country, reached the ears of the queen who sent John Brown over to "The Fishery" to carry a present to Lady Florence and to make inquiries as to her health.

In spite of it being exceedingly cold weather, Brown drove over in an open dog cart. He was accustomed to exposure and thought nothing of facing the chill of an English spring. When he arrived at the Dixie house and heard all the circumstances connected with the attack and of the failure of the police to discover any clue, he started out for the plantation to see what he could find for himself. With Scots thoroughness he went all over the grounds examining everything which might throw a light on the matter; he even "examined the dog Hubert!"

The case so puzzled him that he disregarded the bitterly cold wind while he loitered about the plantation and got thoroughly chilled before he returned to Windsor.

The following day he sickened. Shortly after he had to take to his bed erysipelas set in and in spite of all the queen's physicians could do Brown sank rapidly and on March 27, 1883, died without recognizing his brothers.

Not one of the household dared to tell the queen, and Prince Leopold took the sad duty upon himself.

The queen wrote in her journal:

"Leopold came to my dressing room, and broke the dreadful news to me that my good, faithful Brown has passed away early this morning. Am terribly upset by this loss, which removes one who was so devotedly attached to my service and who did so much for my personal comfort. It is the loss not only of a servant but of a real friend."

Prince Leopold, who broke the news of John Brown's death to his mother, Queen Victoria.

And the same day Mr. Gladstone wrote to Queen Victoria:

"Downing street, 29th March, 1883.

"Mr. Gladstone presents his humble duty and presumes to lay before your majesty the expression of the sincere concern with which he has learned that your majesty has been deprived, by a sudden and fatal illness, of the services of Mr. J. Brown. He is able in some degree to understand how the aid and attention of an attached, respected, and intelligent domestic prolonged through many years, and naturally productive of an ever-growing confidence, must, when Francis Clark, a cousin of John Brown, who was given the post of attendant to the queen after Brown's death.

withdrawn thus abruptly, leave a sense of serious loss, and this most of all in your majesty's elevated sphere, and closely occupied life. Even in his own contracted circles of personal relations, he has had occasion to feel how much more of proximity may be the natural growth of such service than the outer world would readily suppose.

"Mr. Gladstone trusts your majesty may be able to select a good and efficient successor, though it would be too much to hope that any one, however capable, can at once fill the void."

No one ever filled the void that John Brown's death created.

He died in his room in the Clarence tower in Windsor castle and there his dead body lay in a shell until the handsome state coffin was constructed. This bore a simple name plate on which was engraved:

JOHN BROWN
Born December 8th, 1826
Died March 27th, 1883

The court circular which notified the birth and deaths of minor princes with a few words had a whole column on the death of John Brown, the royal ghillie. It was thought that the queen herself had made the suggestion of what should be said. Therefore, it is of more than usual interest.

"Mr. John Brown, who for many years has been the queen's personal attendant, died somewhat suddenly at Windsor castle on Tuesday night. Mr. Brown had taken a cold on Sunday week and since Friday had remained in his apartment in the castle. Erysipelas, which affected his head, set in on Monday. Sir William Jenner, physician to the queen, was in attendance, but his skill was unavailing. The patient became much worse on Tuesday and was unable to recognize any of those around him. His two brothers were with him when he died, as was also Sir William Jenner.

"The melancholy event has caused the deepest regret to the queen, the royal family, and all the members of the royal household. To her majesty the loss is irreparable, and the death of this truly faithful and devoted servant has been a grievous shock to the queen. In 1849 Mr. John Brown entered the queen's service as one of the Balmoral ghillies, and by his careful attention, steadiness, and intelligence, he rose in 1858 to the position of the queen's personal servant in Scotland, which in 1864 was extended to that of constant personal attendant to her majesty on all occasions. During the last eighteen and a half years he served her majesty constantly, and never once absented himself from duty for a single day. He has accompanied the queen in her daily walks and drives, and all her journeys and expeditions, as well as personally waiting on her at banquets, etc. An honest, faithful, and devoted follower, a trustworthy, discreet and straightforward man, and possessed of strong sense, he filled a position of great and onerous responsibility, the duties of which he performed with such constant and unceasing care as to secure for himself the real friendship of the queen.

"Mr. Brown was a native of Aberdeenshire, having been born at Crathie in 1826. His father was a farmer at Bush, on the state of Col. Farquharson of Invercauld. There was a large family of sons and daughters, some of whom went abroad to seek their fortune, but John remained at home, helping his father, and afterwards entering the royal service, with which he has been connected for over thirty years.

"A few years ago, in token of her appreciation of his long and valuable service, her majesty conferred on him the title of esquire. Mr. Brown had endeared himself to all in his native parish and elsewhere in Scotland. His brother, Mr. Archibald Brown, is a gentleman usher to the queen, and was formerly personal attendant to his royal highness the duke of Albany.

"Frequent reference is made to John Brown in the queen's book published in 1868 'Leaves from the Journal of Our Life in the Highlands,' and in a note, of which there are many, her majesty says under the date of September, 1858:

"'John Brown in 1858 became my regular attendant out of doors everywhere in the Highlands. He commenced as ghillie in 1849 and was selected by Albert and me to go with my carriage. In 1851 he entered our service permanently, and began that year leading my pony, and advanced that year step by step by his good character and intelligence. His attention, care, and faithfulness cannot be exceeded; and the state of my health, which of late years has been sorely tried and weakened, renders such qualifications most valuable, and indeed, most needful in a constant attendant upon all occasions. He has since (December, 1865) most deservedly been promoted to be an upper servant and my permanent personal attendant. He has all the independence and elevated feeling peculiar to the Highland race, and is singularly straightforward, simple-minded, kind-hearted, and disinterested; always ready to oblige, and of a discretion rarely to be met with. He is now in his fortieth year.

"'His father was a small farmer who lived at Bush on the opposite side of Balmoral. He is the second of nine brothers, three of whom have died, two are in Australia and New Zealand, two are living in the neighborhood of Balmoral, and the youngest (Archibald) is valet to our son Leopold, and is an excellent and trustworthy young man.'

"The remains of the late Mr. John Brown are still lying in his apartment at Windsor castle, but will, it is expected, be removed from the castle on Monday next and conveyed by train to Scotland for interment in Crathie Kirkyard, Aberdeenshire."

After having said so much of Mr. Brown in the issue of March 31, 1883, the "court circular" makes no further mention of him or of his funeral.

The queen went out in her pony carriage the day after he died. Another man was already in John Brown's post, but his place in the queen's esteem was never filled.

John Brown was a Presbyterian, and according to the rules of that church a service was conducted in the room where he lay dead. The independent minister at Windsor officiated and to that service Queen Victoria and the Princess Beatrice came to offer their last personal homage to the dead man.

Soon after, Doctor Profeit came from Balmoral to superintend the conveying of the body to Scotland and on April 2 the funeral procession wended its way from the castle.

Queen Victoria laid a wreath on Brown's coffin and so did the Empress Eugénie, widow of Napoleon III., deposed emperor of France, and mother of the prince imperial, whose death in the Zulu campaign was recorded previously. (Brown had always been courteous and kindly to that unhappy lady.) It is not often that a ghillie of the glens goes to his grave with wreaths from two empresses on his coffin.

Every shop in Windsor was closed out of respect for the dead man as his body passed on the first lap of his journey to the place of his birth. He was taken to the pretty house near Craig Gowen which Queen Victoria had had built for him, but which he never occupied until he came to lie there in state.

He was laid to rest in the little kirkyard near the castle gate. It is near Balmoral, but the river runs between him and the castle where he served for so long; by the grave of the doughty old Presbyterian stand the ivy-clad ruins of the old pre-reformation church; around him are the graves of many other old servants who were in the employ of Queen Victoria.

But rarely had there been seen so many flowers in the kirkyard as there were on April 5 when John Brown was buried.

The queen's wreath bore an inscription written by her own hand: "A tribute of loving, grateful, and everlasting friendship and affection from his truest, best, and most faithful friend, Victoria R. & I."

Could any man have better written of him by his sovereign?

At Balmoral, Crathie and Braemar they missed the stalwart form of John Brown for many a day, for he was a famous figure of the countryside and its own folk and they were proud of him. He was only 57 and considering his health and bodily strength it was truly said of him in the north that he "was cut off in his prime."

His grave is marked by a plain headstone of native granite placed there by the queen. A thistle is carved on the pediment and it is bordered with oak and ivy leaves in low relief. It bears the following inscription:

THIS STONE IS ERECTED IN AFFECTIONATE AND GRATEFUL MEMORY OF
JOHN BROWN
PERSONAL ATTENDANT AND BELOVED FRIEND OF QUEEN VICTORIA
IN WHOSE SERVICE HE HAD BEEN
FOR 34 YEARS
Born Craithenaird 8 December 1826
Died Windsor Castle 27 March 1883

"That friend on whose fidelity you count, that friend given you by circumstance over which you have no control, was God's own gift."

Much later a life-sized bronze statue by Boehm of John Brown was erected near Balmoral castle and on the plinth was inscribed:

"Friend more than servant
Loyal, faithful, brave,
Self less than duty
Even to the grave."

Queen Victoria erected two monuments to two very different commoners, Lord Beaconsfield (Benjamin Disraeli) and John Brown. On both were inscribed "By his grateful Sovereign and Friend." One had caused her to be proclaimed the Empress of India; the other had led her pony; both had served her with exceptional devotion in their own way.

No One Else Ever Takes His Place

A statue to John Brown's memory was not the only token of how a great queen remembered a humble servant. There was a cairn raised to his memory on a hill near Balmoral. Queen Victoria had almost a passion for having cairns erected to mark occasions of great sorrow or rejoicing.

In other ways the memory of John Brown was kept green. The queen gave all his fellow servants a gold scarf pin. On the obverse was a bust of John Brown in low relief and on the reverse the monogram V. R. The recipients were requested to always wear them on the anniversary of his death.

She also had several busts made, copied from the statue by Boehm, and these she scattered about the royal palaces, particularly in her own room. Later all were destroyed by King Edward's orders.

But most pathetic of all, during the rest of Queen Victoria's life, there appeared on the luncheon table every Sunday two small salt cellars which Brown had given her and a set of cheap egg cups which Brown had bought in Edinburgh were also not forgotten. The salt cellars had always to be placed close to her hand, and no matter where she went they had to go, also. She would not sit down to her Sunday lunch unless she saw them on the table.

It is said that Brown left a diary for publication, but that immediately after his death, this, with all his papers, was impounded by Sir Henry Ponsonby on behalf of the queen. If this is true it is a pity, for such a diary would be of enormous interest now that we are at long last realizing what a truly great queen Victoria was.

After John Brown's death his post was given to his cousin, Francis Clark, and later to one of her native Indian servants, but no one truly filled John Brown's place. Should any think that the gratitude and esteem Queen Victoria gave her faithful servant was exaggerated beyond his deserts it must be remembered that John Brown gave her his entire devotion.

That the world should know of this the queen wrote a monograph upon John Brown, which she intended should be put on sale to the general public. It seems unlikely that she would have wished to do this if there were any secret between herself and her servant. But Lord Davidson, noted British divine and later archbishop of Canterbury, urged the queen not to publish it. He even threatened to resign from the deanery if she did and to please him she refrained.

Whatever John Brown's faults may have been, he had served Queen Victoria faithfully for thirty-four years and during that time had put his duty before everything else.

(THE END.)

William Gladstone, British prime minister. He sent his condolences to the queen on the occasion of Brown's death.

The Graphic Laboratory of Popular Science

By Dr. Thomas M. Beck

White-cloaked men of science, crouched over laboratory flames, test tubes in hand, find a new tool that may relieve them of the tedious analysis of solutions. It is the polarograph, pictured with its inventor at the right.

Robot Chemist May Do Tedious Laboratory Job

Prof. Jaroslav Heyrovsky of the University of Prague, Czechoslovakia, with his new device for automatic chemical analysis. Dr. Beck discusses the invention on this page.

CHEMISTS who have serenely believed themselves indispensable to modern industry have reason to feel concern about a new invention being manufactured in Europe. The operator of this machine places a few drops of the liquid to be analyzed into a small tube, makes a few adjustments, and closes a switch. The machine then produces a piece of paper on which are recorded amounts of the metals present.

The machine, known as the polarograph, is the invention of Prof. Jaroslav Heyrovsky of the University of Prague. The basic principle of it is the measurement of the voltage required to force a current to flow between two mercury electrodes immersed in a solution of a metallic salt.

As a general rule the current that flows through such a solution is approximately proportional to the voltage. With certain types of electrodes, however, an appreciable minimum voltage must be applied before the current starts to flow. This minimum voltage is unusually high in electrolytic cells in which the two electrodes are of mercury.

Such a cell (Figure 1) is that used by Professor Heyrovsky in his instrument. Figure 2 is a graph of the way the current through a dilute solution responds to increasing voltage. Practically no electricity flows until a definite voltage is reached. Then the current abruptly jumps to a higher value, above which there is little increase as the voltage rises.

Provided that there are no serious changes in the design of the electrolytic cell or in the acidity or alkalinity of the solution, each metal whose salts may be present in the solution has its own definite voltage at which a sudden jump in current occurs. The height of the jump, or the amount of current flowing, is proportional (after a few minor corrections are made) to the amount of that metal present. Thus in Figure 2 the voltage gives the name of the metal and the current the amount of it.

A diagram of the interior of the polarograph is shown in Figure 3. A battery sends its current through a wire wound spirally around a drum which is slowly rotated by an electric motor. A slide contact, which can move only in the direction of the drum's axis, follows this wire as the drum revolves and delivers to the electrolytic cell a voltage proportional to the amount of wire the slide has covered. At the start of the drum's motion this voltage is zero; at the end it is the full voltage of the battery. Since the motor moves at a steady rate, the applied voltage increases regularly.

The current produced by this voltage passes through a sensitive galvanometer equipped with a small mirror instead of a pointer. The greater the current the greater the angle by which the mirror is turned from a zero position. A tiny beam of light is reflected by this mirror to a slit in an opaque shield so constructed that as the current increases the beam moves farther along the slit to the right.

Within this shield is a cylinder covered by a sheet of photographic paper. The cylinder is geared to the motor in such a way that it makes one complete revolution in the time that the slide contact moves along the entire length of the wire. It follows that distances around the circumference of the cylinder, and hence along one edge of the photographic paper, are proportional to the voltage applied to the cell.

As the beam of light moves along the slit parallel to the axis of the cylinder it exposes a small spot on the moving paper. Since the position of the beam is governed by the galvanometer, which in turn responds to the current, it follows that distances along the other edge of the photographic paper are proportional to the current.

When the paper is developed there is found a curve such as that shown in Figure 4, in which the current is graphed against the voltage. The steps in this particular curve occur at voltages which show the presence of lead, zinc, aluminum, and sodium. The height of each step is a rough indication of the relative amount of that particular metal. A little calculation will be necessary to convert these heights into the actual amounts of the dissolved compounds.

One of the advantages of this mechanical chemist is the small amount of material that it can analyze. It is normally constructed to work with twenty drops of solution, and with a specially designed electrolytic cell it can handle as little as a tenth of a drop. Then, too, these solutions are quite dilute, usually running less than one part in a thousand of dissolved matter.

It is not likely, however, that the polarograph will ever throw many chemists out of work. For one thing, the services of a highly skilled chemical technician are required to prepare the solutions and to keep the machine in running order. For all of its ingenuity the polarograph can carry out only simple and routine analyses that an untrained youth could handle with a little instruction. Its main advantage over the latter lies in its being faster.

The instrument can also be used to analyze mixtures of certain organic materials. Its use here is limited to only those compounds that have a definite oxidizing action, and the cell measures the voltage at which this action proceeds. This voltage for any particular compound may vary according to the conditions under which it is measured, but if these conditions are carefully controlled the compounds and their quantities can be measured.

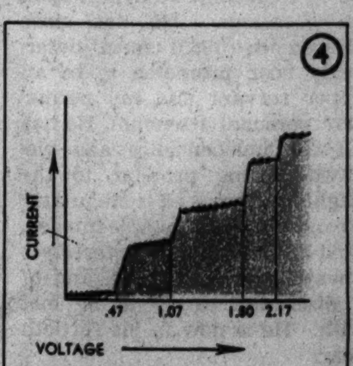

Figure 4—A typical curve obtained from the polarograph. Explanation: .47 volt indicates lead; 1.07 volts, zinc; 1.80 volts, aluminum; 2.17 volts, sodium.

Mostly About Dogs

By BOB BECKER

Little Diet Change Is Needed

This sad-eyed, wet-nosed eleven-week-old dachshund, owned by J. F. Maginnis, has a definite talent for posing. Although the dachshund is a German breed, this one bears the Irish name of Maggie Murphy.

THE arrival of autumn starts many dog owners worrying about a special cold-weather diet for their pets or about their catching a cold. Too many owners take unnecessary steps to protect their dogs against autumn and winter weather.

For instance, we once saw a woman with a chow for which she had provided a heavy woolen blanket. The chow is one of the northern breeds and has its own heavy coat to protect it from severe weather.

Feeding and grooming, however, are two important points in winter care of pets. The necessary diet of a dog does not vary a great deal. Any variation usually is only in the amount given.

In the fall it is advisable to add a little weight to the average dog that is going to be outdoors a great deal. That doesn't mean that the dog should be allowed to get an unhealthy amount of fat. But dogs that sleep in cool quarters or outside in kennels can use the extra "insulation" following the hunting season.

Outside of this slight change a dog should be given the same kinds of food in the autumn and winter that it gets in the spring and summer. A diet of meat (raw or cooked), prepared dry canned dog foods, cereals, and vegetables makes up the usual food schedule for the average dog. To these can be added such items from the table as soup, broth, toasted whole wheat bread, tomato juice, boned fish, and pieces of roast beef and lamb. The backbone of the feeding is a dry dog food—a well made food that contains meat, vitamins, cereals, and other nourishing ingredients. Such a dry food combines protein and carbohydrates (the energizing food) in sound proportions.

We have been asked if it is not a good idea to feed a dog lots of raw meat in the winter so it will have more adequate protection against the cold and against distemper. Apparently the idea is that meat is bad for dogs in the summer but good for them in the winter. It is a false notion. The average dog, a natural meat eater, needs meat in some form throughout the year if it is to have a balanced diet.

If there is any one big change in the care of our dogs when autumn and then winter prevails it's in the number of baths they get. When it's cold we believe it is sounder dog care to increase the brushing and reduce the number of baths.

As a matter of fact, the dogs kept in American homes doubtless are the cleanest, most overbathed group in the world, because the average owner gives his pet many more tubbings than actually are needed. The result often is a dry, irritated skin, much scratching by the dog, and, in the case of some breeds, coats that look bad and actually are almost ruined. Here are the things that may take the place of many baths in cold weather: A good brush and lots of brushing every day to remove dirt and dead hair, chalk or dry cleaners for dogs that are mostly white, and pine oil disinfectant on the brush to impart a clean, fragrant odor to the pup.

There are times, of course, when it is necessary to bathe a dog, no matter what the season may be. This is especially true when the pup has rolled on some offensive bit of refuse. But the practice of bathing the average house dog every week or oftener is unnecessary if the owner will provide thorough brushings.

(Etched by Walter Bohl.)

Autumn days mean hunting days when thousands of American hunting dogs go to work for their masters. In this etching Walter Bohl catches the tense action of two popular pointing breeds, the setter and the English pointer, when they have located a covey of quail.

DOG NOTES

Owners of pure-bred dogs of average or better than average appearance and conformation owe it to the dogs to show them this fall. It's lots of fun to compete in a dog show, learn more about the breed you like, and handle a dog for the first time. It's good for the dog, too, because it must be trained for a show. We advise dog owners wanting to show a dog to get acquainted with a professional handler and have him advise on how to proceed to get a dog ready for a show.

It's nothing less than amazing how much misinformation prevails about the care of dogs. For example, a reader writes us that her 2-year-old dog refuses to eat canned dog food. So she has been giving the dog raw beef, some vegetables and breakfast food, and liver. The dog has been well. Never has been taken to a veterinarian. But friends are telling the owner that beef and liver shorten the dog's life!

This statement is, of course, ridiculous. A dog must have meat. Clean, wholesome meat in a canned food is all right. And fresh beef, liver, kidney, and heart are good for a dog. A dog must have food of carbohydrate origin, too. Instead of breakfast food we feed our dogs dry biscuits to provide the carbohydrates. A good biscuit has many more food elements in it than just a breakfast food.

European dog show judges constantly are being called on to pick the winners in American shows. One outstanding European dog authority who will come to America this fall is Paul Seebass, chief Doberman pinscher judge of Germany. Mr. Seebass is going to pick the winning Dobermans in the annual specialty show of the Western Specialty Clubs association being held in Chicago Nov. 20 and 21. Mr. Seebass was chosen by the national Kennel Club of Germany at the request of the Doberman Pinscher Club of America.

LONG DISTANCE MOVING

By W. E. Hill

The van loading and the things that they get on by mistake. Once wedged in, neither tears nor threats can induce the van men to unload the borrowed radio or the box of old clothes that were to be given away. (The boy at the left is bringing out a lot of odds and ends meant for the Salvation Army, including several old copies of the Social Register.)

The china packer and the elderly lady, who work side by side and grow more and more intimate as the packing progresses. Toward five o'clock he has told her all about the wife's mother's operation for gallstones, and she has confided a lot of family secrets to him.

The unpleasant friends who tell you too late that you made a big mistake to send things to Florida or Southern California by van. Insist you should have bought a trailer second hand and taken the things yourself, or should have sent things by freight, etc., etc.

The big antique that can't be got through the door. How it got in no one seems to remember. In the foreground, three terrified members of the family are packing books in cartons.

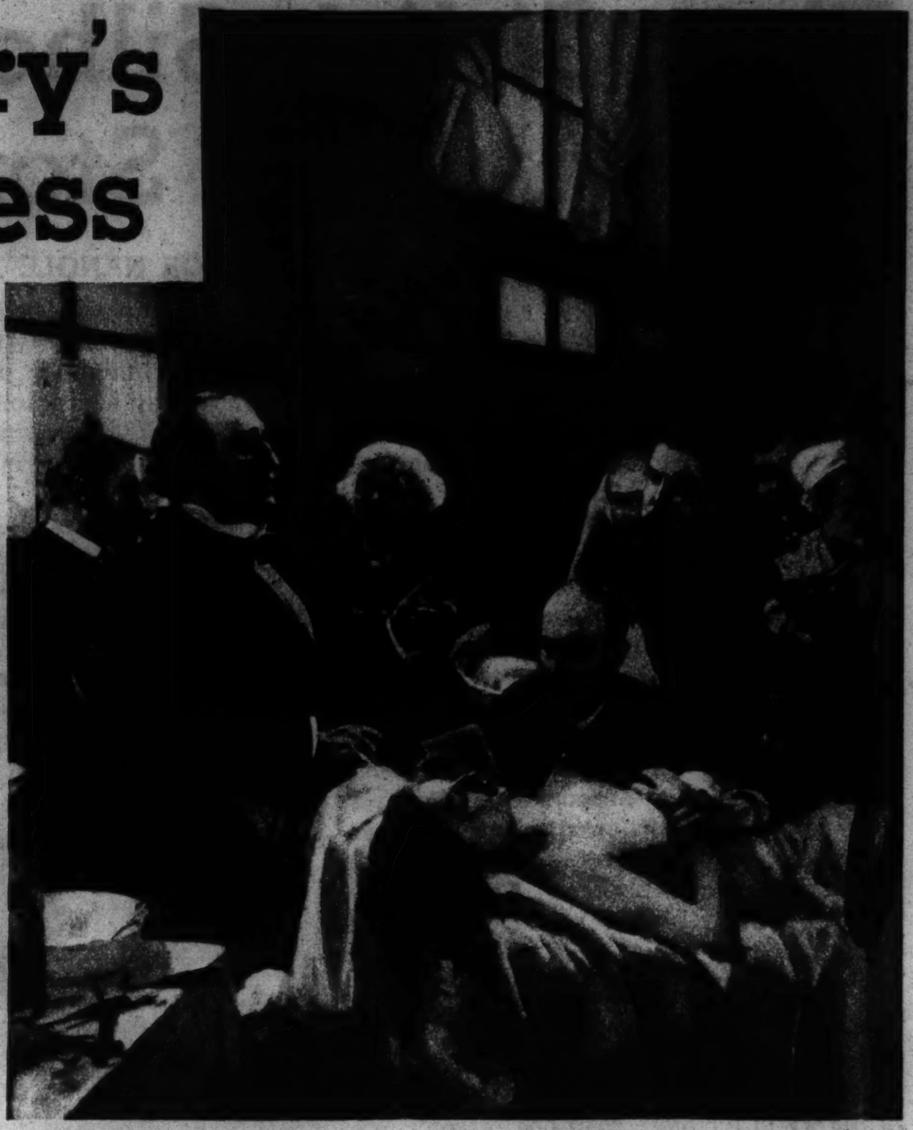
The heirlooms on the sidewalk, and the interested passers-by who make disparaging remarks.

The family dog, which has to be shut up in the bathroom on account of wanting to bite pieces out of the packers.

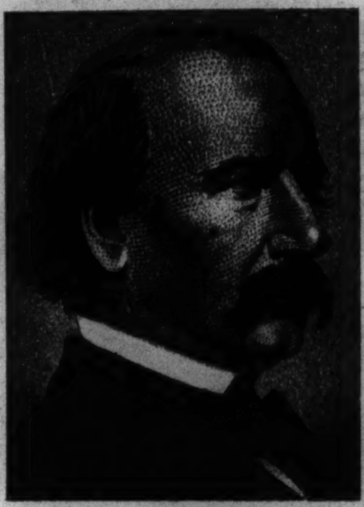
A week before, the moving van company sends its No. 1 glamour boy, the one with the biggest eyes and the sweetest smile, up to make an estimate. This has to do with cubic feet and Interstate Commerce Commission and causes the prospective clients such bewilderment and mental anguish that they all but decide to give up the move.

Surgery's Progress

CHICAGO'S active part in the development of surgery, and its own history as one of the world's leading medical centers, are brought to attention by the clinical congress of the American College of Surgeons, starting tomorrow.



1 Medical education in Chicago is celebrating a centennial charter jubilee along with the city, for in 1837 Dr. Daniel Brainard obtained a charter for the first medical educational institution in the northwest, Rush college.



2 Seventy-five years ago . . . a typical consultation scene just before an operation. H. Gervex's famous painting, hanging in the Luxembourg museum in Paris, depicts the crude environment of early surgery. No starched white gowns, no masks.

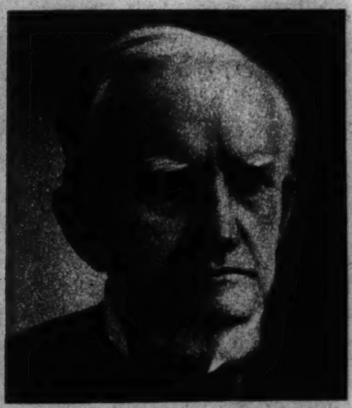
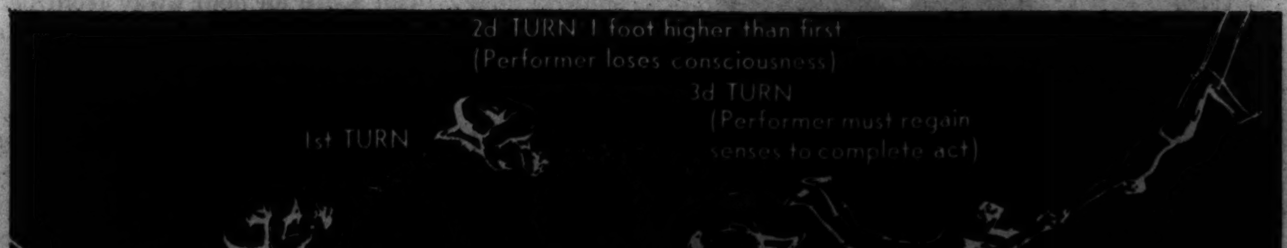
4 Today . . . this posed picture of a modern operation is said by medical men to be one of the best portrayals of today's exact science of surgery. Chicago now has five leading medical schools, eighty-eight hospitals, is headquarters for the American Medical association, the American College of Surgeons, and has the largest local medical society in the world.



3 But medicine was organizing, learning, even then. In 1847 the American Medical association was founded—fathered by Dr. Nathan S. Davis, above.

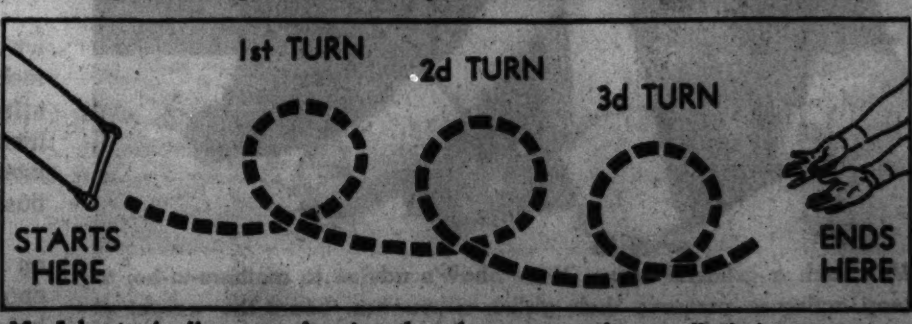
5 The late Dr. Franklin H. Martin of Chicago was the leading influence in the organization of the College of Surgeons, whose annual congress will bring 3,000 prominent surgeons to the city.

How IS an Aerial Somersault Performed?



The original illustration of Codona's triple somersault, indicating unintentionally that the performer's body whirled in a clockwise direction.

CLYDE A. JOHNSTON of Bloomington, Ill., questions the accuracy of a diagram in the Graphic Section of Sept. 19 showing how Codona, circus aerialist, made his triple somersault. Mr. Johnston says the spin should be shown as counterclockwise, not clockwise. The original was drawn primarily to show interesting facts about the stunt, with the dotted line giving the impression of whirling motion. The exact direction of that whirling was, erroneously, it seems, considered incidental to the picture's story.



Mr. Johnston's diagram, showing that the somersault actually is in a counterclockwise motion, the lower part of the performer's body leading.

That Girlish Silhouette Can Survive the Stork's Visit

By ELEANOR NANGLE

HAVING A BABY is no alibi these days for the loss of mamma's girlish figure. You've been robbed of that last hitherto perfect excuse for letting yourself go. The doctors say there's no reason for it; the beauty specialists say there's no reason for it—and some of the best of mothers prove there's no reason for it.

Take, for instance, Wini Shaw, the vivid brunette whose way with a torch tune made her queen of the night clubs and landed her a Warner Brothers contract. She isn't 30 yet. She's slim and willowy as a sapling, and she's the mother of three children! She's a bright star in the growing galaxy of women who maintain their girlish silhouettes in spite of childbearing.

Here's what the beautiful Wini has to say on the subject: "The trouble with so many young mothers-to-be is that they commit themselves to stupid pampering. They abandon whatever games and sports they may have been pursuing heretofore and go in for lolling about and being waited upon. O, yes, some of them may follow the doctor's orders to take a daily walk—but what a timid walk it turns out to be! No wonder, after the baby arrives, they have silhouette trouble. I swam and did everything right up to the last minute. So I didn't have to go through that after-childbirth figure worrying."

The women whose livelihood depends on the maintenance of their youthful appearance are, naturally enough, the most ardent advocates of the new theory that childbearing isn't necessarily figure destruction. They're the ones who exercise before and after the blessed event, who watch their diet, and who follow the doctor's orders meticulously. They're finding this sanity about silhouette a double blessing. They improve their looks and make their childbearing chore easier and safer.

Dixie Lee Crosby, wife of the crooning Bing, is no longer active in the films, but she is a figure in the most beauty-conscious center in the world for more than one reason. She was in the movies until her marriage and could be in them now if she wished. She's beautiful enough, talented enough—and slim enough, despite the fact that she has had three children, including twins. She's another outstanding example of modern belief that maternity and the matronly figure do not represent cause and effect.

Professional models, those glamor girls whose much-photographed faces and figures dramatize every advertised commodity under the sun, are firm in their belief that motherhood doesn't ravage beauty. Some of the most sought-after models, even the pencil-slim girls who wear slinky clothes for the fashion photographs, take off their makeup at night and tuck anywhere from one to four babies into their cribs.

Helen Frasik, who has an "A" rating in any Chicago photographic studio, has four children, though she's only 27. Her youngest is 2, her eldest not quite 7. She manages her own household, with the help of one maid, and watches her diet carefully, more with an eye to keeping healthy than losing weight. She is her own cook, and her food is naturally simple and healthful, since it is planned particularly for her children. Her life is so active she has no difficulty keeping slim. When she can spare an hour away from her household and the camera she goes for a horseback ride.

Many of the New York models are mothers, and the register of professional models in Chicago reads like a membership list of a parent-teachers' association. Isabel Stewart has a grown son; the beautiful Marie Kelly has two. Others who model consistently and who rock the cradle, too, include blonde Bunny Ryan, brunette Dorothy Temple, Kay Hibben, Angelita Harmes, Lucille McInerny, and Elsa Macintosh.

And the world is bountifully supplied with women other than movie stars and models whose bearing of children has not affected their slenderness of figure. These include many actresses of the stage, aerialists of the circus, equestriennes, teachers, business women, and housewives.

Babies, you see, don't leave their mark on the silhouette of the woman who cares enough about her figure to follow all the before-and-after do's and don'ts!

Helen Frasik, a slender and graceful professional model of Chicago, is the mother of four.

With such a graceful figure, Wini Shaw's advice to mothers-to-be, to keep active to preserve their girlish silhouettes, bears the weight of real authority. She's the mother of three.

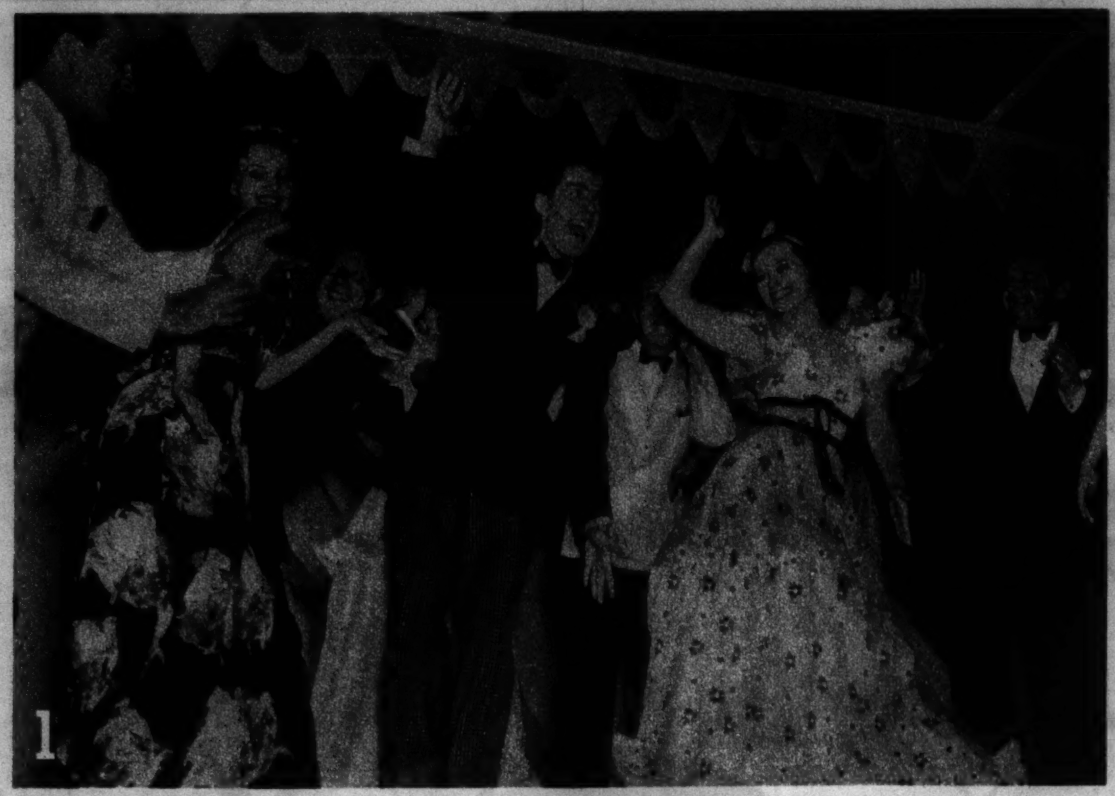
How to Do the Big Apple



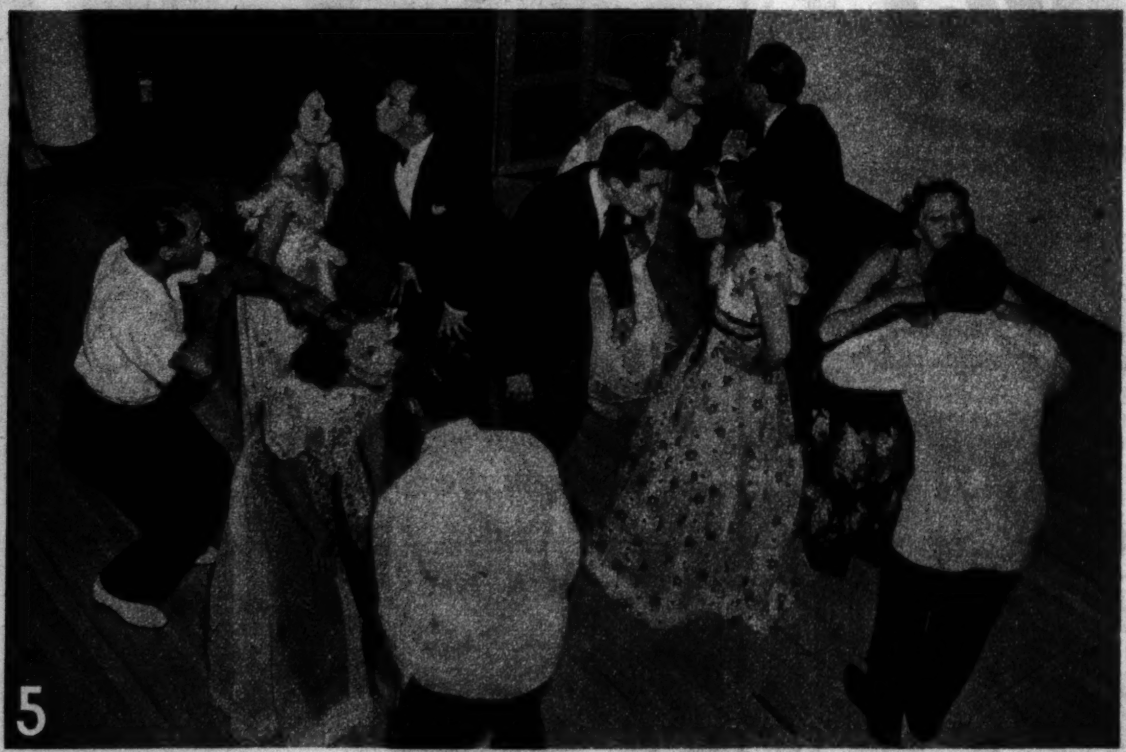
"Everybody Apple!" cries the caller. The couples clap hands and stamp to establish tempo.

"Swing and circle the town!" is the next call. Just to get started, the couples execute a shim-sham step with a hop.

"Susie one, Susie two, everybody Susie Q!" And this is the execution of the Susie Q.

"The navy's home, you're on your own, every man himself alone!" That brings each man in turn to the "core" of the Big Apple to shine in his fanciest routine.

"THE BIG APPLE" rollicked out of a southern negro night club on to the campus, got a college education, invaded the dance halls of the nation. Now it makes its screen debut in "Thrill of a Lifetime"; and in these stills from the movie Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs, and the Yacht Club Boys demonstrate the technique of it.



"No peckin', no neckin', everybody start a-peckin'." Here is revealed the technique of "peckin'."

"Come on, gals, off the shelf, every lady for herself." The girls, thus paged, trip to the center one by one for a solo turn.

"Goin' to town, grandma's town, every one can Charleston!" The couples respond to that call by doing the Charleston.

"Turn 'em loose, cook your goose!" And again every one comes to the core to polish off the floor alone.

EDWARD W. (EDDIE) MAHAN was a Harvard half back in three glittering years during which the Crimson lost only one game, that to Cornell in 1915. Camp later picked him as "undoubtedly one of the greatest players the game ever has known."

W. W. (PUDGE) HEFFELFINGER, who began playing football for Yale in '88, has been chosen for almost every all-time All-American team ever named. Walter Camp called him the greatest guard who ever played football. He now resides in Minneapolis.

They Would Have Been Roto Pictures In Their Day

TOM SHEVLIN played end on three famous Yale teams: In 1902 only a tie with Army soiled the slate; in 1904, only Army beat the Blue; in 1905, Old Eli won all games. In each of those three years Shevlin was named an All-American end.

HAMILTON FISH JR., now a member of congress from New York, first achieved fame as a Harvard tackle with a charge "like the recoil of a steel spring." In 1910 he was chosen by Walter Camp for an all-time All-American team.

JIM THORPE made football history at Carlisle, the federal Indian school at Carlisle, Pa. In 1911 he kicked four field goals in a game against Harvard. In 1912 he scored 26 touchdowns, kicked 37 extra points and three field goals.

Alkalize Excess Stomach Acids Almost Instantly the Phillips' Way

The fastest way to "alkalize" is to carry your alkalizer with you. That's what thousands do now that genuine Phillips' comes in tiny, peppermint flavored tablets — in a flat tin for pocket or purse. Then you are always ready.

Use it this way. Take 2 Phillips' tablets — equal in "alkalizing" effect to 2 teaspoonfuls of liquid Phillips' from the bottle. At once you feel "gas," nausea, "overcrowding" from hyper-acidity begin to ease. "Acid headaches," "acid breath," over-acid stomach are corrected at the source. This is the quick way to ease your own distress — avoid offense to others.

A WISE THING TO DO

WHEN you feel a cold coming on, the wise thing to do is to get to bed and rub "Ben-Gay" plentifully on chest and back and cover with an old gown or pajama top. My, how "Ben-Gay" will help break up that congestion and open the air passages—let you breathe more comfortably! Stay in bed if you can, and repeat daily. Nobody knows the cure for a cold, but this will greatly shorten the duration and keep you comfortable in the meantime. This 40-year-old formula of Dr. Jules Bengué, of Paris, has worked wonders for millions. New thousands turn to it daily. Be sure to ask for and get Baume "Ben-Gay."

Baume "Ben-Gay" gives marvelous relief, too, for rheumatic pains, backache, neuralgia, headache, stiff sore muscles.
